Excellent for theory

"The author hopes that this book 'may be of service to somebody in pointing out what a house is really for and what it should express.' In it he has attempted 'to express simply the principles of colour and form harmony in such a way that any one, who desires to, may express with some degree of confidence his individual ideas.' Part 1 of the book, opening with an introduction on 'When, where and how to decorate,' is devoted to a consideration of these principles. Part 2 takes up the historic art periods. Part 3 is devoted to the modern house. The illustrations chosen are admirably suited to the author's purpose. The book is indexed." Book rev. digest

Evolution of furniture; illus. by photographs of period houses and their furniture. Scribner 1939 118p illus $5 749

1 Architecture—History 2 Decoration and ornament 3 Furniture [39-18190]

"The history of furniture, studied in terms of its evolution, becomes almost an epitome of history itself. It is such that Lucretia Eddy Cotchett has written. There is nothing fanciful or involved about it. She has stuck to her subject. But in the very act of making that subject plain she has given her readers a summary of the beginnings of Gothic architecture and a picture of medieval life; has followed the course and touched upon the significance of the Italian Renaissance and then of the Renaissance in France and in England." Making a water-colour. Studio 1933 71p illus (How to do it ser.) $4.50 751

1 Water color painting 2 Water colors [33-27199]

"Should be of value and inspiration to the amateur. It is boldly modern in tone. The implements of the art, and the various stages of water color procedure, are simply described and illustrated with admirable photographs. . . There are also sixteen superb reproductions of famous water color masterpieces from the eighteenth century to now. They include Girtin, Turner, Cotman, Peter De Wint, Sargent, McBey, Brangwyn. Each one is analyzed and commented on by Mr. Ennis. It is a beautiful book." Sat rev. of lit.

Step-ladder to painting. Greenberg 1939 293p illus $2.50 751

1 Painting—Technique 39-29493

"Simply written guide for the beginning painter, which includes considerations of the use of oil and water color, problems of composition, and analyses of famous pictures. The book, written by an English painter, has been edited and adapted for American users by Jacob Getlar Smith. Illustrated with drawings and photographic plates." Book rev. digest

"While this book is primarily intended for beginners in the craft of painting, it will also be of use and interest to all professional and amateur students of painting, to teachers and to those who do not paint but want to know something of painting technique. The author is one of the best known modern painters in England." School arts magazine

Guptill, Arthur Leighton, 1891-
Color in sketching and rendering; with introduction by J. F. Yewell. Reinhold 1935 348,xxiv p illus $10 751

1 Architectural drawing 2 Color 3 Landscape painting 4 Water color painting 36-111

"An exhaustive treatise on the practical uses of color. Part 1 deals with the elements of water color painting, part 2 with architectural rendering in color. There are over 250 illustrations mostly in color, reproductions of the works of well-known artists. Altho expensive, it has been found very valuable in many schools

Hale, Gardner, 1894-1931
Fresco painting; with additional chapters prepared from Mr Hale's notes by Shaemas O'Sheel and a preface by J. C. Orozco. Rudge 1933 69p illus $2.50 751

1 Mural painting and decoration 33-32351

"The technique of fresco is here explained in practical detail—the wall, the plaster, colors and grinding, the cartoon, brushes and tools, painting, retouching, use of gold, and methods of removing frescoes for transportation. There is a chapter on the history of fresco, and on its future prospects in the United States as a medium for direct wall decoration and as to its possibilty of stimulating other forces in painting. There are 11 illustrations, including three of Mr. Hale's designs and one by José Clemente Orozco, Mexican fresco painter, who wrote the book's preface." Christian science monitor

The author "has given the essentials of what has wrongly been called a lost art and has translated into simple, practical language the teachings of the famous Cennino Cennini. . . But he explains that art from the point of view of a practising artist, instead of from the point of view of an antiquarian." Sat rev. of lit.

Notes on the technique of painting; with a preface by Sir William Rothenstein. Oxford 1935 340p illus $3.75 751

1 Artists' materials 2 Painting—Technique 34-12260

A treatment of materials, paints, and methods, with a 31-page bibliography and a glossary

"To write an amusing book about technical materials is something of a feat, but Mr. Hiler has done it, without prejudice to practical value. Though his book is, of necessity, primarily for reference, one is tempted to go on reading it for entertainment. . . Naturally the bulk of the book is concerned with colours and pigments; and Mr. Hiler's treatment of the subject is both exhaustive and witty." Times (London) lit. sup.

Hilaire Hiler's "Painter's pocket-book of methods and materials (Harcourt 1937 250p $2) is a condensation and rearrangement of the earlier book

1 Christian art and symbolism 2 Jesus Christ—Art 31-31197

First edition 1916. A few corrections and changes have been made, especially in the addresses of publishers of pictures, and seven new plates printed on both sides have been added

"A study of the great pictures portraying the life of Christ 'to discover their spiritual values.' About 1227 pictures are analyzed and when possible their reproductions are given. Brief biographies of the artists are to be found at the end. A list of cheap reproductions of the pictures, published by eleven picture firms, is given, arranged in biographical sequence. Specially useful for ministers, Sunday-school teachers and study clubs." Wis. bul.

Goldsmith, Elizabeth Edwards, 1860-

Ancient pagan symbols. . . Putnam 1929 xxxvii,220p illus $3 755

1 Art and mythology 2 Mythology 3 Symbolism 29-7583

"The brief and compact account given by Miss Goldsmith of the numerous symbols with which art, life and religion have made us familiar is extremely valuable." Boston Transcript

"This well-illustrated little book should prove useful, though its information is not always as austere and scientific as is desirable in a work of reference. The author is inclined to be lyrical in expression and emotional in thought. . . Allowing however, for this fault, the book has many merits. The author is widely read, and in a somewhat desultory way has covered a wide field." New statesman

1 Christian art and symbolism 11-10321

of several pages and indexes to illustrations and texts." Book rev. digest

"The author begins with trees as painted by the masters from Bellini to Alfred East and Arthur Rackham. He then discusses and illustrates to perfection the appearance of trees in nature—as seen against the sky, as balanced, as affected by environment, prevailing wind, accident, old age. Every detail—branch, twig, bud, leaf, flower, fruit—is treated from the point of view of the lover of trees who sees with the informal eye of a trained artist." School arts magazine

‡ Great painters in relation to the European tradition. . . Harcourt 1927 xxiii,478p illus $5 759

1 Painters 2 Painting—History 27-27514

The author's "intention has been, while throwing emphasis on the great periods, 'to illustrate the continuity of what may be called the European tradition in painting' . . . In the periods described—the Renaissance, great seventeenth century painting, eighteenth century portraiture and landscape work in England, and the modern movements, chiefly in France—a number of chapters are given to individual geniuses, others to groups or schools." Boston

"The emphasis is always on the painting, biographical details being relegated to an appendix. For the reader who knows anything of pictures, is a delightful book. [Bibliographies]" Wis. bul.

Art in painting. . . 3d ed rev and enl Harcourt 1937 xx,522p illus $6 759

1 Painting 2 Painting—History 37-27276

A scholarly work intended for those who know something about art. Illustrated with 121 productions of paintings. In the third edition the material has been reorganized and much of it has been rewritten in the light of new information and special studies. Sixty-two of the reproductions are new to this edition

"The general account of esthetic principles with which the book opens . . . is followed by a specific statement of these principles in the field of plastic art. The last two-thirds of the book applies these principles to the more important schools in painting, past and present. . . . In conclusion, there is an analysis of more than a hundred paintings." Landmarks in nineteenth-century painting. Chatto 1927 214p illus 5s 759

1 Painting—History 27-27683

"In his tour of nineteenth-century painting, largely French, Clive Bell is concerned with artists 'in relation to other artists, in relation to movements, in relation to their age,' rather than as authors of particular works of art. His book deals with Ingres, David, Constable, Géricault, Delacroix, Millet, Corot, Guys, Turner, the Pre-Raphaelites, Daumier, Manet, Monet, Seurat and Divisionism and the end of Impressionism." Book rev. digest

"It is rather disappointing that Mr Bell stops short of Cézanne, whom he regards as the point of departure of Post-Impressionism and the new century; but this book, short as it is, will give anyone who is not a learned amateur of painting furiously, and perhaps aggressively, to think." Nation and Athenaeum

Divided into two parts: pt. 1 General, dealing with the theoretical aspect of painting; pt. 2 Particular, dealing with the historical. The author says that there are passages in the first part of the book that are not simple. Contains plates in color as well as in black and white. Bibliography: pref. p7

"Comprises not only a general introduction to the theory of art and to the art of looking at pictures, but a general outline of painting in Europe from Cimabue to Picasso. . . She writes clearly and interestingly, explains and criticizes with intelligence and lucidity, and does not trouble the head of her reader with a greater number of names and dates than are necessary for following her as she traces the thread of great painting through different schools and in different countries. . . Miss Bulley's writing is founded on a scholarly knowledge of her subject, moreover she has a discriminating enthusiasm, and it is this that makes her book not only informative but readable." Beaux, Cecilia, 1863-
Background with figures; autobiography. Houghton 1930 355p illus $5 759.1

1 Artists — Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 30-32610

"In an autobiography as sensitive and restrained as her portraits, America's most distinguished woman painter tells the story of a full and interesting life—her girlhood in Philadelphia, study there with William Sartain and Thomas Eakins, later student days in Paris, friendships with Saint Gaudens, Sargent, and the Gilders and the commission which brought her the privilege of painting war portraits of Clemenceau, Cardinal Mercier and Admiral Beatty." Book rev. digest

"This delightful book of reminiscences bears out the belief that painters are apt to write well. Background with Figures contains much critical comment on painters and on methods and ideals. But Miss Beaux's book is chiefly rich as the personal narrative of a woman both sensitive and alert who lived in a world which has disappeared." Outlook

Benton, Thomas Hart, 1889-
An artist in America; with sixty-four illus. in two colors. McBride 1937 276p illus $3.75 759.1

37-28741

Also available in the Halcyon house edition from Blue ribbon bks. at $1.49

"While cast in the form of autobiography, much of Mr. Benton's book has to do with the America he discovered when he turned his back on Europe and the east and set out to get acquainted with his native land. Before this come his boyhood in Missouri, art student days in Chicago, New York and Paris, and the steps by which he arrived at an art which is both his own and American. The life he describes is rough, vulgar and often degraded. He is frank about himself to a degree that will offend some readers. But his book makes clear what he is getting at in his painting." 1 Artists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 39-27776

The autobiography of a famous American artist, some of whose murals are to be found in the Department of Justice building in Washington. Illustrated with reproductions of the author's work

"Talk about art in the book is unpretentious, individual, and unstressed. The emphasis of 'An American Artist's Story' is on the matter and process of living. While it will be read for its critical and even for its historical values it remains what it is called, a story—richly spread, lively, substantial." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

17-26890

"Informal and refreshing biography of the famous American landscape artist, by his son, also a well known artist. The critical side is not neglected, but the feature of the book which will ensure for it a wide circle of readers is the wealth of anecdote revealing an eccentric but lovable personality. There are thirty-seven reproductions of paintings." Cleveland

29-25172

"As nearly as possible, the author allows this great illustrator to tell his story in his own words. The letters are as full of character as he was himself. Delightful sketches add interest to the letters." Providence

"Though the material might better have been condensed, these two volumes have considerable charm and not a little substance. The narrative of Pennell's early life is refreshing, and through the rest, especially in Pennell's own letters, there is a sustaining spirit. Well chosen reproductions of Pennell's lithographs and etchings and of portraits of Pennell are sprinkled through the volumes." Springfield Republican

27-14260

"This story of John Sargent and his eminently successful career is filled with reminiscent anecdotes of the painter and his friends and eked out with quotations from his letters. It is illustrated with many reproductions of his work. A memoir by Vernon Lee, childhood friend of the artist, concludes the biography, to which is added a chronological list of Sargent's paintings with their present whereabouts." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Charteris had a difficult task set him when he undertook to write the biography of a painter to whom scarcely anything ever happened that was not agreeable. In short, he had nothing to write about but painting and the painter; and yet his book is continuously interesting." Spectator

"Written to publish new information gleaned from original sources, this is a biography of the man rather than a critique of his work." Pittsburgh

"The handling of the material is very workmanlike, and a vivid picture of the great portraitist who remained all his life a spoiled boy gradually emerges. It is a valuable contribution to a theme that seemed exhausted. All serious students of Gilbert Stuart and his art must consult it." Sat. rev. of lit.

Reflections on British painting. Macmillan 1934 147p illus $2.50 759.2
1 Painting, British 34-20766

The book is made up of two lectures delivered to the members of the National Art Collections Fund in connection with the exhibition of British art at Burlington House in January, 1934. The author gives his opinions of the paintings of Lely, Hogarth, Wilson, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Morland, Blake, Lawrence, Wilkie, Bonington, Crome, Turner, Constable and others

"Mr. Fry contrives to write of English painting almost as though it were a newly discovered art, as if Gainsborough and Reynolds were some curious primitives whose works had never been properly examined before. . . But his opinions about particular painters are never dulled by old disputes; on the contrary, they emerge with singular freshness." Times (London) lit. sup

"This is the first book on English painting to deal with the whole period from the Lindisfarne Gospels of the seventh century to the many schools of the present day. Most space is devoted to the great succession of landscape painters in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, whose work is England's most notable contribution to art. . . The book is liberally illustrated and indexed and provided with a bibliography." Book rev. digest

The history of British painting told thru a discussion of its leading representatives from pre-Norman times to the present. "The story of the personality and circumstances of the artist, his upbringing, friendships, tastes and fortunes, is not only of great interest in itself but helps us to understand and appreciate his achievement. . . . I have written more about the lives of the painters and the general characteristics of their art than about their individual works." Preface

"Autobiography of an English artist, well-known for her pictures of circus life. Beginning with the poverty-stricken childhood in northern England she describes vividly the years of her rise to prominence, her studies in England and on the continent, her happy marriage, her trip to America where she was one of the two European representatives for the Carnegie Institute exhibit, and her later years as an acknowledged success. The book is illustrated with many reproductions of the author's work." Book rev. digest

"What Dame Laura Knight stands for is clearly written in this book, and he will be a dull reader who does not feel as he turns the last page that he has not only followed the varying fortunes of a remarkable artist but has also watched the development and gradual unfolding of a great personality. English edition has title: Time was

"Ellen Terry, his early idol, and Sarah Bernhardt figure largely in these fascinating reminiscences of an English artist, but the pages are crowded with other painters, actors, and authors of whom Mr. Robertson writes lightly and often humorously—among them Irving, Whistler, Sargent, Burne-Jones, Ada Rehan, Oscar Wilde, and Robert Browning." Pittsburgh

Mr. Graham Robertson's charming, modest and attractive book is full of lovely figures, strange figures, great figures, but it is to the chapters about Ellen Terry that the book owes its unusual fascination. . . Mr. Robertson has known many of the most amusing people of his day. He writes of them all with judgment, and without malice, in a way refreshingly free from the key-hole type of recollection grown too fashionable of late years. That the pages about Ellen Terry have a light not found elsewhere in the book is only what her friends would expect." New statesman and Nation

"The chief distinction of [this] biography of the Rossettis and their circle, by Frances Winwar, lies in the rare combination of first-rate scholarship and the ability to write well. Without being a 'romanticized biography,' the book reads like a novel. Miss Winwar succeeded in capturing the youthful glow and fervor, and the peculiar charm, of the early Pre-Raphaelites." Boston

"Pursuing a laboratory method that is postulated upon the close relation between method and art, the authors of this exhaustive study of Matisse have produced a work that is of large usefulness in its clear statement of fundamentals of design. In thus tying up a specific painter with the whole field of creative art on what might be called its decorative side, they placed their subject in perspective with the modernist movement." Lautrec, "born of one of the most ancient aristocracies of France, crippled by an accident as a child, was a dwarf of misshapen physique and bore an enigmatic reputation. . . But reading between the lines of this savory and disconcerting biography we find in the man not only fine courage to rise above physical wretchedness, but the keenest assurance and conscience in his art." Book-of-the-month club news

"Nothing has escaped him and for his industry, integrity and orderliness of presentation he deserves the highest praise. There is room in the art libraries for a more extended analysis of the work of Toulouse-Lautrec, but so far as the man and his environment are concerned, Mr. Mack has written the definitive record." "From the confusing mass of modernist painters in France M. Raynal has selected fifty 'who have sought to enrich the technic of their art and realize new conceptions of painting.' An introductory essay subdivides the school minutely, so elaborately indeed that it is evident that there is no coherent school at all, but merely so many diverging types of revolt against the Renaissance dogma of art as imitation of nature. There follows an alphabetical catalogue with biographical notices of the painters and citations from their sayings or writings about their ideals of work. This feature is very convenient for reference and introduces a number of interesting painters who are unknown or nearly so even to the up-to-date American amateur. At the end are about one hundred good half-tone cuts, generally two for each artist, alphabetically presented." Sat. rev. of lit.

"A very able treatment of Dutch art from 1580 to 1700. Beginning with the great pageants of the sixteenth century and their influence upon art, the author proceeds to the popular art of painters who were national in feeling, like Frans Hals, to Rembrandt, who was the forerunner of the nineteenth century romantic movement, and finally to Vermeer, whose leanings towards the architectural made him the herald of the modern movement of our own day." Providence
The author's "examination of the historical backgrounds of Rembrandt and Vermeer is remarkably clear and logical, and he has taken extraordinary pains and shows great acuteness in tracing relationships between one artist and another." Times (London) lit. sup.

Portrait of America; with an explanatory text by B. D. Wolfe. 2d ed Covici 1937 231p illus $3.75 759.972

1 Mural painting and decoration 2 U.S.—Social conditions 34-13433

Contains 60 reproductions of Rivera murals, and an explanatory text by Bertram W. Wolfe

"The content of Rivera's art is not directed toward representation as such, but toward the liberation of the working classes and the formation of a world Communist state. The purpose of his art is to promote an ideal, not to present the phenomena of life. . . For such reasons, Rivera's paintings cannot be regarded as a realistic portrait of America. At home the Mexican was an artist in every sense of the word; in the United States he has sold his talents to an international theory. But in the process he has done more than that: he has made art a living issue and has brought it forcefully before the public." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

1 Music in the home 35-4901

"What music can mean to a circle of family and friends is delightfully told in this account reprinted from the 'Atlantic.'" Wis. bul.

"From first page to last the book is gay and spirited, and evidently every sentence in it is the outcome of high conviction for which the author would willingly be led to the stake. . . The book can be enjoyed as much by non-musical readers as by those who are amateur devotees." N.Y. Times

Copland, Aaron, 1900-
‡ What to listen for in music. McGraw 1939 281p (Whittlesey house publications) $2.50 780

1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation (W) 39-27073

Discusses how to listen to music from the composer's point of view. The author first treats of the creative process and the elements of musical anatomy—rhythm, melody, simple harmonic structure. He then gives an explanation of the principal musical forms—simple dance forms, the fugue, the variation, the sonata, the symphony, the symphonic poem, the opera. With musical illustrations

"He is a composer. He writes about music from the inside. He is so familiar with the creative process in music that he is not impressed by it; and he knows his subject so thoroughly that he can be simple about it." Yale review

Dickinson, Edward Fowler, 1853-
Education of a music lover; a book for those who study or teach the art of listening. Scribner 1911 293p $2 780

1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 2 Music—Study and teaching 11-6477

"The essays which compose the volume have been previously published in the 'Musician.' They deal with a variety of phases of knowledge necessary to the proper appreciation of music, namely, 'The problem of form,' 'Beauty of harmony,' 'Technique of the singer,' 'Expression,' 'History and biography,' and 'The new musical education.' Professor Dickinson advises the systematic cultivation in our schools of the esthetic taste for good music." Review of reviews

A reprint of book first published 1935 by Doubleday under title: Philip Hale's Boston symphony programme notes

A selection from notes written during 32 years

Mr Hale's "admirers might justly ask for a little larger proportion of his most characteristic output, which is not technical analysis, something the conservatory student or the dry-as-dust pedant can do after a fashion. But there is enough here to give much satisfaction and enjoyment, provocation to thought if not to antagonism, stimulation that radiated from Mr. Hale as he lived. Mr. Gilman's introduction is the warmly appreciative tribute of a colleague." N.Y. Times

Mason, Daniel Gregory, 1873-

Appreciation of music. Gray 1907-1921 5v ea $2 780

1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation

A series of volumes which furnish to the listener a simple and practical guide to musical appreciation

Volume 1, "Appreciation of music" by T. W. Surette and D. G. Mason (1907) is an account of the evolution of musical art from the primitive folk-song up to the symphony of Beethoven. The steps of this development are illustrated by short examples in the text and a "Supplementary volume of musical illustrations" (Gray 1907 $1.50)

Volume 2, "Great modern composers" by Mason (1916) takes up the study at the death of Beethoven and carries it through the most important romantic composers and composers of program music down to the present day. Biographical sections were prepared by M. L. Mason

Volume 3, "Short studies of great masterpieces" by Mason (1918) analyzes 12 compositions by 11 modern composers. This is not for the neophyte

Volume 4, "Music as a humanity, and other essays" by Mason (1921) contains essays reprinted from various magazines

Volume 5, "Guide to music for beginners and others" by Mason (1910) is an exposition of the fundamentals of music—rhythm, phrase, key, etc.—from the standpoint of the appreciative listener who has no technical knowledge of music. It has been published also under titles: "Child's guide to music" and "Student's guide to music"

"Eight essays by a well known American composer and music critic, several of which have appeared in 'American Mercury,' 'Harper's,' and other periodicals. They deal entertainingly with the problems of present-day music. The essays are followed by papers on general topics, particularly rhythm, with five on Beethoven." Bkl.

"The manner of Mr. Mason's writing is always vivacious and entertaining; he has a beautiful soundness and sanity, and his direction is always away from the obvious and literal, towards spontaneity and spirit. Whether or not one stands shoulder to shoulder with him in so sweeping a denunciation of the modernists, at least one must acknowledge the book as fascinating reading." Boston Transcript

"Brief biographical essays of Viennese composers from Gluck to Lehar with some background of political history." Chicago

"While the plan is laudable, the execution still falls short of standards established in other fields of the history of art. . . The bibliography alone will convince the initiated that this book was put together in haste. Yet with all its faults, 'Musical Vienna' may prove helpful and informative to a goodly number of people accustomed to the narrow field of musical appreciation, for it will teach them that music is a part of our cultural life, and not a pastime to be indulged in after dinner." First edition appeared in 1893 under title: "The art of music." Has been frequently reprinted. In this edition a survey, 1893-1929, and two chapters "The question of key," and "Chaos or criticism," have been added by the editor

This is not a chronological account of the lives of musicians, but a history of the development of musical form and expression from the most primitive to modern tendencies. Biographical details are omitted, although the latter part of the book is largely concerned with the contributions of the great musicians to musical progress

First edition 1928. Revised in the light of later information, and some errors in fact corrected

"In his life of Bach Dr. Terry has refrained from attempting an appreciation of the composer's music and has kept strictly to a 'record of Bach's career.' But that career, pieced together with the aid of every available scrap of material, becomes in Dr. Terry's hands an extraordinarily vivid and human tale. Dr. Terry, naturally, utilized what discoveries have been made by Bach investigators since Spitta. It is the result of his own researches, however, that has enabled him to bring out more clearly the contour of Bach's life and throw new light on Bach's family and ancestors." Sat. rev. of lit.

"As a work of reference the book will be invaluable: there is no fact or incident connected with Bach which Mr. Terry has not exhaustively investigated, even its most trivial details." Nation and Athenaeum

A small book giving "detailed and precise information about the various classes into which Bach's works fall and about the most important compositions in the various classes. While it is not primarily biographical—see Terry's 'Bach: A Biography' for the full account of his life—it makes clear the relation of the works to the various phases of the composer's experience. . . A serviceable guide to that more deliberate and continued study which the works of this master of masters so eminently deserve and so richly reward." Christian century

"A compact study of the master's personality, together with discriminating analyses of some of his main works. But the value of the book is, to a large extent, in its vivid presentation of the historical period as reflected in Beethoven's music." Boston

"Translation aside, M. Herriot's substantial and compact volume makes about as satisfactory a Beethoven handbook as one could ask for. It is scholarly, thorough and comprehensive. The biographical facts are fully and clearly presented; the picture of the composer as a man is penetrating, sane and sympathetic; of musical criticism there is enough to suit the author's purpose, and it is always acute and carefully considered." 1 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (W) 38-27737

Translated from the German by Margaret Ludwig. Published in England under title: Wings of song

The author, who made her debut on the Metropolitan opera stage in 1934, describes in her autobiography the poor, but happy home of her childhood, her early struggles and her success as an opera singer in Europe and America

"This autobiography of a famous singer is also the unaffected self-portrait of a high-spirited, sympathetic, genuinely lovable human being." N Y. Times

Wagenknecht, Edward Charles, 1900- Jenny Lind. Houghton 1931 230p illus o.p. 1939 780.92

31-28224

"A penetrating, satisfactory study of the 'Swedish nightingale' as artist and woman. With religion and love of home and children dominating her art, her biographer shows how easy it was for her to abandon her career at its height." Pittsburgh

"The author does his task responsibly, and is the more to be commended because he does not pretend to have found any magic key to a true spiritual interpretation. He also discusses stage careers in general. . . The wide variety of his references is also a point of merit, since it helps to vitalize the picture of Jenny Lind in relation to her age." "Certain aspects of Liszt's life and art are studied without strict adherence to chronological sequence. The result, though it falls short of the author's original plan for an exhaustive biography, is admirable and the book gives a vivid impression of this many-sided musical genius, his career and the adulation which he received." 1 Agoult, Marie Catherine Sophie (de Flavigny) comtesse d', 1805-1876 35-27089

A psychological study of Liszt the man, not the musician. The author "is thoroughly opposed to 'thesis' biography; yet he himself works this to the exclusion of other matters, such as Liszt's music and his friendships with the great men of his time. But it must be borne in mind that he intended to write only about Liszt the man and to correct the false impression left by earlier biographers. It remains for a future biographer to synthesize in a well-rounded manner the material now made available. The present volume is copiously documented and well illustrated." Springfield Republican

"Marcia Davenport concludes the foreword to her life of Mozart with the statement that she has written 'neither a romance nor a textbook.' In this she is right. Hers is a carefully 'documented' account of one of the most extraordinary and most persistently misrepresented personalities of genius; she has accomplished her difficult and delicate task without the obligatory array of footnotes, and without allowing her keen and sympathetic imagination to get out of hand. It is the 'new biography' applied to a subject eminently calling for just such a treatment." Sat. rev. of lit.

"Both before and since the death of Giacomo Puccini several biographies of him had been written. Now, ten years after his death, Richard Specht, a German with experience and competence in the writing of the lives of musicians, puts forth this book of mingled biography and criticism. . . It is candid and open-minded; thoroughly sympathetic and appreciative of the personal and national characteristics of Puccini's art. . . It is written with a warm appreciation, though it is by no means a work of blind partisanship, and will deeply interest the many, who have Puccini's operas near their hearts." N.Y. Times

"A book, which, if not so full as originally planned, nevertheless covers the whole of the biographical field, and covers it more fully, and more generally interestingly, than any other work in our language that we know. Professor Niecks gives us abundant details of every period of Schumann's career; but had he been able personally to complete the book, he would no doubt have modified the considerable discursiveness and disproportion, which at times rather worry the reader—who cannot, however, fail to realize all through a fine and sensitive enthusiasm for Schumann and everything about him, and none the less fine and sensitive for being always soberly expressed." The book "relates the aesthetic history of the waltz dynasty to the social and even the political background of Austria and, indeed, in a measure to conditions in every country, from Russia to the United States, in which a Strauss appeared as conductor. . . It tells in detail of the rise and membership of a musical kindred and of the length and nature of the influence exerted by them." Introduction

"This new book about the Strauss dynasty steps rightly into a vacant place that has long waited for it. If it is somewhat ponderous in approach and if it stresses the social rather than the more human aspects of the Strauss geniuses, it nevertheless is altogether illuminating and altogether valuable. It also has that wrenching bitter-sweet perfume of the Vienna that has gone." Sat. rev. of lit.

"Correspondence never before published of the neurotic composer and the eccentric rich widow who supported Tchaikowsky, depended on him emotionally, and yet never met him. The connecting biographical material describes Tchaikowsky as a self-centered man, ashamed of his homosexuality and his inability to adjust himself to normal life, but apparently willing to be subsidized by his admirer, Madame von Meck. Written in an unsentimental, candid manner, tempered with good taste." Bkl.

" 'Beloved Friend' is a strange and fascinating 'true story.' It is also a well documented record of a genius' life. And it is written with the true delicacy of feeling for music that only a fine musician can have." Chicago Daily Tribune

"Though appealing primarily to the musical reader, this huge volume is not only intensely interesting as the revelation of a remarkable personality, but its pages are charged with romantic interest of that strange quality peculiar to the works of the great Russian novelists. The central and governing episode of Tschaikovsky's life—his relations with the generous, eccentric widow who came to his rescue at the nadir of his fortunes and gave him a free life, relieved from the anxiety of the uncongenial drudging—is perhaps the most extraordinary incident in the entire annals of artistic patronage." "The author has brought to his book not only infinite patience in fruitful research, but the sort of affectionate veneration which is necessary to instil real life into any biographical study. The book is not a 'brilliant performance,' is not bedecked with purple patches calculated to hide a substratum of dulness, it is not colored by prejudice. It is an honest account of the life and works of one of the most honest artists that ever lived, a man to whom pose—personal or artistic—was impossible." Sat. rev. of lit.

1 Opera—Stories, plots, etc. 35-27038

Reprint of the original 3 volume edition published by Knopf 1928-30, of which v 1 and 3 are still available at $3.50 each
Contents: v 1 Richard Wagner; v2 Mozart to Thomas; v3 Verdi to Puccini
The author tells the story of each opera combined with a descriptive analysis of the music. He writes for the ordinary music-lover who has neither time nor opportunity nor aptitude to study scores and musical history and biography for himself. The "story" comprises not only the plot, but also something of its origin and the circumstances surrounding the composition and presentation of the opera. In spite of drawbacks, this book is a full and useful guide. Adapted from Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"That Caruso's marvelous singing was due less to the perfection of his vocal organs than to his qualifications for the natural placement of his voice is the author's contention and point of departure. Another contention is that the art of good singing is at present fast deteriorating. The aim of the book is, accordingly, to lay down the new scientific principles of the mechanism of voice production with suggestions for a thorough reconstruction of voice culture. The author . . . was Caruso's medical as well as vocal adviser. Among the illustrations are many anatomical plates both in color and in black and white and X-ray photographs showing the position of the organs in vowel production, also facsimile letters, by Caruso and others, endorsing the author's methods. 1 Negro minstrels 28-15892
"There is a sketch of black face minstrelsy in America, many specimens of the minstrels' dialogue and jokes, the words and music of some of their songs, and a complete specimen minstrel show. The illuminating illustrations are from photographs, prints and drawings." Cleveland
"Although it is by no means a formal or a comprehensive historical account of the inception and progress of negro minstrelsy, much more of a picturesque nature may be gained from the pages of 'Gentlemen be seated' than if it were. Its very title is in no small degree a triumph." Boston Transcript

Wittke, Carl, 1892-
Tambo and bones; a history of the American minstrel stage. Duke univ. press 1930 269p $2.50 791.1
1 Negro minstrels 31-2026
"Any reader who shares the author's affectionate memories of 'the burnt cork semi-circle' will enjoy this little book. The last chapter gives brief biographies of famous minstrels." Pittsburgh
"In 'Tambo and Bones' we have a thorough piece of research and a comprehensive survey made in a field that has heretofore been rather inadequately worked. The subject of the book is worthy of the scholarly care that Mr. Wittke has devoted to it." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

791.3 Circuses

Two additional books on the circus which are very readable, tho not available, 1939, are:

1 Circus 32-9230

"An ample, comprehensive volume, perhaps the first to give the complete story of the circus, as it has developed in this country from its European stem, with accuracy and sufficient detail. It is written in lively, entertaining style, as one would expect from the pen of a man who has held the job of interesting the public in circus attractions. It is crammed with anecdotes, and the circus slang in which the author frequently indulges is picturesque." N.Y. Times

Rise of the American film; a critical history. Harcourt 1939 xx,585p illus $4.50 791.4

1 Moving pictures (W) 39-32345

The author traces the film from its commercial beginnings in 1896 to the present time, investigating and evaluating it as an industry, as an artistic medium, and as a social force. Contains a bibliography, picture, name and general indexes

"It is not possible in a short review to do this book justice. One may object to certain estimates of personalities or certain evaluations of achievements, one may regret that there is no special survey of movie acting or movie criticism in what is otherwise so complete a work, but the important fact is that we have here a comprehensive, up-to-date history of the movies which sets a very high standard . . . It is to be highly recommended to movie worker and moviegoer alike." Nation

Ackley, Mrs Edith Flack
Marionettes; easy to make! fun to use! With forty-one black and white drawings by Marjorie Flack. Stokes 1929 115p front $2.50 791.5
1 Puppet plays 29-18474
" 'Marionettes' is distinctive in that the puppets she describes are made of cloth. Mrs. Ackley has tucked paper patterns of the dolls in a pocket inside the book's back cover and gives many drawings and diagrams, also suggestions for marionette programs and five simple plays with good directions for giving performances. The author has used marionettes considerably in camp work, and the cloth variety has proved easy for girls to make and fun for both boys and girls to use." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Bufano, Remo, 1894-
Be a puppet showman. Appleton-Century 1933 168p illus $2.50 791.5
1 Puppet plays 33-8096
A "book for young readers, which explains the construction and working of both the marionettes and the theater in which to produce the plays. There is also an historical sketch of puppets in many lands. Diagrams and illustrations make the work easily understood by the amateur." Book rev. digest

Ficklen, Mrs Bessie (Alexander)
Handbook of fist puppets; with eight reproductions from photographs and numerous line drawings by Julie Brown. Stokes 1935 329p illus $2 791.5
1 Puppet plays 35-4894
"This manual contrasts and compares fist puppets and marionettes, and discusses fist puppets historically and practically. The author tells how to make the puppets of wood, sawdust, papier-mâché, cement, paper and paste; how to devise costumes, scenery, theaters; how to act simple puppet scenes; and how to produce more complicated plays. There are three plays for fist puppets, and a bibliography." Book rev. digest
"This is by no means the first book on the subject offered to young people; it must stand comparison with books intended for experts, as its audience will not be confined to children. It will stand its ground because it goes into its subject more thoroughly than beginners' books and is yet simple enough to start a beginner, also the direct and conversational style allures and leads the way." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

McIsaac, Frederick John, 1886-
* Tony Sarg marionette book . . . with two plays for home-made marionettes, by Anne Stoddard. Viking 1921 57p illus $1 791.5

Published in England under title: Marionettes and how to make them
"This little book tells about Mr Sarg's experiences with marionettes since he first experimented with them in his London studio. Text and illustrations by Mr Sarg himself, show how the puppets are made and manipulated and how the stage looks behind the scenes. A chapter is devoted to puppet play in history. The book, which is designed especially for children, gives complete instructions for putting on shows at home, for making and lighting the tiny stage and managing the scenery. Two fairy plays by Anne Stoddard, written especially for home made marionettes are included." Book rev. digest

Mills, Mrs Winifred H., and Dunn, Mrs Louise M.
1 Costume 2 Masks (Plays) 3 Puppet plays 4 Shadow pantomines and plays 28-594
"Mrs. Mills and Mrs. Dunn, workers of wide experience, who have handled marionettes as an educational vehicle with great success in Cleveland, have given us a comprehensive book on marionette design and production, which is so explicit as to be both useful, and entertaining to the youthful mind. Infinite care has come into the making of this book. The photographs and the black and white drawings are charming." Theatre arts monthly

Rossbach, Charles Edmund, 1914-
Making marionettes. Harcourt 1938 196p illus $2.50 791.5

History of the theatre in America from its beginnings to the present time. . . Lippincott 1919 2v illus $10 792

1 Theater—U.S. 20-683

"To tell the whole story in the compass of two volumes of about 350 pages each, Mr Hornblow has of course been forced to make his annals of the American theatre chronologically disproportionate. Its first chapters are practically complete, but as he progresses onward through the years the spread of the drama throughout the country compels him to record and discuss only its most significant features. His first volume carries the history almost to the year 1850, and all that has happened since must therefore be compressed into the pages of the second." Boston Transcript

1 American drama—History and criticism 2 Theater—U.S. 34-37270

"This collection of dramatic criticisms begins with a prologue written by John Singleton and delivered in 1752 at the theater in Williamsburg, Virginia. The first real criticism is a note from a New York paper of 1787 on Jane Shore. Nearly half the book is devoted to criticisms written since 1900, including articles by Stark Young, George Jean Nathan, O. W. Firkins, Alexander Woollcott, and others. The book contains biographical sketches (1) of certain notable playwrights, producers, and actors, and (2) of the critics." Book rev. digest

"As a whole the volume is far more interesting as theatrical and popular-minded record than as the criticism of an art, as a galaxy of critics. It is more engaging than important." Stark Young in New republic

1 Acting 36-33384

"Working examples of good and bad acting described in the form of semi-fiction. The names of the actors are fictitious; the acting principles are based on the experience of the author in the Moscow art theatre." Bkl.
"Here are the simple, ringing words of truth, an inspired statement of the fundamentals of good acting, in essence as applicable and desirable in America, England or Western Europe as they were in pre-revolutionary Russia and as they are in the Soviet Russia of today." N.Y. Times

Andrews, Harry Lee, and Weirick, Bruce
Acting and play production; a manual for classes, dramatic clubs, and little theatres. Longmans 1925 292p illus $2.75, college ed $2.25 792P

1 Acting 2 Amateur theatricals 25-4061

"Beginning with the technique of acting, the gesture, movement, and development of the voice, this 'working manual' goes on to the study of the rôle, to the choice, coaching and staging of the play. Contains exercises for practice, lists of plays, costumes, and other information of value to the amateur actor and director. Photographic illustrations." N.Y. state lib.

Baird, John Foster, 1906-

Make-up; a manual for the use of actors, amateur and professional; illus. by Lee Mitchell. French 1930 155p illus $1.50 792P

1 Make-up, Theatrical 30-9221

"A practical book on the process of make-up, clearly described and illustrated with drawings. Particularly useful are the directions for character make-up for nationalities and for movie work. There is also a directory of manufacturers of materials." Ontario library review

Bates, Esther Willard, 1884-

Church play and its production; illus. by H. F. Lindergreen and Stanwood Stack. Baker, W. H. 1938 303p illus $2.75 792P

1 Religious drama—Presentation, etc. 38-10296

"This very practical book, written by a woman who has had extensive experience in writing and producing chancel plays and in teaching the subject, can help the cause of the church play well on its way. It is clear and definite; it relates the problem of the playwright to his field and to his audience; it explains the mechanics of suitable stage design, direction and production. And it is well illustrated with drawings, models and production photographs. The text is supplemented by a good bibliography of plays for reading and study, and for performance, including a dramatic program for the church year." Theatre arts monthly

Boleslavski, Richard, 1889-1937

* Acting; the first six lessons. . . Theatre arts 1933 122p $1.50 792P

1 Acting 33-27079

Six essays on the art of acting given in dialogue form. The author has been an actor, director and teacher in Russia, Germany, and America

"Needless to say, this is an invaluable textbook for the actor, but the sympathetic layman, also, will be amazed by the revelation of study, application, imagination, and resource underlying the apparent spontaneity of a finished player." Sat. rev. of lit.

Bosworth, Halliam

Technique in dramatic art; a delineation of the art of acting by means of its underlying principles and scientific laws, with technical instruction in the art of play production and public speaking. rev ed Macmillan 1934 xxii,484p illus $3.50, text ed $2.60 792P

Art of make-up, for the stage, the screen, and social use; illus. by the author. Appleton-Century 167p illus (Drama league lib. of the theatre arts) $2 792P

1 Beauty, Personal 2 Make-up, Theatrical 30-22971

First published 1925. In the 1930 edition minor changes have been made and an index has been added

"Describes make-up for the stage, the screen, and the street, for the blonde and the brunette, and for the man as well as the woman in the representation of several of the more familiar stage types from the English butler to the Japanese lady, and the haughty society dame to the American Indian and the hobo." Book rev. digest

"Miss Chalmers treats her material in the simplest and most useful, if not always the most creative, way, and her book should be at the right hand of every little theatre worker, as well as the beginner in the professional theater." Theatre arts monthly

Modern acting. Appleton-Century 1930 150p illus $2 792P

1 Acting 30-9779

"A handbook for the amateur whose ambition is a professional dramatic career. The author offers practical advice on things an untrained beginner should know, as well as on the physical requirements for acting, and gives directions for make-up, costume, etc. There is a chapter also on radio broadcasting." Book rev. digest

Theater art. Manual arts 1931 217p illus (Books on the arts) $3.50 792P

1 Theaters 31-22423

"Dedicated to prospective stage designers, this book gives a brief history of the theatre, and a detailed, well illustrated discussion of stage technique—lighting, costume, color contrast, etc. One chapter on the use and construction of masks will be of interest to the art student and pageant producer. . . Very fully illustrated." Wis bul.

Dolman, John, 1888-
* Art of play production. Harper 1928 466p (Plays and playwrights ser.) $2.75 792P

1 Acting 2 Amateur theatricals 3 Theater 28-25878

"The amateur theater group will find here helpful suggestions concerning every step in play production from the points of view of director, cast and stage crew. There are a few illustrations, chiefly of stage settings, a bibliography and an index." Book rev. digest

"The present book is of a rather intimidating thoroughness, it is true, but it is intelligently planned, it is reasonably analytical in tone, and it avoids the more solemn pretentions of the majority of such handbooks. Better still, it approaches the subject of the production of plays from a psychological and aesthetic point of view." Times (London) lit. sup.

799.2 Hunting

It is sometimes difficult to draw the line between books rightly classed here and sporting books which emphasize the travel element or the habits and behavior of wild animals

In addition to the titles listed in this class, the following is recommended:

Mayer, Charles. Trapping wild animals in Malay jungles. Duffield 1921 207p illus o.p. 1939

Blunt, David Enderby

Elephant; with a foreword by the Earl of Lonsdale. Houghton 1933 260p illus o.p. 1939 799.2

1 Elephants 33-27078

"After several years' work for the control and preservation of elephants in a game preserve in Africa, the author is able to dispel many erroneous ideas about the habits and biology of elephants. His book is packed with information and enlivened by hunting experiences, but is serious rather than popularized in style." Bkl.

Some libraries may prefer to classify this book in 599

Branch, Edward Douglas, 1905-

1 Bison 29-2501

"Beginning with the traditions of the buffalo in Indian folklore and archeology, the author tells how this great beast was almost exterminated by the building of the railways and the opening of the American plains for settlement. He then discusses later efforts made to protect the fragments of the great herds and save them from complete extinction." Bkl.

"It is all told in a lively and readable style, with many anecdotes and graphic descriptions and an admirable sense of the underlying drama. The illustrations, mostly reproduced from old books, are unusually interesting." N.Y. Times

Buck, Frank, 1882- and Anthony, Edward, 1895-

* Bring 'em back alive. Garden City pub. co. 291p illus $1 799.2

1 Animals—Habits and behavior 2 Zoological specimens—Collection and preservation 30-24956

Reprint of a title first published 1930 by Simon & Schuster

"Presents with vim and gusto the narrow escapes, the thrills and the type of strenuous experiences incidental to collecting animals, birds and reptiles for zoos and circuses, the ticklish business of transporting them safely to their destination across land and sea, and amusing detail about bartering with native traders. Photographs." N.Y. libraries

Frank Buck and Edward Anthony's "Wild cargo" (Simon & Schuster 1932 244p illus $1) relates more adventures the author had while capturing wild animals for zoos and circuses

Clark, James Lippitt, 1883-

Trails of the hunted. Little 1928 309p illus o.p. 1939 799.2

1 Hunting 2 Taxidermy 28-22413

"An informal account of the naturalist's field work in Africa, Asia, and North America. He was associated with Carl Akeley and with W. J. Morden in the work of photographing, collecting, and mounting wild animal groups for the American Museum of Natural History." Pittsburgh

" 'Trails of the Hunted' is a story of a unique life. James L. Clark has told such a story as few men these days can equal, and he has written it with such simplicity, such modesty, and such charm, that no one can fail to read this handsome volume from cover to cover." Sat. rev. of lit.

Curtis, Paul Allen, 1899-

American game shooting. Dutton 1927 279p illus $4 799.2

1 Game and game birds 2 Hunting 27-18017

He "writes easily and conversationally of hunting game of all kinds, large and small, furred or feathered, in all parts of North America. The accompanying photographs are of game haunts and hunts." Book rev. digest

Roosevelt, Theodore, president U. S. 1858-1919

* African game trails an account of the African wanderings of an American hunter-naturalist; with illus. from photographs by Kermit Roosevelt and other members of the expedition, and from drawings by P. R. Goodwin. Scribner 1910 529p illus map $6 799.2

1 Africa, British East—Description and travel 2 Hunting 10-35980

An account of hunting experiences on a trip to Africa to secure specimens of African mammals for the Smithsonian museum

"It is a book primarily for hunters, and secondarily for naturalists, with probably what will prove strong claims on the 'general reader.' " Dial

Two equally interesting hunting books are:

Roosevelt, Theodore. Hunting adventures in the west. Putnam 1913 372p illus $3 This is a reissue in one volume of his "Hunting trips of a ranchman" and "Wilderness hunter"

Roosevelt, Theodore. Outdoor pastimes of an American hunter. Scribner 1905 409p illus $3

Rutledge, Archibald Hamilton, 1883-

An American hunter; drawings by L. B. Hunt. Stokes 1937 461p illus $4 799.2

1 Hunting 37-33916

"Recollections of the author's game shooting expeditions, for the most part near his South Carolina home. The episodes deal with grouse, deer and turkey hunting, but some chapters on other hunts are included." Book rev. digest

"The volume is charmingly and sympathetically illustrated. The red-blooded sportsman, and he who knows little of the technic of the chase, will alike find satisfaction in Mr Rutledge's book." Springfield Republican

White, Stewart Edward, 1873-

Lions in the path; a book of adventure on the high veldt. Doubleday, Page 1926 292p illus o.p. 1939 799.2

1 Hunting 2 Tanganyika Territory—Description and travel 26-23902

"At the age of fifty-three the well-known novelist and sportsman, interested for years in the long bow as a sporting weapon, gave it a trial in hunting African game. Later, 'somewhat chewed by a recent tiger,' he wrote most entertainingly of his adventures." Cleveland

799.3 Archery

R. P. Elmer's "Archery" (rev Penn 1933 564p illus $5) contains a history of the sport and also an explanation of the technique and equipment

Duff, James Leo, 1891-

1 Archery 29-12579

"A text book on the art of shooting for accuracy with the bow and arrow, illustrated with photographs and drawings by the author." Subtitle

"In 'Modern Archery,' the champion of the Mid West Archery Association of the United States in 1927 has written a guide for both novice and student. As the work amply achieves his purpose in so many respects, Mr. Lambert may perhaps be pardoned if in places he lapses into discussions of a technical nature more suitable for experts. It may be that such places, unintelligible on a first reading to the tyro, will increase the value of the work on a second reading." Boston Transcript

Reichart, Natalie, and Keasey, Gilman

Archery. Barnes, A.S. 1940 95p illus (Barnes dollar sports lib.) $1 799.3

Smith, Charles Alphonso, 1864-1924

* What can literature do for me? rev ed Doubleday 1924 220p $1 801

1 Literature 24-12935

A series of brief essays on books and the value of reading. The chapter headings indicate the character of the contents: It can give you an outlet; It can keep before you the vision of the ideal; It can give you a better knowledge of human nature; It can restore the past to you; It can show you the glory of the commonplace; It can give you the mastery of your own language

"Shows broad familiarity with the subject, is full of illustrative material, and specially notable for simplicity, freshness and enthusiasm." N.Y. state lib.

Craft of the critic. Crowell 1931 401p $2.50 801

1 Book reviews 2 Criticism 3 Drama—History and criticism 4 Literature—History and criticism 5 Theater 31-5864

"The practical nature of this book will commend it to writers, as it is devoted frankly to reviewing, not to criticism in the more academic sense. Club members called on to give book reports and many general readers and play goers will find it helpful. In two parts: Book reviewing, and Play reviewing." Wis. bul.

Thorndike, Ashley Horace, 1871-1933

Outlook for literature. Macmillan 1931 200p $1.75 801

Considers the characteristics of the various types of modern literature and speculates upon the literature of the future. Contents: Readers; Writers; Great tradition; Poetry; Patterns; Teaching; Stories; Belief and behavior; Internationalism; Study of literature; English language; American literature

"The volume grows on one with the reading. If the separate things Professor Thorndike has to say are neither new nor penetrating nor illuminating, the sum total is of value for its independence of approach, its broad fairness, its catholicity, and, chiefly, from the very remoteness of its point of view." "A valuable book for teachers of literature in high schools and colleges, and for others who are working with young people. The author explains the effects of social influences on writers, of psychological stresses and social background on a student's enjoyment of literature and shows how familiarity with literature fosters a better understanding of life and people. Though written from the progressive point of view, the formal attitude towards literature as an end in itself is fully appreciated." Bkl.

Sidney's Apologie for poetrie; ed. with an introduction and notes by J. C. Collins. Oxford 1907 xxvii,111p 85c 808.1

1 Poetry 8-26857

Based on the text of the edition printed for Henry Olney in 1595. This edition contains besides notes, an introduction giving a brief sketch of Sir Philip Sidney's life and an introduction to the essay. The essay is also known as "The defense of poesie"

"Sir Philip Sidney, the perfect knight of the court of Elizabeth, defends the function of the poet against detractors. He glorifies the creative power of the poet, and vindicates his place in learning. Then follows a brief survey of English poets from Chaucer to Spencer, and an account of the primitive pre-Shakespearean drama. The style is witty, learned, and eloquent." English and the Pope's What to read

Strong, Leonard Alfred George, 1896-

Common sense about poetry. Knopf 1932 139p $1.20 808.1

1 Poetry 32-7594

"The author, who is himself a poet, presents simple suggestions on how to develop an appreciation of poetry when there are such prejudices as that it is 'hard to understand' or 'unreal.' He discusses rhythm and rhyme, the limerick, metre, what is poetry, how it differs from prose and gives illustrative examples of verse." N.Y. libraries

* Forms of poetry; a pocket dictionary of verse. Harcourt 1926 166p $1 808.1

1 English poetry—History and criticism 2 Poetics 26-12381

A pocket dictionary of verse. In it can be found, in alphabetical order, definitions of all terms which one may need for a profitable study or discussion of poetry. A section of the book is given over to a presentation of verse forms, diagrammed and exampled. The closing third covers briefly the history of English and American verse. A bibliography and an index complete the volume

"Mr Untermeyer's collection of examples to illustrate the many recognizable forms is in itself an unusually entertaining anthology." Literary rev.

"The purpose of this book is to translate the 'making' of a story into everyday processes. The processes chosen are those we use automatically in everything we do, from digging a ditch to forming a corporation or perfecting television. They are the three elementary processes of the creative faculty itself—rejecting, selecting, recombining." Preface

"If the amateurs who use his book have the resources of mind and experience and the special qualities essential to successful writing, help can be had from such texts. His picture of the architecture of the short story and of the novel, for that matter, is correct. His methods of self-analysis are sound if they can be applied." Sat. rev. of lit.

"Columbia university course in literature" (Columbia univ. press 1928 18v $78) is "based upon the Warner library . . . utilizing considerable material from that work but with an entirely different arrangement and with the addition of new selections and notices." Mudge

Both collections are analyzed in the "Essay and general literature index"

808.8Q Quotations

In the Decimal classification there is no separate number for books of quotations, and they may be put with other books in 808.8. For libraries where it is a convenience to keep them separate, it is suggested that Q be added to the class number.

Books in this class have not been starred because their choice depends on the need for such books and the amount of money at the librarian's disposal. According to Shores "Bartlett is the latest and best priced, Stevenson contains the greatest number of different quotations; and Hoyt is probably the best indexed." Mudge points out that in Stevenson the average number of words per quotation is less than in either Hoyt or Bartlett

Two older collections, well-indexed, now, 1939, out of print but still found useful are:

Allibone, S. A. Poetical quotations from Chaucer to Tennyson. Lippincott 1901 788p

Allibone, S. A. Prose quotations from Socrates to Macaulay. Lippincott 1903 764p

Bartlett, John, 1820-1905

1 Quotations (W) 37-28458

First edition published 1855; 10th edition, 1911

"A remade edition, enlarged to about twice the size of the 10th ed., containing about 20,000 quotations from some 2000 authors as against about 10,000 quotations from some 1000 authors in the 10th edition. New authors added include many modern writers and some of earlier periods not previously represented, e.g., William Blake. Full index contains an average of between four and five entries per quotation. For full reference work the 10th ed. is still to be used, however, as a considerable number of quotations included there are omitted in the 11th ed." Mudge. Reference books of 1935-1937

1 Literature, Modern—History and criticism 37-37580

"An interpretation of modern literature in which is developed the thesis that all great literature is preceded by and directed by great criticism. The author, the wife of Padraic Colum, is a literary critic and lecturer, and in 1930 was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship in literary criticism." Book rev. digest

"The book is provocative and widely informed. . . An admirable presentation, as a whole, of what modern literature has been trying to do, what it has done, and something of what it is doing just now." Springfield Republican

Drinkwater, John, 1882-1937
(ed.) Outline of literature. Putnam 1931 958p illus $5 809

1 English literature—History and criticism 2 Literature—History and criticism 31-26716

A reprint in reduced size on thin paper of a set published in 1923-24 in 3 volumes. The reprint has fewer illustrations. Each of the studies has been prepared by a specialist in that subject. More than half of the book is devoted to English literature in which field it covers a somewhat later period than does Macy

"This survey gives a 'representative summary of the great creative minds of the world of letters, and places that work in historical perspective . . . Of necessity concise, but for those whose reading has been 'fragmentary and haphazard,' it serves its purpose well. Enriched by frequent quotations. [Bibliographies]" N.Y. state lib.

Guérard, Albert Léon, 1880-
Preface to world literature. Holt 1940 536p $3.50 809

1 Literature 2 Literature—History and criticism 3 Literature—Philosophy (W) 40-27324

Partial contents: Treasure house; Literary Bibles; Folklore and literature; Classicism and romanticism; Realism and symbolism; Theory of genres; Periods in literature; Social approach to the study of literature; Problem of criticism; Bibliographical note; "The best which has been thought and said in the world"; Types of narrative fiction; Types of criticism

"I hope that 'Preface to World Literature' will find its way into the library of the general reader as well as into that of the special student of literature. It is quite admirable and may be perused as a kind of supplement to Mortimer Adler's 'How to Read a Book' [class 028]. . . The author is at once learned and urbane, often witty, always instructive." New Yorker

"An uncontroversial treatment in one volume of monastic education, literature and thought in western Europe from the collapse of the Western Roman empire to the end of the Carolingian Renaissance. Two introductory chapters on Pagan and Christian education and letters, and on the general political and social background, during the fourth and fifth centuries, lead up to a regional treatment of the subject from the beginning of the sixth to the middle of the eighth century. The fullest treatment is reserved for the revival of learning under Pepin, Charlemagne and their successors." Springfield Republican

"On the whole a remarkable piece of work, containing more information about many aspects of the early Middle Ages than is to be found in any other single volume in English." Times (London) lit. sup.

A general survey of literature, arranged by country, with one chapter on the literature of the Orient. Each chapter gives the setting of the national literature by indicating the historical background and national characteristics. Reference lists at ends of chapters

"In its most happily written sections it succeeds in suggesting the character and flavor of many of the masterpieces of literature." School rev.

Strachey, John, 1901-
Literature and dialectical materialism. Covici 1934 54p $1 809

1 Fascism 2 Literature, Modern—History and criticism 3 Social problems in literature 35-227

Lectures by a follower of the Marxist movement in literature. The writers analyzed are Proust, Joyce, Lawrence, Hemingway, Faulkner, MacLeish, Joseph Wood Krutch and Henry Hazlitt

"John Strachey's new essay is short, clear and has nothing portentous about it except the title. All those who are interested in the hotly argued relationship between literature and politics should read it; they will find that this booklet of twelve thousand words has more good sense in it than have most critical essays five times its length." 1 Poetry—History and criticism 2 Poets 27-27772

"The aim of 'The Winged Horse' is not to give a well proportioned survey of history, but to show 'the youth of all ages,' what it should read and in what spirit the reading should be done. Judged according to such a standard, it is a decidedly readable and decidedly valuable book." Sat. rev. of lit.

Contains bibliographies and an index. A companion volume, "The winged horse anthology" is listed in 821.08
The reading lists contained in the "Winged horse" are also available separately as "Poetry and poets, a readers list" compiled by Mrs T. H. W. Elmendorf (A.L.A. 1931 78p pa 75c)

Gayley, Charles Mills, 1858-1932, and Kurtz, Benjamin Putnam, 1877-
Methods and materials of literary criticism; lyric, epic and allied forms of poetry. Ginn 1920 911p $3.50 809.1
1 Poetry—History and criticism 2 Poetry—History and criticism—Bibliography A20-1519
Applies the methods developed in Gayley and Scott's "Introduction" (class 801) to the comparative study of certain allied forms of poetry, considering each in respect to: (1) its theory and technique and, (2) its historical development. Each section is supplied with an annotated list of references in addition to references in the text, and an appendix contains a bibliography of the history of poetry
"Testing the book from the standpoint of a student of the classical types of literature one is impressed by the completeness of the bibliographical material and by the discrimination of the editors when selection is necessary." Classical journal

Mackail, John William, 1859-
Lectures on poetry. Longmans 1911 334p $4.25 809.1
1 Poetry—History and criticism 12-1303
Contents: Definition of poetry; Poetry and life; Virgil and Virgilianism; Aeneid; Arabian lyric poetry; Arabian epic and romantic poetry; Divine comedy; Shakespeare's sonnets; Note of Shakespeare's romances; Poetry of Oxford; Imagination; Keats; Progress of poetry
"Author was (1906-11) professor of poetry at Oxford. Though the lectures are on a variety of themes, the intention throughout is to define poetry and to show its unfailing power through the ages." Pittsburgh

1 English poetry—History and criticism 2 Literature, Comparative 3 Poetry—History and criticism 27-23718
The second impression issued in 1930 contains no changes beyond the correction of a few errata, but adds an analysis of the general argument of the book
"A series of nine lectures delivered while Professor Murray was the first incumbent of the Charles Eliot Norton professorship of poetry at Harvard University. They are plainly an attempt to restate the classical view of poetry, developing it with slight variations on the obvious thesis that the great bulk of European letters is unified in important urges, and that these urges derive from the classical Greek and Roman writers." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Tinker, Chauncey Brewster, 1876-
Good estate of poetry. Little 1929 243p $2.50 809.1
1 American poetry—History and criticism 2 English poetry—History and criticism 3 Poetry—History and criticism 29-9527
Essays which "examine certain tendencies in poetry and criticism against the background of what may be termed the tradition of English literature." Book rev. digest
"A notable feature . . . is what might be termed the very friendly manner in which the subject is approached. Professor Tinker, without abating in the least his respect both for poetry and the poets, is like a man on friendly terms with his neighbors." N.Y. Times

Tragedy. Longmans 1924 228p $2.40 809.2

1 Tragedy [25-4014]

"Mr. Dixon's subject is tragedy as a whole, especially as seen in its greatest four masters, the three Greeks and Shakespeare; and he has not much to say of particular tragedies, whether Greek or Shakespearian. His subject is the method and business of tragedy, and above all the view of life which he considers it to imply. For these purposes he discusses the theories of various critics—Aristotle, Hegel, Hume, Schopenhauer, Nietzsche, and others." Times (London) lit. sup.

Goldberg, Isaac, 1887-1938

Drama of transition; native and exotic playcraft. Appleton-Century 1922 487p $5 809.2

1 Drama—History and criticism 2 Dramatists [23-2060]

"After an introductory chapter on contemporary dramatic criticism the book deals with the leading transition authors of Spain, Italy, South America, France, Germany, Russia and the United States, with a minimum of biography, where necessary, a more or less full description of the contents of plays and his own critical evaluations as well as the opinions of foreign critics. Considerable attention is given to the Yiddish drama." Book rev. digest.

The book is exceedingly well documented; it is richly and organically informative; almost every page will give the reader pause because the author essays as documentary critics rarely do, fresh re-appraisals of single plays and long standing æsthetic tenets and specific judgments that centre around the dramatists on the table." Literary rev.

Matthews, Brander, 1852-1929

* Study of the drama. Houghton 1910 320p illus $2.50, student's ed $2.25 809.2

1 Drama—History and criticism 2 Drama—Technique 10-7803

"Subtle and sound analysis of dramatic art of all ages, especially of conditions pertaining to the stage, the actor and the audience. Good criticism of individual plays and playwrights, not necessarily modern but applicable thereto. Makes easily available in English Brunetière's law of the drama." Viewpoints in modern drama

Matthews, Brander—Continued

Brander Matthews' "Development of the drama" (Scribner 1903 350p $2) is a good concise history dealing with the evolution of technical construction rather than with the philosophical and aesthetic aspects

809.3 Fiction—History and criticism

Brewster, Dorothy, 1883- and Burrell, John Angus

Modern fiction. Columbia univ. press 1934 442p $2.75 809.3

1 Fiction—History and criticism 34-40680

"Critical essays on authors and novels specifically chosen as representing trends in and contributions to the field of modern fiction. The text begins with a discussion of George Gissing and ends with a chapter on Fiction as experience. Among the more important of the novelists taken up are Dostoevsky, Conrad, Mann, Lawrence, James Joyce. There is also a chapter on modern proletarian fiction, and one on the short story and the novelette. Notes and bibliography appended." Book rev. digest

The summaries and analyses "are uniformly well done. Miss Brewster's run-over of the work of Virginia Woolf is especially to be commended because of her discursive references." N.Y. Times

Hansen, Agnes Camilla

Twentieth century forces in European fiction. A.L.A. 1934 250p $2 809.3

1 Europe—Literature 2 Fiction—Bibliography 3 Fiction—History and criticism 4 Literature, Modern 34-35852

"Five hundred novels, translated into English from seventeen languages, are classified and examined in this book. The books are classified according to the social, political, psychological, historical, racial, or scientific phenomena which motivate them, and each section is supplied with explanatory text." Book rev. digest

"Well indexed and will be useful both in selection of books and in club work." Wis. bul.

James, Henry, 1843-1916

Art of the novel; critical prefaces; with an introduction by R. P. Blackmur. Scribner 1934 xxxix,348p $3 809.3

1 Fiction—History and criticism 34-37463

This book contains the prefaces to his novels written by Henry James for the New York edition of his works. In addition to explaining how each story developed, the prefaces also set forth James' whole theory of the art and philosophy of fiction

"To those who have been put off from knowing [the prefaces] by the fact that they have, until now, been so annoyingly scattered, they will come as a revelation and a joy. I do not see—have never seen—how anyone who really reads them can read fiction with quite the same eyes as before." C. H. Grattan in N.Y. Times

Notes on novelists, with some other notes. Scribner 1914 455p o.p. 1939 809.3

1 Fiction—History and criticism 2 Novelists 14-18367

Essays on Stevenson, Zola, Flaubert, Balzac, George Sand, d'Annunzio, Matilde Serao, Dumas the younger, Charles Eliot Norton, The new novel, 1914, The novel in "The ring and the book"

"The interest attaching to these 'notes' is, indeed, very largely due to the point of view of the author, though, needless to say, the subjects are sketched with fine insight, with generous though discriminating appreciation, with charm and felicity." Dial

Krutch, Joseph Wood, 1893-

Five masters; a study in the mutations of the novel. Cape, J. 1930 328p o.p. 1939 809.3

1 Beyle, Marie Henri, 1783-1842 2 Boccaccio, Giovanni, 1313-1375 3 Cervantes Saavedra, Miguel de, 1547-1616 4 Fiction—History and criticism 5 Proust, Marcel, 1871-1922 6 Richardson, Samuel, 1689-1761 30-29285

"It is sound popularization, for it does not try to be, nor can it be used as, a substitute for first-hand knowledge of the works of the writers it describes; it tries to be and is a stimulus to reading and a guide to make that reading intelligent." New Republic

Lovett, Robert Morss, 1870-

Preface to fiction; a discussion of great modern novels. Follett 1931 127p $1 809.3

1 Fiction—History and criticism 31-14517

The author here presents critical studies of six modern novels: Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina," Hamsun's "Growth of the soil," Flaubert's "Madame Bovary," Butler's "Way of all flesh," Mann's "Buddenbrooks," and Upton Sinclair's "Boston." A final chapter on the post-realistic novel considers briefly the works of such writers as Dorothy Richardson, James Joyce and Marcel Proust

"A small book that would serve well as a guide to a study course on the novel." Wis. bul.

Muller, Herbert Joseph, 1905-

Modern fiction; a study of values. Funk 1937 447p $2.80 809.3

1 Fiction—History and criticism 37-30369

Surveys American and European fiction of the last sixty years, with separate chapters on Flaubert, Hardy, Zola, Conrad, D. H. Lawrence, Joyce, Virginia Woolf, Proust, Gide, and Thomas Mann

"The book as a whole . . . is substantial and unusually readable, a thoroughly stimulating study of a large and perplexing subject." Sat. rev. of lit.

Phelps, William Lyon, 1865-

Essays on modern novelists. Macmillan 1910 293p $1.50 809.3

1 Fiction—History and criticism 10-2313

Frequently reprinted without changes

"Engaging criticisms and characterizations of the subject matter and philosophy of life of De Morgan, Hardy, Howells, Björnson, Mark Twain, Sienkiewicz, Ollivant, Stevenson, Mrs Humphrey Ward, Kipling, and 'Lorna Doone.'" N.Y. state lib.

First published 1913 by Doubleday, Page

Contents: General characteristics; Irving; Cooper; Emerson; Hawthorne; Longfellow; Whittier; Poe; Holmes; Thoreau; Lowell; Whitman; Mark Twain; Howells; William James; Lanier; Henry James

"Volume of forceful and well-balanced essays. He is an independent but a sane thinker, with an unusual command of forceful expression; at times his tone is decidedly dogmatic, but he is both so vigorous and so clear that his dogmatism is stimulating rather than repellant; he has the faculty of forcing his reader definitely to agree or disagree." Springfield Republican

23-7369

"Essays which represent the reaction of a liberal-minded college professor to the teachings of the American 'Intelligentsia' and reiterate the belief . . . that America's true source of inspiration lies in her moral idealism. Among other subjects, he considers the relation of fine arts to progress, the meaning of Puritanism, service as the keynote in the choice of vocation, American criticism and university education. Reprinted from periodicals." Bkl.
"The spirit and content of the book are delightful. There is great wisdom—not merely knowledge—tolerance without sentimentalism and keen satire where satire is due." Dial

S. P. Sherman's "Americans" (Scribner 1922 336p $2.50) and "The main stream" (Scribner 1927 239p front o.p. 1939) are other good collections of essays on American literature by this well-known critic

Many minds. Knopf 1924 242p o.p. 1939 810.4
1 American literature—History and criticism 24-26389

"Critical papers, on Mary Austin, George Ade, Robert Frost, Edna St. Vincent Millay, H. L. Mencken, Carl Sandburg, and other literary figures. Although many of them were written as book reviews they have more than temporary interest. The author's criticism of himself written for the Nation is also included." Wis. bul.
"His mind is academic, but at the same time liberal, a most rare and useful combination." Dial

Whipple, Thomas King, 1890-
Spokesmen, modern writers and American life. Appleton-Century 1928 276p $2.50 810.4
1 American literature—History and criticism 28-13012

"Following a thoughtful chapter on The poetic temper, the author purposes to show how ten American writers express and represent the best contemporary America: Henry Adams, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Theodore Dreiser, Robert Frost, Sherwood Anderson, Willa Cather, Carl Sandburg, Vachel Lindsay, Sinclair Lewis, Eugene O'Neill. In a final chapter on The American situation, the author concludes that the poetic temper is present in American literature in spite of prevailing circumstances rather than because of them." 1 American literature—Collections 33-27367

Contains selections from American prose and poetry from colonial times to the present, to which reference was made in the author's "Expression in America" listed in class 810.9

"Lewisohn not only drops overboard a certain amount of junk, but rescues some unhackneyed things. At the same time, he remains, as always, a romantic individualist, and there are veins in American literature—veins which interest a less mature generation—to which he is wholly or almost wholly indifferent." 1 American literature—Collections 2 Proletariat 35-27432

"The economic crisis of the past . . . years has brought about remarkable progress in the fields of proletarian drama, fiction, poetry, report, and criticism in America. This anthology contains a representative group of such works, dealing with the personal conflicts and experiences of the proletariat. Strikes, hunger, revolutionary meetings, factory life, lynchings, etc.—all have their place in the selection. Erskine Caldwell, John Dos Passos, Michael Gold, Horace Gregory, Genevieve Taggard, Alfred Kreymborg, and Granville Hicks are among the better-known contributors." Boston

"The collection has the defects of a first attempt, and the solid virtue of putting into one book a number of representative selections." Sat. rev. of lit.

"It makes plain and fascinating the relationship between American life and the literature which it produced, and the resultant life influenced by that literature. Although it is a textbook it reads like an essay—of immense length but of unfailing interest." Chicago Daily Tribune

Rediscovery of the frontier. Univ. of Chicago press 1931 185p $2.50 810.9

1 American fiction—History and criticism 2 American literature—History and criticism 3 Frontier and pioneer life 31-28011

"A study of the literature which has grown up around the renewed interest in American life on the frontier. Contents: The frontier comes of age; The frontier in literary criticism; The American pioneer in fiction; The immigrant pioneer in fiction; The back-trailers in fact and fiction; Implications." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Boynton produces a sense of the frontier as an insurgent element in American life, not only as a tangible factor but as a force pulling upon the imagination." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Brooks, Van Wyck, 1886-

‡ Flowering of New England, 1815-1865. Dutton 1936 550p $4 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 2 American literature—New England 3 New England—Civilization 36-27376

"Van Wyck Brooks has fused into a glowing narrative, not only the atmosphere of the period but also charming, mellow and authentic portraits of the leading figures from Ticknor, Prescott, Hawthorne, Emerson, on through Lowell, Motley and Holmes. There are brilliant summaries of each one's work; and there are delightful recreations of groups gathered in clubs or at Brooks Farm, and of friendly talk on a walking trip. . . . First of a number of volumes planned to sketch the literary history of the United States." N.Y. libraries

If the author "continues and finishes [the work] on the same scale as this, and with the same knowledge, range, insight, precision and grace, he will have written, not only the best history of American literature, but one of the best literary histories in any language." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Three essays on America. Dutton 1934 216p $3 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 2 National characteristics, American 3 U.S.—Intellectual life 34-14327

Three books of essays "America's coming of age," first published 1915, "Letters and leadership," 1918, and "The literary life in America," 1921, and later as part of "Emerson and others" which is entered in class 810.4

Cambridge history of American literature, * ed. by W. P. Trent and others. Macmillan 3v $5 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism [17-30257]

First issued 1917-21 in 4 volumes by Putnam. The popular edition, issued 1933, is an inexpensive reprint of the complete text but omits the very full bibliographies of the first issue, and is therefore not so useful for reference work. Each volume has a separate index

Contents: v 1 Colonial and Revolutionary literature. Early national literature, pt. 1; v2 Early national literature, pt. 2; Later national literature, pt. 1; v3 Later national literature, pt. 2-3

"The most important history of American literature and a standard reference book, necessary in all types of general libraries. Covers the early period with unusual thoroughness, treats the ordinary literary forms and subjects, standard writers, etc., with great detail, and, in addition, includes adequate treatment of many subjects not covered in the ordinary literary histories. . . Each chapter is by a specialist." Mudge

Cowley, Malcolm, 1898-

(ed.) After the genteel tradition; American writers since 1910. Norton 1937 270p o.p. 1939 810.9

1 American fiction—History and criticism 2 American literature—History and criticism 37-27387

"Fourteen searching literary reappraisals, largely by the younger reviewers, given a certain unity by Mr. Cowley's foreword and postscript. Not a dull piece of writing in the lot, but one might especially commend Robert Cantwell on Upton Sinclair, Lionel Trilling on Willa Cather, Louis Kronenberger on H. L. Mencken, and John Peale Bishop on Ernest Hemingway." New Yorker

Foerster, Norman, 1887-

Nature in American literature; studies in the modern view of nature. Macmillan 1923 324p o.p. 1939 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 2 Nature in literature 23-5206

"Studies tracing the development of the naturalistic movement in American literature from Bryant to Burroughs and showing the love and knowledge of nature displayed by these poets and prose writers in their work. Contents: Bryant; Whittier; Emerson; Thoreau; Lowell; Whitman; Lanier; Muir; Burroughs." Book rev. digest

"As Foerster ably shows, nature, and particularly wild nature, has been for a century a living flame in America from which writer after writer has lit his torch. It is an impressive fact, the implications of which for American social and intellectual life are great." Literary rev.

Toward standards; a study of the present critical movement in American letters. Farrar 1930 224p o.p. 1939 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 2 Criticism 3 Humanism 30-29023

Contents: Humanism in the renaissance; Impressionism; History: journalism; History: prophecy; Humanism in the twentieth century; Note on humanism and religion

Some of these chapters have appearel in magazines, and one is reprinted from the author's earlier work "American criticism"

Story of our literature; an interpretation of the American spirit. rev and enl ed Scribner 1939 437p illus $1.60 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 39-11118

"An outline of American literature from the colonial period to the present day. Gives a brief estimate of living writers and contains useful information about colleges, scholarships, periodicals, and libraries. Material well presented and well arranged. Study questions and complete list of writers and their dates. Index and classified bibliography." Bkl.

Hicks, Granville, 1901-
Great tradition; an interpretation of American literature since the Civil war. rev ed Macmillan 1935 341p $2 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 36-27042

New edition of a work first published in 1933. There is no revision of text, but a new chapter devoted to the rising school of revolutionary writers, has been added

"Believing that the dominant factor in American life since the Civil war has been the rise of industrialism, this critic interprets American literature of the past seventy years by analyzing outstanding writers in terms of their relation to social and economic history. Temperate in tone and well informed, the book will be enjoyed even by readers who do not accept the author's theory of the necessity of identification of literature with class struggle." Bkl.

Lewisohn, Ludwig, 1882-
* Story of American literature. Harper 1937 xxxii,624p $1.49 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 37-28757

A reprint of a book published 1932 under title: "Expression in America." Also obtainable from Modern library at $1.25

"A challenging and significant study of the development of creative expression in America from Colonial days on, with keen and brilliant analyses of individual writers. The pungency and incisiveness of both thought and style make the survey eminently readable." N.Y. libraries

Loggins, Vernon, 1893-
I hear America . . . literature in the United States since 1900. Crowell 1937 378p $2.50 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 2 Authors, American 37-30711

"A bird's-eye-view of recent American writers and their works. Critical appraisals, biographical sketches, and some plots are included; the writers are grouped under iconoclasm, revolution, intellectualism, cap and bells, manners, and popular appeal. A fairly objective, readable book, which includes varying opinions but is more favorable than destructive in its personal estimates. Includes a list of books recommended for reading." Bkl.

Long, William Joseph, 1867-
American literature; a study of the men and the books that in the earlier and later times reflect the American spirit. Ginn 1923 xxi,513p illus $1.76 810.9

1 American literature—History and criticism 2 Authors, American [13-21798]

First published 1913. This edition contains an additional chapter of 30 pages, called Books and writers of the present day

A readable textbook. The author says that he has "tried to emphasize the men and the books that reflect the national traditions," and that he has given considerable attention to colonial and revolutionary writers, as a background for the present. The history is divided into 5 periods, for each of which he gives a survey of social and political conditions, of its literature, and a discussion of the separate writers, major and minor. Does not go beyond the 19th century

"A supplement to the author's 'American literature since 1870,' bringing the study down not quite to the present, for few or no authors who had not published before 1920 are included. Valuable as a survey, particularly of the early years of the century. The author's lack of sympathy with many of the later tendencies is evident." Wis. bul.

"After surveying the entire history of American literature from its beginnings up to the Civil War the author summarizes in a brief chapter of thirty pages entitled 'A new nation,' all the literary achievements in this country which have taken place since that period." Boston Transcript

"Our age has been fed so much on criticism of robust vein and sharp edge that we may sometimes be misled into mistaking Mr Perry's chronic kindliness—which extends even to vers libristes—for too easy complaisance; but many readers on reviewing his volume will probably admit the rightness of most of his verdicts and his prevailing sanity." "A study of the work of literary critics and the relations between American literature and American life, from the days of the Puritans to the present." Book rev. digest

"The book seeks, as the title suggests, for the reasons which lie behind the canons of estimate in use by the major critics of our literary output. Mr. Smith has a sociological point of view and this colors to some extent his report on his findings but in no way interferes with his researches. The book is a stimulating one even when the reader finds himself in disagreement with the author." Book-of-the-month club news

Appraisals of Canadian literature. Macmillan 1926 272p o.p. 1939 810.9C

1 Canadian literature—History and criticism 27-26457

In the first half "Canadian literature is considered in its relation to the history and topography of the country, in its relation to the British and American literary influences to which it might be subject, and in its relation to the principal currents of modern thought. . . The remaining portion of the book is a survey of the literary material which is peculiar to Canada, and of the extent to which it has been exploited by Canadian writers." Introduction

"A useful source of information on Canadian writers. The selection for criticism is somewhat arbitrary, but the criticism itself evinces common sense and good judgment." Bkl.

811 AMERICAN POETRY

Adams, Franklin Pierce, 1881-
Melancholy lute; selected songs of thirty years. Viking 1936 191p $2.50 811

36-24650

F. P. A.'s own selections from his verse of the last thirty years which appeared in his column "The Conning Tower" in the New York Herald Tribune

"The book is filled with beautifully turned trifles which on examination turn out not to be so trifling. This reviewer commonly reviews books of philosophy. He has herein been reviewing one, sounder and more genial than many." Irwin Edman in Books (N.Y. Herald-Tribune)

Aiken, Conrad Potter, 1889-
Selected poems. Scribner 1929 361p $3.50 811

29-28544

Awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1929

"Mr. Aiken's selections from his six most recent volumes of verse, chronologically arranged. Among the longer poems included are The jig of Forslin, The house of dust, Punch: the immortal liar, The pilgrimage of Festus, and Priapus and the pool." Book rev. digest

"The volume is like a collection of symphonies by a composer whose new works nearly always embody rephrasings of theses which his previous works have made familiar." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

C. P. Aiken's "Time in the rock" (Scribner 1936 138p $2.50) consists of 96 preludes, nineteen of which appeared in "The New Yorker"

Aldington, Mrs Hilda (Doolittle) 1886-
Collected poems of H. D. Liveright 1925 306p o.p. 1939 811

25-9543

Complete edition of the poems of an early leader of the Imagist group. Contains sea garden; The god; Choruses; Hymen; Heliodora

"A fine sensitiveness to beauty, Greek purity of expression, and the lyric touch distinguish these verses, now free, now formal in meter. Frequently of classic derivation in theme." N.Y. state lib.

Aldrich, Thomas Bailey, 1836-1907

Poems. Riverside ed Houghton 2v o.p. 1939 811

[17-16757]

"Though he gained wide recognition as a story writer, Aldrich will be longest remembered as a lyric poet. His 'vers de société' are the best in American literature." Pratt alcove

Auslander, Joseph, 1897-

No traveller returns; a book of poems. Harper 1935 233p o.p. 1939 811

35-27229

"Intensely graphic poems of the modern world. . . All the poems are not at the same level. There are occasional lapses. . . But this is a lavish book, and one can choose in it. In general it may be said that the work, in its richness and variety, stands with the best work of our time." W. R. Benét in Sat. rev. of lit.

Austin, Mrs Mary (Hunter) 1868-1934

American rhythm; studies and reëxpressions of Amerindian songs. new and enl ed Houghton 1930 174p $2.50 811

1 Indians of North America—Poetry 2 Rhythm 30-6268

"The introduction to this collection of Amerindian songs, lyrics, magic formulas and tribal lays, translated and arranged by Mary Austin, contains a critical essay explanatory of the rhythmic effects in the American Indian tribal dances, and the development of verse forms from this primitive poetic beginning. This is a new and enlarged edition of a book first published in 1923." Book rev. digest

In this edition "the introductory essay, perhaps the most valuable portion of the work, has been added to, and the Indian songs, poems and recitations have been improved. The points that she makes are well taken and the examples of Indian poetry that she includes in the anthology division of her book are more than ordinarily interesting." N.Y. Times

Book of Americans; illus. by Charles Child. Farrar 1933 114p illus $2 811

1 U.S.—History—Poetry 33-27433

"Clever light verse on prominent figures in America's story, and equally clever illustrations in color. A glint of seriousness beneath the sophisticated froth reveals an understanding of deeper things in our historic personages than the idiosyncracies so amusingly sketched." Cincinnati

Benét, Stephen Vincent, 1898-

Ballads and poems, 1915-1930. Farrar 1931 229p $2.50 811

[31-2655]

"This book is, in the main, a selection from three earlier books of verse, all now out of print. Some new poems have been added and certain old ones altered, though not materially." Note

"He tells us good stories and he sings us gay songs. His is a banjo rhythm at times, at times that of a guitar—pleasant music in the darkness. . . Light verse and ballads are always acceptable when well turned and Mr. Benet's muse is facile, gracious and delightfully naive." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

S. V. Benét's "Burning city; new poems" (Farrar 1936 80p illus $2) is another collection of 21 poems. The city is New York, destroyed not by fire but by decay

1 Brown, John, 1800-1859—Poetry 2 U.S.—History—Civil war—Poetry 28-21932

Decorations by George Illian

"A long narrative poem of great energy and sweep, which swings into view the whole course of the Civil war, throwing into relief against the war torn background individual figures of both North and South, soldiers and civilians." Book rev. digest

"It is a straightforward, close-circumstanced narrative, with great attention to the distinguishing marks of the period it chronicles. The verse varies, and there are prose interventions. If it is not within the ranks of epic poetry, it is 'a tale of the times of old' by a precise and sympathetic student." Nation and Athenaeum

Benét, William Rose, 1886-

Starry harness, poems. Dodd 1933 111p o.p. 1939 811

33-33490

A collection of short poems most of them lyrics and many with a mystical quality. "If you wish to see America, with its high ideals and its lapses, interpreted by a poet who understands his art read 'Starry Harness.' " N.Y. Times

Bogan, Louise, 1897-

Sleeping fury; poems. Scribner 1937 42p $2.50 811

37-4187

"Louise Bogan's poems have a delicacy that is rare in modern poetry. Her flexible rhythms have alternatively a conciseness and a run that can be beautifully adapted to the purpose of the poem she is writing, and her only lapses seem to be connected with what she fails to do. . . Although she is occasionally bitter in her views, she can also give the impression of being a detached observer who could say more but would rather not, and when she writes of a profound personal experience she remains a realist who is more reticent than impassioned." Yale review

Branch, Anna Hempstead, 1875-

Shoes that danced, and other poems. Houghton 1905 201p $1.75 811

5-11611

Contains a fifty-page drama and a group of short poems

"There are sinewy dramatic sketches, meditative monologues, child verses, lyric odes, and fragments of dramatic narrative, all marked by fluent, unconventional music, and strong unconventional phrase. Yet the mood of wonder that underlies all of it is singularly integral." Nation

Sonnets from a lock box, and other poems. Houghton 1929 125p $2 811

29-18469

A series of thirty-eight correlated sonnets forms the opening group of the book, "Sonnets from a lock box." Lyrics on varied subjects follow, and the volume concludes with three narrative poems under the title, "Three stories told in a haunted house"

"The simplicity of taste, together with a gentle humor, a sort of arch slyness, that mark the poems of 'Sonnets From a Lock Box' should win for the author many a reader." N.Y. Times

Bryant, William Cullen, 1794-1878

* Poetical works. household ed Appleton-Century xxiv,362p $2.25 811

21-16645

"His poems display an observant love of nature in her quiet moods, a strong but not boisterous patriotism, and a meditative piety. Both feeling and form are restrained. There is a constant tendency to moralizing, but the simplicity and sincerity of the poet have won him hosts of friends among all classes of readers." English & Pope's What to read

"It is the poetry of sentiment, memory, and domestic affection, entirely feminine, rather tame and diffuse as a whole, but tender and sweet, cherished by many good women and dear to simple hearts." H. A. Beers

Coffin, R. T. Maine ballads. Macmillan 1938 106p $1.75 (W) Containing 22 poems not in his "Collected poems" as well as poems reprinted in that collection

Coffin, R. T. Saltwater farm. Macmillan 1937 114p $2.50 Containing 16 poems not in his "Collected poems" as well as poems reprinted in that collection

Coffin, R. T. Strange holiness. Macmillan 1935 101p $1.75 Containing 13 poems not in his "Collected poems." Received the Pulitzer prize in 1935

Conkling, Mrs Grace Walcott (Hazard)

Witch, and other poems. Knopf 1929 84p $2 811

29-22827

A collection of the poet's work done since the year 1926. Contains some hitherto unpublished poems

"Mrs. Conkling's verse is marked by a sound and discriminating interest in life, by great mastery of technique, by fastidiousness of phrase, and by distinctly individual liking for color." N.Y. Times

Mrs G. W. H. Conkling's "Afternoons of April" (Houghton 1915 89p o.p. 1939) is another collection in the New poetry series

Crane, Hart, 1899-1932

Collected poems; ed. with an introduction by Waldo Frank. Liveright 1933 179p front $2.50 811

33-27111

This volume contains "White Buildings," "The Bridge" and forty-four of Hart Crane's unpublished verses, including "Key West: an island sheaf," the sequence of poems which he had completed just before his death

"Most of the posthumous pieces seem fragmentary, but the longest of them, 'Eternity,' is an extraordinarily fine poem which shows Crane in a new role, that of a reporter with a sharp, quick, cinematic style. A dozen early poems are printed in an appendix, together with an essay on 'Modern Poetry' which proves that the poet wrote good prose—something his private letters would prove more abundantly." New republic

Crane, Stephen, 1871-1900

Collected poems; ed. by Wilson Follett. Knopf 1930 132p $2.50 811

30-9605

"Stephen Crane, the romanticist and adventurer and the novelist of the '90s, published during his short lifetime two books of poetry: 'The Black Riders,' and 'War is Kind.' These two volumes, together with certain other more recently discovered poems, are now given us again in the 'Collected Poems.' " Book rev. digest

"There is nothing contemptible in the least of his poems. Acidulous and brilliant, unappreciated in his time, these elliptical concisions have not yet received their due from a generation which employs their very technique. . . It is a cause for gratification that the . . . [publisher has] risked the first complete—and popularly priced—collection of Crane's concisely intimate poetry." Sat. rev. of lit.

Cullen, Countee, 1903-

Color. Harper 1925 108p $2 811

25-21678

"A first book of poems, reprinted from The American Mercury and other periodicals. They are somewhat morbid lyrics, but with a touch of the real thing in them. The author is a negro, and 'color' is the color of race." Chicago

"Countee Cullen is more than a racially self-conscious rhymster. His race and its sufferings give him depth and an understanding of pain and sorrow. But he rises above all surface barriers and sings of experiences of universal appeal, limited only by the winds and skies." Sat. rev. of lit.

Countee Cullen's "Black Christ & other poems" (Harper 1929 110p illus $2) contains a long title poem and several lyric poems

Cummings, Edward Estlin, 1894-

* Collected poems. Harcourt 1938 [332]p $3 811 (W)

Selections from the author's printed books of poems: "Tulips and chimneys"; "XLI Poems"; "Is 5"; "W"; and "No thanks"; with a few new poems not hitherto published in book form

"With all its failures and beauties, its clashing of styles, its brainsmashing complexities and moving simplicities, this is the poetry of a man of complete artistic integrity." Sat. rev. of lit.

Daly, Thomas Augustine, 1871-

Selected poems; with an introductory letter by Christopher Morley. . . Harcourt 1936 273p $2.50 811

36-19200

Clever verses in Italian or Irish dialect, combining fun and feeling

A selection of the poet's most popular work, "Including songs from McAroni ballads, Canzoni & Songs of wedlock, Madrigali, Carmina, McAroni medleys." Subtitle

Deutsch, Babette, 1895-

One part love. Oxford 1939 86p $1.75 811

39-29443

"Fifty-three poems on contemporary subjects, especially peace, or the lack of it. Some of the poems have been published previously in the New Yorker." Book rev. digest

"Acrid and expert craftsmanship, and the mark of a positive individuality; in brief, one of the best books Miss Deutsch has written." New republic

Dickinson, Emily, 1830-1886

Poems, ed. by M. D. Bianchi and A. L. Hampson. Little 1937 484p front $3.50 811

37-2949

Contains all the previously published collections of Emily Dickinson's poetry, including the 131 poems which were issued in 1935 under the title "Unpublished poems"

"The verses, written so many years ago, are surprisingly modern in technic and tone, and mark her as an imagist whose line is full of melody and whose mood and thought range from the airiest fancy or mocking irreverence to the themes of grief and death." N.Y. state lib.

Dillon, George, 1906-

Flowering stone. Viking 1931 62p $1.75 811

31-25183

Received the Pulitzer award for poetry in 1932

"Lovely lyrics and several fine sonnets by one of the more promising and sensitive of the younger verse writers." N.Y. libraries

George Dillon's "Boy in the wind" (Viking 1927 79p o.p. 1939) is an earlier collection containing many of his best poems

Dunbar, Paul Laurence, 1872-1906

* Complete poems; with the introduction to "Lyrics of lowly life," by W. D. Howells. Dodd 1913 xxxii,289p front $2.50 811

13-25781

Includes "Lyrics of lowly life," "Lyrics of the hearthside," "Lyrics of love and laughter," and "Lyrics of sunshine and shadow," with a few other poems. Introduction by W. D. Howells

"Dunbar is the first American negro of pure African blood to reveal innate distinction in literature; as W. D. Howells has said, 'to feel the negro life esthetically and express it lyrically.' His dialect pieces are delightful." Review of reviews

Eliot, Thomas Stearns, 1888-

* Collected poems, 1909-1935. Harcourt 1936 220p $2.50 811

36-12053

Contains all of the author's poems published from 1909 to 1935 and several poems not previously published

"Collected Poems is a valuable and fascinating book because it gives a bird's-eye view of Mr. Eliot's poetic progress, from his early, brilliant but derivative excursions right up to the present day. It is particularly interesting, for example, to see the admirable choruses of The Rock divorced from their somewhat less stimulating context, and to be able to trace Mr. Eliot's link with the main tradition of English devotional verse." New statesman and Nation

T. S. Eliot's "Old Possum's book of practical cats" (Harcourt 1939 46p $1.25) (W) contains humorous poems "with flashes of superior, donnish satire." New Yorker

Emerson, Ralph Waldo, 1803-1882

* Poems. household ed Houghton xxvii, 409p front $2.50 811

26-10292

"At times I think him the first of our lyric poets, his turns are so wild and unexpected. . . He often captures us with absolute beauty, the poetry that poets love,—the lilt and melody of Shelley . . . joined to precision of thought and outline." E. C. Stedman

G. S. Hubbell's "Concordance to the poems of Ralph Waldo Emerson" (Wilson, H.W. 1932 478p $4) is a complete concordance to his poems as they appear in v 9 of the Centenary edition of his works, listed in this Catalog in class 814. The Centenary edition is especially valuable for its notes

Engle, Paul

American song; a book of poems. Doubleday 1934 102p $1.75 811

34-27209

"His long, swinging rhythms, somewhat reminiscent of Whitman, have vigor and often beauty, and certain isolated poems—such as America Remembers—are admirable. Mr. Engle is immature, but his work has tang and substance and will be popular." Forum

"Both on the ground of its own distinguished quality and for its significance as an indicator of changing mood and temper among creative writers of the youngest generation, it merits the widest possible attention." N.Y. Times

Corn; a book of poems. Doubleday 1939 105p $2 811 (W) 39-27484

A volume of poems, in various metres, styles and lengths. Contents: Corn; In this time; For an apple-grower; Windy night; Rain; Canterbury

"It is a good book because it contains poetry by a poet writing about things he knows and understands. It is better than good because it is poetry felt deeply, transmitted with a sure and moving line. The craftsmanship is adequate, the imagery fresh, and arresting." Christian science monitor

Fearing, Kenneth, 1902-

Dead reckoning; a book of poetry. Random house 1938 56p $1.25 811

39-538

"Fearing's technique is more startling than that of any of his confrères. In this, the best of his three volumes of poems, he has freed himself of a dependence on purely muscular hard-boiled idioms which threatened to characterize him as the Ernest Hemingway of modern verse. In this book the tone is richer and the gamut is wider. The devices—the free use of the newspaper headline, the comic strip, the cliché of advertising, the ticker-tape, the radio signal—are not only appropriate, they are convincing." Sat. rev. of lit.

Ficke, Arthur Davison, 1883-

Secret, and other poems. Doubleday 1936 115p $1.75 811

36-27411

"In this volume of Ficke's there are a number of longer poems in free rhythms of speech. These poems, especially the first entitled, 'The Secret,' indicate the poet's philosophy. . . There are some charming and sincere love poems in this collection too, written by a man who has chosen steady feeling rather than excess of passion. The last group of poems in the book, called 'Various Phantoms,' deals with Death as a phantom or with those already dead." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Field, Eugene, 1850-1895

Poems. complete ed Scribner 1910 553p front $3.50 811

10-28193

Contains the poems published in "A little book of western verse," "Love songs of childhood," "With trumpet and drum," those scattered through "Culture's garland," and "Sharps and flats," and some fugitive verse

Field, Rachel Lyman, 1894-

Fear is the thorn. Macmillan 1936 88p $1.50 811

36-27172

"Minor verse, but of a charming personal quality which calls forth a response from the reader. Rachel Field's roots are in Maine, and her metaphor and simile are drawn, very often, from the sea or her Maine environment." N.Y. libraries

R. L. Field's "Points east, narratives of New England" (Macmillan 1930 126p illus $2) consists of four long narrative poems about Maine

Fletcher, John Gould, 1886-

Selected poems. Farrar 1938 237p $2.50 811

(W) 38-14768

Selections from the poet's previous books: "Irradiations—sand and spray," 1915; "Goblins and pagodas," 1916; "Tree of life," 1918; "Breakers and granite," 1921; "Black rock," 1928; "Preludes and symphonies," 1930; "XXIV elegies," 1935

"A marked figure among the early Imagists, John Gould Fletcher had a notable influence on the 'New Poetry' just before and during the war. . . Some of his poems are lovely and some of them powerful. And it should be pointed out that his poems of the late '20s and early '30s clearly surpass, in strength and depth those Imagist experiments for which he is commonly known." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Frost, Robert, 1875-

* Collected poems. Holt 1939 436p front $5 811

39-4925

Also available in the Halcyon house edition from Blue ribbon bks. at $1.69

Brings together six books previously published separately: A boy's will; North of Boston; Mountain interval; New Hampshire; West-running brook, Further range. These are still obtainable from Holt. A preface to the "Collected poems" describes Frost's experience with the beginning and development of a poem

Contains also: Ten mills; The outlands; Build soil; Afterthought

"Shows clearly that Frost has written as fine poetry as any living American and that the proportion of first-rate poetry to the whole is greater than that in the work of any other contemporary." New republic

Robert Frost's "Selected poems" (3d ed Holt 1934 247p $2.50, student's ed $2) may be sufficient for some libraries. It contains a representative selection of his work

Gregory, Horace, 1898-

Chorus for survival. Covici 1935 127p $2 811

35-3586

"A series of episodic poems, dramatic in mood, with settings indigenous to the poet's life both in this country and abroad." Book rev. digest

"Gregory's technique has evolved from the stages of derivation and experimentation to a form that is distinctly his own. . . When Mr. Gregory is dealing with a simple, forthright observation, or expressing a judgment that has behind it a single emotional drive, his images are clean and exact; and the rhythm holds them not stiffly, but with the fluidity of light in running water." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Guiney, Louise Imogen, 1861-1920

Happy ending. new ed with newly collected poems. Houghton 1927 194p front $2.50 811

27-21050

This 1927 edition of Miss Guiney's lyrics contains twelve poems here for the first time collected

"Out of the featureless ranks of the minor poets Miss Guiney has emerged with a shining loveliness and a fragile strength." Nation

Ballads of old New York; illus. by J. S. Williams. (new rev ed) Dutton 1939 300p illus $2 811

1 New York (City)—Description—Poetry
2 Poetry of places—New York (City)

39-6958

"Clever and merry rhymes, in the true tradition of Washington Irving, celebrating legendary or historical incidents in the history of New York City, from Dutch days onward." N.Y. state lib.

Death and General Putnam, and 101 other poems. Dutton 1935 158p $2 811

35-13487

"Though Mr Guiterman reveals his finest technical accomplishment in lightly humorous verse, he often treats serious subjects with freshness and individuality. Some of his verse perhaps deserves no higher rating than topical or popular. But even if he sometimes gives the impression of hunting for themes, he has the feeling and the command of phrase to bestow on many of them at least a fleeting poignance and charm, with a suggestion of something deep and true below the surface." Springfield Republican

Lyric laughter. Dutton 1939 288p $2.50 811

(W) 39-28980

"A collection of new verses and selections from previous books. . . In this volume are poems about New York, about American life, about life in general, about European places and institutions (including London 'bobbies'), and about sundry themes from 'The Curse of the Antique' to the League of Nations." Springfield Republican

Hard, Walter R.
Vermont valley. Harcourt 1939 187p $2.50 811

39-20200

"Stories of New England life and character told tersely in free verse. The dry humor will appeal to all who know this region and its people, either by actual contact or thru other books." Wis. bul.

Harte, Bret, 1839-1902
Poetical works. Houghton 324p front $2.50 811

26-21389

Humor, pathos and power of characterization are combined to portray vividly men and conditions in the western mining camps during the last half of the nineteenth century

Hill, Frank Ernest, 1888-
Westward star. Day 1934 275p $2.50 811

1 Overland journeys to the Pacific—Poetry 34-33648

"A novel in verse telling a tale of the westward journey of a group of Americans in 1847. The main thread of the story is the romance of Celeste, a girl with Puritan upbringing, and Emmet, a trader of the plains." Book rev. digest

"Presents a stirring picture of courage and hardship, and its theme is obviously one of inexhaustible interest for the people of this country." N.Y. Post

Hillyer, Robert Silliman, 1895-
Collected verse. Knopf 1933 190p $2 811

33-30817

"Over 100 lyrics, ballads and sonnets, which have appeared in magazines and in the poet's previously published volumes, showing a finished workmanship, untouched by modern influences, and a sensitive awareness of the beauties of nature. Winner of Pulitzer prize for poetry in 1934." N.Y. libraries

Hoffenstein, Samuel, 1890-
Poems in praise of practically nothing. Liveright 1928 217p $2 811

28-8645

Also available in the Star ser. (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"Sardonic, exceedingly clever, witty verse, in which Hoffenstein tilts at mankind in general and womankind in particular." N.Y. libraries

"At his best he can be gorgeously biting, despite his leaning toward brittle wisecrackery,—and toward the end of the book, in the 'Interlude, for a Solitary Flute,' he flashes into real poetry that rouses our admiration." Sat. rev. of lit.

Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1809-1894
* Complete poetical works. Cambridge ed Houghton xxi,352p front $3.50 811

4-13823

Also available in the household edition (Houghton $2.50)

"From his poetry many delightfully humorous, sentimental, and pathetic pieces may be selected. . . Holmes yields to no one as the laureate of a college, of a cultured city, and of graceful old age, and to few as an urbane writer of familiar verse." W. P. Trent's Hist. of Amer. literature

Hughes, Langston, 1902-
Dream keeper, and other poems; with illus. by Helen Sewell. Knopf 1932 77p illus $2 811

32-19486

The author has made this selection for young people from the verse included in "Weary blues" and "Fine clothes to the Jew," and has added some new poems

"The brevity of many of the selections greatly enhances their effectiveness. They are simple, human, vivid, tingling with sincerity." Boston Transcript

Jeffers, Robinson, 1887-
* Selected poetry. Random house 1938 622p front $3.50 811

(W) 38-28958

Mr Jeffers, with the collaboration of his wife, has chosen for this volume one hundred and twenty-five of his most significant poems, including such long narrative works as "Roan stallion," "Tamar," "The tower beyond tragedy," "Thurso's landing," "Descent to the dead," "Give your heart to the hawks"

The following poems by Robinson Jeffers may be obtained separately:

Jeffers, Robinson. Roan stallion, Tamar, and other poems; with a new introduction by the author. Modern lib. 1935 295p 95c Containing 15 more poems than the edition of this title still published by Random house at $2.50

God's trombones; seven Negro sermons in verse; drawings by Aaron Douglas, lettering by C. B. Falls. Viking 1927 56p illus $2.50 811

27-12269

"Seven Negro sermons in verse. Out of memories of his boyhood, the poet has recreated the art of the old time preachers, achieving effects quite remarkably without the use of dialect." Wis. bul.

Kilmer, Joyce, 1886-1918
Joyce Kilmer; ed. with a memoir by R. C. Holliday. Doubleday 1918 2v illus o.p. 1939 811

19-148

"Volume one collects his poems, and contains an unusually well drawn memoir by Robert Cortes Holliday which shows us the personality of the man and poet. Volume two contains six essays, a selection from his letters, many written from France, and four miscellaneous pieces." Wis. bul.

Joyce Kilmer's "Trees and other poems" (Doubleday 1914 75p $1.25) is a smaller collection of the author's early poetry which might be sufficient for the needs of small libraries

Leonard, William Ellery, 1876-
Two lives; a poem. Viking 1925 109p $2 811
25-22776

"In three sonnet sequences the story is told of an intimate personal tragedy and the anguish of a soul racked by conscience." Book rev. digest
"Not the least remarkable feature of the poem is the sheer power of the narrative to startle and waylay. The bald and dreadful tale takes on majesty and beauty by the author's employment of the poetic medium, and more especially by the use of the grave, succinct, austere sonnet stanza." N.Y. Tribune

Lindsay, Vachel, 1879-
Collected poems. rev and illus ed Macmillan 1925 lxii,464p illus $3.50 811
25-10046

"A second edition of the complete poems which adds 136 pages and is illustrated with Mr. Lindsay's characteristic drawings." Bkl.
"Poetry especially written to be read or chanted aloud. It does not disdain the use of 'shuffle along' jazz measures, but is curiously effective. Sometimes Lindsay even indicates the musical instruments which should accompany the chanting, as bass drums, banjos, and tambourines." Chicago

Vachel Lindsay's "Selected poems" in the Modern readers' series (Macmillan 1931 236p front $1) is a good collection edited with an introduction by Hazelton Spencer

Longfellow, Henry Wadsworth, 1807-1882
* Complete poetical works. Cambridge ed Houghton xxi,689p front $3.50 811
4-13830

"His place is not with the few eminent poets of the world, or even of his century . . . but it is, legitimately and permanently, in the forefront of the small band of important writers in verse and in prose who during the first century of the republic's existence laid firmly and upon more or less democratic lines the foundations of a native literature." Cambridge hist. of Amer. lit.

Lowell, Amy, 1874-1925
Selected poems; ed. by J. L. Lowes. Houghton 1928 244p $3 811
28-26446

From Amy Lowell's eleven volumes of verse Mr Lowes has made a selection of her most distinctive and permanent work
"The labor of condensation has been performed with a fine and scholarly tact, and the volume will certainly come to represent for most readers all that is permanently interesting in Amy Lowell's work." Springfield Republican

Lowell, James Russell, 1819-1891
* Complete poetical works. Cambridge ed Houghton 492p front $3.50 811

His verses are "a rapid fire of wit and common sense and no poems have ever more distinctly revealed the New England temper. . . The best have become a lasting part of our popular literature." Cambridge hist. of Amer. literature

MacLeish, Archibald, 1892-
America was promises. Duell 1939 20p 75c 811
(W) 39-28995

"A summons to Americans to look about and redeem the promises which were made for them by the spiritual founders of the nation. There is much in the poem that is extremely beautiful but it is a little too vague to be thoroughly successful." Book-of-the-month club news

Poems, 1924-1933. Houghton 1933 303p $3 811
34-23

"This book is not a 'collected edition' of my poems nor does it purport to trace my development as a poet. . . What I have done here has been to select from poems already published and from poems not yet published, those pieces I can now reread without embarrassment." Foreword
"I think it is the sensitive, lyrical MacLeish who is worthy of our attention. It is he, the Romantic, nostalgic poet who says most and who is the better artist. . . It is hardly necessary for me to add that any book that contains 'You, Andrew Marvell' and the opening lines of 'Conquistador' (though the entire poem is included) is a valuable item in any library of contemporary poetry." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Archibald MacLeish's "Conquistador" is also available separately (Houghton 1932 114p map $2.50) It tells the story of the conquest of Mexico by Cortez

Public speech, poems. Farrar 1936 [40]p $1 811
36-27181

"This new volume of poems contains ten short pieces, chiefly upon current political and social problems, and a sequence of ten more poems addressed to The Woman on the Stair." Book rev. digest
"These poems are bare and direct; as with most good aphoristic verse their merit consists in eloquence, a grave wit, and the rush of passionate sincerity. . . The love poems that compose the second half of this volume contain some of his finest imagery." Nation

Madeleva, sister, 1887-
Selected poems. Macmillan 1939 119p $1.60 811

Millay, Edna St Vincent, 1892-

Conversation at midnight. Harper 1937 126p $2 811

(W) 37-16334

"In this sequence of poems, a dialog participated in by six men of different backgrounds, Miss Millay has departed from the lyrical form in which she has found such great success. The conversation is the conversation of today: politics, war, fascism, communism. It is probably not the best of the poet's work, but it is provocative and timely, and there are passages of great beauty." Bkl.

Fatal interview. Harper 1931 52p $2 811

31-9922

"A sequence of 52 distinguished and beautiful love sonnets in the Shakespearean tradition. Rich as many of the lines are in classic symbols, the poet has stamped the whole with her own individual idiom." N.Y. libraries

Harp-weaver, and other poems. Harper 1923 93p $2 811

23-27470

"Verse of a singing lyric quality, written with skill and a charming simplicity of expression. The predominant theme is the transitoriness of love, but in mood the range is wide, from the ironic to the whimsical, and from the tragic to the tender." N.Y. state lib.

Received the Pulitzer prize in 1923

Huntsman, what quarry? poems. Harper 1939 94p $2 811

"Here, once more, is that exact geometry of image and idea which Miss Millay has made almost a walled estate of her own. . . I think the reader will see a great advance in these new songs. . . This advance is a widening of Edna Millay's reach to take in troubled and eager lovers of life en masse." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Renascence and other poems. Harper 1917 73p $2 811

31-14569

Contains five sonnets, some brief lyrics and three long poems: Renascence, Interim and Suicide

"Miss Millay's popularity is due to the spontaneousness of her art. . . Surface reading does not do her justice, but it gives a sure delight—whether she is following simple song patterns with the deftness of a Housman, or recreating the complexities of the ode . . . or trying out a free-verse idiom. . . Miss Millay has several times duplicated her achievement in 'Renascence,' but she has not surpassed it." Loggins' "I hear America"

Second April. Harper 1921 112p $2 811

[21-26734]

"Poetry with a wayward personal charm. It alternates joy and sadness, but shows always a passion for beauty." Chicago

"In her lyrical expression of simple yet strong emotions, of enjoyments, longings, and griefs, there is evidence enough that here emerges a writer to be reckoned with." Times (London) lit. sup.

Wine from these grapes. Harper 1934 91p $2 811

34-37456

Contains new lyrics and a sonnet sequence in the Petrarchian tradition entitled Epitaph for the race of man

"Shows the same distinguished workmanship which has characterized Miss Millay's poetry from the very first; and there is, as always, the same unerring instinct for the poetical, the same unfailing grasp of the poetic approach to an idea as differentiated from what might be termed the prose approach. On the other hand, one misses somewhat this poet's earlier lightness of touch, that magic lyric deftness. . . Of recent years the work of this poet has become increasingly grave." N.Y. Times

Two other collections of the author's lyrics are:

Millay, E. St V. Buck in the snow. Harper 1928 69p $2

Millay, E. St V. Few figs from thistles. Harper 1923 39p $2

Miller, Joaquin, 1841-1913

Poetical works; ed. with an introduction and notes by S. P. Sherman. Putnam 1923 587p front o.p. 1939 811

23-7262

A complete one-volume edition of Joaquin Miller's poems

"There is little variety of verse form, but there is much and lavish beauty mingled, here and there, with sentimentality and overemphatic rhythm. Even in the most erring of them one comes upon memorable lines, and recognizes the sincerity and vigor of this pioneer who was born in a covered wagon, and who spent his last years on the hills overlooking San Francisco Bay." Bookman

Moody, William Vaughn, 1869-1910

Poems and poetic dramas. Houghton 1912 448p (Poems and plays, v 1) o.p. 1939 811

Contents: Gloucester moors, and other poems; Second coming, and later poems; Poetic dramas; Fire-bringer; Masque of judgment; Death of Eve (a fragment)

"Moody's poetry . . . is notable for its freedom from response to the obvious, the trivial, the merely pretty. This is, no doubt, one reason why, for all his rich and various melody, his wealth of fresh and vivid imagery, his modernity, his worship of beauty and love, his depth of spiritual emotion, he is not popular, is indeed hardly remembered by any except those to whom poetry is not an idle pastime, but a passion." J. M. Manly in Introduction

W. V. Moody's "Selected poems; ed. with introduction by R. M. Lovett" (Houghton 1931 200p $2.50) is selected from the above work

Moore, Marianne, 1887-

Selected poems; with an introduction by T. S. Eliot. Macmillan 1935 126p $2.25 811

35-5389

Contains the author's selection of all she is willing to reprint from "Observations" published in 1924, and poems written since that date

"Miss Moore observes minutely and intently with the eye, and with the mind precisely and pragmatically sets down her observations. Her poems are made up of brightly colored images with meaningful and often moral connections. . . The effect she produces is always positive and exhilarating." N.Y. Times

Morley, Christopher Darlington

Poems. Doubleday 1929 361p $2.50 811

29-25329

A collected edition containing "Parsons' pleasure," "Songs for a little house," "The rocking horse," "Hide and seek," "Translations from the Chinese," and "Toulemonde"

Nathan, Robert, 1894-

Selected poems. Knopf 1935 37p $2 811

35-29608

"Those who know Robert Nathan only as a novelist should acquaint themselves with the truly lyric singer who is heard in these thirty-six short poems." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"It will endure because it has the essence of poetry, because above and beyond its musical expression it possesses a spiritual quality characteristic of the ancient literature of Judaism." Christian science monitor

Neihardt, John Gneisenau, 1881-

Collected poems. Macmillan 1926 642p o.p. 1939 811

26-21770

"In this book Mr. Neihardt has brought together his three epics of the west—'The Song of Three Friends,' 'The Song of Hugh Glass,' and 'The Song of the Indian Wars'; the poems previously published in one volume called 'The Quest,' and his two poetic dramas which were published together under the title of 'Two Mothers.'" Chicago

"He has given us vivid, heroic, authentic canvases. He has handled the flow of his couplets with power and beauty, he has evoked thrilling drama. His lyric period is past; but he never was a lyric poet of the first water, while he is nigh to be narrative poet of that kind." Sat. rev. of lit.

J. G. Neihardt's "Song of the Messiah" (Macmillan 1935 110p $1.75) is the final volume of his "Cycle of the West"

Parker, Mrs Dorothy (Rothschild) 1893-

Collected poems: Not so deep as a well; decorated by Valenti Angelo. Viking 1936 210p $2.50 811

36-28592

Contains the poems which appeared in the author's former volumes: "Enough rope," "Sunset gun," and "Death and taxes," together with several new verses not hitherto published in book form

"One comes back to Mrs. Parker's light verse with the greatest pleasure; with its sharp wit, its clean bite, its perfectly conscious—and hence delightful—archness, it stands re-reading amply." N.Y. Times

Poe, Edgar Allan, 1809-1849

* Works: Poems and three essays on poetry; ed. by R. B. Johnson. . . Oxford 570p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 811

27-27611

Complete poetical works. Includes also "Narrative of Arthur Gordon Pym" and prose miscellanies

"His poems convey no moral, they echo no call to duty, they celebrate beauty only, beauty immaterial and evanescent; they are their own excuse for being." Brander Matthews

There is also an edition by E. C. Stedman and G. E. Woodberry (Scribner 1914 $2) in the Scribner's series of modern poets

Prokosch, Frederic, 1909-

Carnival; poems. Harper 1938 53p $2 811

[38-17199]

"Highly imaginative, beautifully worded lyrics, expressing the struggle of the individual against the deepening night of the modern world." Cincinnati

Reese, Lizette Woodworth, 1856-1935

Selected poems. Doran 1926 187p o.p. 1939 811

26-12754

"Lizette Woodworth Reese's poetry has for its characteristic quality an emotion that has been schooled and that finds its interpretation in things that traditionally have been found lovable—simple and natural things." Chicago

Riding, Laura, 1901-

Collected poems. Random house 1938 477p illus $4 811

(W) 39-7893

The poems in this edition were collected from the following books: Close chaplet; Love as love, death as death; Poems: A joking word; Though gently; Twenty poems less; Poet: A lying word; Voltaire; Laura and Francisca; Life of the dead; Epilogue, v. I, II and III; and from hitherto unpublished work

"She relies little or not at all on the conventional decorations associated with poetry or on its recognised vehicles, metre, rhyme. Her emotion strives constantly for an original expression. Her meaning is in general very difficult to seize, often because she tends to use words of a disarming simplicity, repeating them insistently in unexpected combinations." Manchester guardian

Riley, James Whitcomb, 1849-1916

Best loved poems and Ballads; with illus. by E. F. Betts. Blue ribbon bks. 407p illus $1 811

35-24927

Combining in one volume two books formerly issued separately: "Best loved poems" and "Best loved home ballads." One poem: That old sweetheart of mine, missing from the previous volumes has been added

Riley, James W.—Continued
Complete poetical works; preface by D. C. Peattie. Bobbs 1937 886p front $3 811

38-8805

Contains 1044 poems arranged in the order in which they were written except that "Flying islands of the night" is placed at end. Index of titles and first lines

"He wrote of the everyday life of rustic America. . . He had genuine sympathy for ordinary folk, for animals, for nature . . . Though there are capacities in the American mind and character that he does not appeal to, it is undeniable that he appeals urgently to the normal thoughts and feelings of the divine average." Cambridge hist. of Amer. lit.

Music: p656-57

Two other collections of poems by Riley are:

Riley, J. W. Hoosier book; containing poems in dialect, collected and arranged by H. H. Howland. Bobbs 1916 598p $2

Rittenhouse, Jessie Belle, 1869-
Moving tide; new and selected lyrics. Houghton 1939 141p $2 811

39-24480

"A selection of lyrics from the poet's three volumes, with a group of new poems." Bkl.

Roberts, Elizabeth Madox, 1886-
Song in the meadow; poems. Viking 1940 110p $2 811

40-27470

The first group, "Maidens and loves," includes poems of childhood. The lyrics of the second group concern themselves with the world today, and these pieces are followed by a final section of Kentucky legends in verse

"It is full of lilting melodies, catches and folk tunes. . . Indeed, it is her handling of cadence and her sensuous delight in the tone-color of words and phrases that is the chief interest of her work." Books N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Robinson, Edwin Arlington, 1869-1935
‡ Collected poems. Macmillan 1937 1498p $3 811

37-27280

New edition of the author's "Collected poems" published in 1929. Recent short poems and the later long narrative poems have been added. Contents: Man against the sky; Children of the night; Captain Craig, etc; Merlin; Town down the river; Lancelot; Three taverns; Avon's harvest, etc; Tristram; Roman Bartholow; Dionysus in doubt; Man who died twice; Cavender's house; Glory of the nightingales; Matthias at the door; Nicodemus; Talifer; Amaranth; King Jasper

Sandburg, Carl, 1878-
The people, yes. Harcourt 1936 286p $2.50 811

36-27367

"The longest and most sustained piece of work [the author] has yet done in verse. It is a book that will irritate some; and some will find it meaningless. . . It is as honest as it is questioning and it speaks its deep convictions in a tongue we know." S. V. Benét in Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Selected poems; ed. by Rebecca West (pseud). Harcourt 1926 289p $2 811

26-15796

Contains poems from "Chicago poems," "Cornhuskers" and also two groups entitled "Smoke and steel" and "Slabs of the sunburst West." In these groups, however, there are not so many poems as in the volume entered below

"Rebecca West's introduction on Carl Sandburg and Chicago is worth reading as an English commentary on America. The poems are well chosen and the whole is a good representative volume for a library." Wis. bul.

"There is a breadth of emotion in the smallest of the fragments; an amplitude, recognizably American in range." Sat. rev. of lit.

Smoke and steel and Slabs of the sunburnt West. Harcourt 2v in 1 $2.75 811

38-27105

Reprint of two of Sandburg's early volumes of poems, Smoke and Steel and Slabs of the Sunburnt West. Contains many poems originally published in periodicals and many not found in his "Selected poems"

Carl Sandburg's "Early moon; illus. by James Daugherty" (Harcourt 1930 136p illus $2.50) is a selection of seventy of the author's poems for young people, with a brief introduction on poetry in general

Sarett, Lew R. 1888-
Wings against the moon. Holt 1931 127p $2 811

31-24517

"Dramatic lyrics and narratives, nature and love lyrics, and character sketches of wild animals and primitive backwoods folk—Indians, French-Canadians, rangers, and timber-cruisers." Cleveland

"Poems which . . . show the author's deep affection for his western country and his power to give a universal significance to its natural life." Pittsburgh

Seeger, Alan, 1888-1916
Poems; with an introduction by William Archer. Scribner 1916 xlvi,174p $2 811

16-24961

"Imaginative beauty and much nobility of expression mark all of these poems, but their viewpoint is always that of the conventionally romantic." Bookman

Sill, Edward Rowland, 1841-1887
Poetical works. household ed Houghton xxi,423p front o.p. 1939 811

6-35717

First published in one volume in 1902

"He was a poet of strong spiritual feeling and 'The Fool's Prayer' and 'Opportunity' are perenially popular." Bessie Graham's Bookman's manual

Speyer, Mrs Leonora (von Stosch) 1872-
Slow wall; poems, new & selected. Knopf 1939 140p $2 811

(W) 38-29075

Twenty-five new poems, together with several selected from "Fiddler's farewell" and "Naked heel"

"What distinguishes the poetry of Leonora Speyer is its boldness. Amongst poems of today that are hesitating and tentative, hers are remarkable for a direct seizure of the subject and a swift presentation of the image. . . With its variety and vitality, 'Slow Wall' is a stirring collection of poems." Sat. rev. of lit.

Stevens, Wallace, 1879-

The man with the blue guitar & other poems. Knopf 1937 82p $2 811

37-30374

"The present volume contains the long symphonic poem, 'Owl's Clover,' . . . an opening section of some thirty short poems, the 'blue guitar' pieces; and a concluding group of five longer poems. The new poems are a continuation and expansion of the corollary-theme of 'Owl's Clover,'—'the opposition between things as they are and things as imagined." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Stuart, Jesse, 1907-

Man with a bull-tongue plow. Dutton 1934 361p $3 811

34-34715

"A volume containing more than seven hundred sonnets by a young Kentucky farmer. Many of the poems are autobiographical; others sing the writer's love of his hill-side farm; and others, suggesting the manner of the Spoon River Anthology, portray friends and neighbors." Book rev. digest

"At least half the time the author is careless, trite or perfuntory; but always he is speaking in his own words about his own people. . . . At their best, his poems have the springtime freshness of medieval ballads. Their worst fault is that they are written without effort or economy." New republic

Tabb, John Banister, 1845-1909

Poetry of Father Tabb, John Banister Tabb; ed. by F. A. Litz. Dodd 1928 492p front $3 811

28-18053

"The verse of Father Tabb has for long appealed widely, both to Catholics and to non-Catholics. His epigrammatic gift was great, his insight often profound." Sat. rev. of lit.

Taggard, Genevieve, 1894-

Collected poems, 1918-1938. Harper 1938 164p $2.50 811

(W) 38-28923

Eighty-four poems selected from the author's work over a period of years ranging from 1918 to 1938. Replaces the volume entitled "Travelling standing still"

"Each poem is dated; and it is interesting and instructive to find, side by side throughout the book, a simple personal love or nature lyric written some fifteen years back, and a poem of specific social comment of recent date." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Tate, Allen, 1899-

Selected poems. Scribner 1937 112p $2 811

37-22933

Forty-five poems selected by this American author from his earlier books

"Tate imposes on himself the task of producing a reality of values which no population could possibly experience—and with which it need not agree—except in the form of poetry. There is enough of that reality in this book to give it the high seriousness and power of an acute critical intelligence, hard at work on the most stubborn and invigorating problems of our time." New republic

Teasdale, Sara, 1884-1933

Collected poems. Macmillan 1937 311p front $2.50 811

(W) 37-28625

In this collection may be found most of the poems from eight of the author's books: "Helen of Troy," "Rivers to the sea," "Love songs," "Flame and shadow," "Dark of the moon," "Strange victory," and "Sonnets to Duse." Ten of the twenty-five poems found in her "Stars to-night," are included. The few poems not included were omitted in accordance with Miss Teasdale's wishes

Some of the earlier volumes by Sara Teasdale may be obtained separately:

Teasdale, Sara. Dark of the moon. Macmillan 1926 92p $1.50

Teasdale, Sara. Flame and shadows. Macmillan 1920 144p $1.75

Teasdale, Sara. Love songs. Macmillan 1917 91p $1.75

Untermeyer, Louis, 1885-

Selected poems and parodies. Harcourt 1935 367p $3 811

35-16449

"Untermeyer's versatility, technical and lyric skill, spontaneity of mood, and cleverness as a parodist are apparent in this selection from his previous volumes of poetry, and in a small group of new poems. Arrangement is for the most part chronological." N.Y. libraries

Van Doren, Mark, 1894-

* Collected poems; 1922-1938. Holt 1939 384p $3.50 811

(W) 39-5244

"Except for certain changes and omissions, and except for the twenty-one new poems in the section called America's Mythology, this collection reproduces the contents of six volumes written since 1922 and published since 1924. None of the volumes is reprinted in its entirety, a total of forty-five poems having been suppressed, and changes having been made in a considerable number of those that remain." Preface

"These poems have come out of a fruitful twenty years of writing, and they make a large book, but one in which the variety and freshness of subject matter are unusual. . . . For as a poet representing his nation and time, Mark Van Doren holds a most considerable position." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Van Dyke, Henry, 1852-1933

Poems. new and rev ed with many hitherto uncollected. Scribner 1920 582p front $3.50 811

21-3283

Poems which reflect a love of nature as well as a high moral purpose. This edition includes the drama, "The house of Rimmon"; the poems included in the volumes, "Music," "The toiling of Felix," "The builders" and the "White bees" and many others hitherto uncollected

Complete poetry & selected prose and letters; ed. by Emory Holloway. Random house [1938] xxxix,1116p $3.50 811
(W) [38-27614]

"Includes all of the man's poems except a few juvenile verses, as well as generous selections from the prose and nearly 200 pages of letters; the most complete of the one-volume Whitmans." New Republic

"This noble edition, beautifully produced and printed, with copious notes and with examples of his letters and journalism should persuade many people to read his poetry in its entirety." New statesman and Nation

* Leaves of grass; from the text of the edition authorized and editorially supervised by his literary executors, R. M. Bucke, T. B. Harned, and H. L. Traubel; ed. by Emory Holloway. Doubleday 1924 xxiii,728p $3 811
25-1488

Also obtainable from Modern lib. at $1.25 comprising all the poems written by Walt Whitman, following the arrangement of the edition of 1891-92

"An excellent inclusive edition, in text and arrangement following the Putnam edition of 1902. Whitman's prefaces to his volumes of poetry of 1855, '72, '76 and '88 have been brought together at the back of the book. A list of variorum readings and an alphabetical title index are included." Bkl.

" 'Leaves of Grass,' [is] a book of singular service, a book which tumbled the world upside down for me, blew into space a thousand cobwebs of genteel and ethical illusions, and, having thus shaken my tabernacle of lies, set me back again upon a strong foundation of all the original and manly virtues. But it is, once more, only a book for those who have the gift of reading." R. L. Stevenson

Whittier, John Greenleaf, 1807-1892
* Complete poetical works. Cambridge ed Houghton xxii,542p front $3.50 811
4-13847

"Whether his work is poetry or rhymed propaganda, it is literature, for it expresses a man and events in words that are today alive with emotion." J. Macy's Spirit of American literature

Williams, William Carlos, 1883-
Complete collected poems, 1906-1938. New directions 1938 317p $3 811
39-502

"It is not easy poetry. Here is none of the raw casualness of Sandburg's style, or the simple whimsicalities of Lindsay. Williams belongs to a stricter school... Of all the imagists Williams remains the one who has been truest to their principles of being concise and concrete, and his abrupt music is wholly his own." Nation

Zaturenska, Marya Alexandrovna
Cold morning sky. Macmillan 1937 62p $1.50 811
(W) 37-22934

Lyric poems which abound in symbolism. Awarded the Pulitzer prize, 1938

"I believe I detect in Miss Zaturenska's work an effort to deliver poetry from the rhetoric of post-war poets. . . She boasts an enviable musical sense, a superb judgment of phrase, a deft presentment of symbols, and a surging but undercurrent energy. She has grown more enterprising metrically and more varying in tone, since her first book." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

811C CANADIAN POETRY

There is no separate number in the 12th edition of the Dewey decimal classification for Canadian literature, but it is suggested there that C be prefixed to 810 or 820 as desired. In this catalog the C has been added to the subdivisions of 810. Some libraries may prefer to class with English literature

Carman, Bliss, 1861-1929
Bliss Carman's poems. Dodd 1931 546p $3.50 811C
31-28114

This volume contains the poems previously published in the author's "Later poems"; "Ballads and lyrics"; "Far horizons"; "Wild garden"; and "Sanctuary" (with a few omissions). A few new poems have been added. "Ballads and lyrics" is a selection from his "Low tide on Grand Pré," "Ballads of Lost Haven," "By the Aurelian wall," "Behind the Arras," "A winter holiday," and the "Songs from Vagabondia" series

"Carman . . . was the lyricist whose simple business was to sing. And at his best I venture to say that he belonged in noble company." W. R. Benét in Sat. rev. of lit.

Bliss Carman's "Ballads and lyrics" is still available separately (Dodd 1924 293p $2)

Drummond, William Henry, 1854-1907
Poetical works; with an introduction by Louis Fréchette and an appreciation by Neil Munro. Putnam 1912 xxxv,449p front $3.50 811C
12-23175

Contains a biographical and critical sketch by Neil Munro, and an appreciative introduction in French by Louis Fréchette

"The poems which he wrote in his proper person as Dr. Drummond in only a few instances rise above mediocrity, and sometimes fall below it. But as soon as he puts on 'de-ole-tam ceincture' of Pierre or Bateese or Jeremie or the historian of the fate of the 'Julie Plante,' inspiration comes with it. 'The curé of Calumette' is already a classic and the less-known 'Doctor Hilaire' is a good companion piece." N.Y. Times

McCrae, John, 1872-1918
In Flanders fields, and other poems; with an essay in character, by Sir Andrew Macphail. Putnam 1919 141p illus $1.75 811C
19-4006

A collection of the poems of this physician, soldier, and poet, who died in France as a Lieutenant-Colonel with the Canadian forces in the European war of 1914-1918

"McCrae could imitate Kipling or Newbolt with skill. But he was at his best when he was entirely himself—a soldier expressing brave, human, inspiring thought in a form that had a certain modest perfection." Athenaeum

Service, Robert William, 1876-
Complete poems. Dodd 5v in 1 $3.50

New Yorker book of verse; an anthology of poems first published in the New Yorker, 1925-1935. Harcourt 1935 xx, 311p $2.50 811.08
1 American poetry—Collections 35-27417
An anthology of about three hundred poems by contemporary poets, selected from the four thousand printed in the New Yorker from 1925 to 1935
"On the whole, the average of the verse is more serious in tone than the publication from which it is taken. Even the light verse often has a definite idea besides nonsense or mere flippancy. The reader will get more variety than he expects and, it may be, a higher average quality as well." Springfield Republican

1 American poetry—Collections 27-24634
Also available in a satisfactory inexpensive reprint in the Bonibooks (Boni $1)
"A conservative selection from American poetry from Revolutionary times to the present, the lyric poetry of the compiler's own taste predominating. The selection from the older poets will be found more satisfactory than that for the new." Wis. bul.

Pound, Louise, 1872-
(ed.) American ballads and songs. Scribner 1922 xxxvi,266p (Modern student's lib.) $1 811.08
1 Ballads 22-21580
"A book of some slight reference value; but of more definite appeal to lovers of folk-songs and to the student of social traditions in this country. Arrangement is by type of material, rather than section or chronology; e.g., English and Scottish ballads in America, Western ballads and songs, Dialogue, Nursery and Game songs, etc. The book has an interesting introduction on the sources and social significance of folk-ballads, and source notes in the back for individual ballads." Wis. bul.

1 American poetry—Collections 32-27285

"This anthology does not attempt to represent every period of American literture nor every American poet who has a name. The fifty-seven poets included were chosen because they seemed to the editor to possess genuine distinction, and each of these is represented with as many of his poems as was considered necessary to prove their worth and give knowledge of the poet. Contains title, first line, and biographical indexes." Wis. bul.

811.08C Canadian poetry—Collections

There is no separate number in the 12th edition of the Dewey decimal classification for Canadian literature, but it is suggested there that C be prefixed to 810 or 820 as desired. In this catalog the C has been added to the subdivisions of 810. Some libraries may prefer to class with English literature

1 Canadian poetry—Collections 2 Poets, Canadian [27-26597]

The revised edition of this Canadian anthology contains 28 poets and 212 poems not included in the first edition published in 1916. There is a brief biographical sketch and a portrait of each poet represented

"A book of generous format and of 536 pages, it is, like most such collections, rather too inclusive. However, such poets as Dr. Drummond, Charles G. D. Roberts, with his brother, Theodore Goodridge Roberts, and his son, Lloyd Roberts, Bliss Carman, Archibald Lampman, Arthur Stringer, Constance Lindsay Skinner, and Robert W. Service give it distinction and interest." Outlook

32-24803
First edition 1926. Chapters on T. S. Eliot, Elinor Wylie, Archibald MacLeish, Lew Sarett and Memories of Vachel Lindsay have been added and other essays revised to consider poetry written since the first edition was published. About half of the essays deal with some American poets of today. Studies of certain English poets of an older day, a group of comments and queries and four essays on poetic rhythms make up the rest of the volume.
"Miss Monroe's comments on such themes are always worth attention, and if she has her prejudices, let us grant that she has earned her right to them." Outlook

"At once a 'reestablishment and revision' of the authors' judgments contained in his first survey, 'The new era in American poetry.' New material has been added, and the whole has been largely rewritten and rearranged. The poets are, for the most part, grouped under such titles as Lyricists, Impressionists, and Cerebralists. Well-bound and printed and contains seventeen portraits." N.Y. state lib.
"As an anthology the book is valuable throughout. As criticism it ranges all the way from gossip and vulgarity to the genuine thing. All of it is vigorous, and some of it is subtle. There are quantities of information." Nation

"Critical studies of the work of American poets from the early colonial period to the present. The author attempts to show that the three strains of English poetry—Celtic fantasy, Norman zest, and Anglo-Saxon contemplation—are still evident in American poetry." Pittsburgh
"Hectic, contradictory, now and then inaccurate, yet on the whole it gives brilliantly the main outline of our past and the rich promise of our present Renaissance." N.Y. Times

812 AMERICAN DRAMA

Altho many separate plays have been listed here, the small public library may prefer to buy heavily in classes 808.82 and 812.08 and not duplicate plays available in collections. Because selection of individual plays will depend on the collections held, no stars have been added

Collections indexed in Firkins (see class 808.82 Bibl.) are not indexed in this Catalog

Many of the plays listed below may be found in the catalogs of Samuel French and Walter Baker at lower prices. These have been given only when no other edition is in print

Akins, Zoë, 1886-
Old maid; dramatized by Zoë Akins from the novel by Edith Wharton. Appleton-Century 1935 188p $2 812
35-5390
"Dramatization of Edith Wharton's poignant story of the same title. The scene is New York City, and the action continues through five episodes from the 1830's to the 1850's, reflecting the social manners and conventions of the period. Awarded the 1934 Pulitzer prize for drama." N.Y. libraries

Anderson, Maxwell, 1888-

Elizabeth the queen; a play in three acts. Longmans 1930 168p $2 812

1 Elizabeth, queen of England, 1533-1603—Drama 30-32414

"There are dignity and high purpose, considerable interest and a certain amount of tragedy in this treatment of the Elizabeth and Essex episode." Providence

Key largo; a play in prologue and two acts. Anderson house 1939 125p $2.50 812

(W) 39-29431

In this play Mr Anderson has employed the blank verse medium. It is the story of King McCloud, an American who takes part in the Spanish Civil war, loses his faith along with his illusions, and struggles back to a faith in the end

Knickerbocker holiday; a musical comedy in two acts; book and lyrics by Maxwell Anderson as written to be set to music by Kurt Weill; illus. by R. H. Mutrux. Anderson house 1938 109p illus $2.50 812

(W) 39-5896

The scene is laid in the year 1647, when New York was called Nieuw Amsterdam and Pieter Stuyvesant was the Dutch governor. Other names occurring in the cast are Vanderbilt, Roosevelt, de Peyster, de Vries, Van Rensselaer, Van Courtlandt, jr., Schermerhorn

Mary of Scotland; a play in three acts. Doubleday 1934 202p $2 812

1 Mary Stuart, queen of the Scots, 1542-1587—Drama 34-3714

"Effective, well knit as a chronicle-history, alive with character conflict in its episodes, and achieving beauty and richness of speech and dignity of understanding." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Winterset; a play in three acts. Anderson house 1935 134p $2.50 812

35-27431

"A play presumably based in part on the Sacco-Vanzetti case. The chief characters are the son of a man executed for a crime he did not commit; the judge who tried the case; an old Jew; and the latter's son and daughter who play a part in the son's attempt to vindicate his father. The play is written in poetic prose." Book rev. digest

"An effective combination of poetry and melodrama which results in a moving tragedy of the underworld." Cleveland

Other plays by this playwright which are probably of equal interest are:

"They all disclose the vigor and the excitement of life. While not plays of unusual dramatic power, or indeed of unusual theatric power (and we except, of course, 'What Price Glory?') they make for extremely entertaining reading." Literary rev.

Barry, Philip, 1896-

Holiday; a comedy in three acts. French 1929 205p $2 812

29-7881

"A comedy in three acts, which contrasts the people whose end and aim in life is to make more and ever more money, and those people who look at life and find it good without the aid of millions." Book rev. digest

"A literary play in the sense that a great deal of its charm and wit are verbal and depend on the felicity of expression of its clever author. The book reads as enjoyably as it plays." N.Y. Evening post

Three other equally entertaining and successful plays are:

Barry, Philip. Animal kingdom. French 1932 198p $2

You can't take it with you; a play. Farrar 1937 207p front $1 812
37-1749
The Pulitzer prize play for 1936
"The living room of the unconventional Sycamores is a haven for hobbies. . . The one and only normal Sycamore, Alice, is a stenographer, and in love with her boss' son, Tony. The climax of the play comes when Tony's socialite parents are invited to the Sycamore's for dinner—and arrive on the wrong night." Book rev. digest
"The whole thing is pervaded by a humanity, an amiability, and a gaiety wholly delightful." Nation

Moss Hart's and G. S. Kaufman's "Once in a lifetime" (French 1930 236p 75c) is a satire on Hollywood life and the moving picture business

Hellman, Lillian, 1905-
Little foxes; a play in three acts. Random house 1939 159p $2 812
(W) 39-27320
The scene of the play is a small town in the South in the year 1900. "The two brothers and a sister who dominate the play exhibit various minor vices . . . but it is acquisitiveness which dominates them and leads them to delight in attempts to swindle one another whenever it so happens that they are not united for the moment in an effort to swindle outsiders or to terrify the weak." Nation

Heyward, Mrs Dorothy Hartzell (Kuhns) and Heyward, Du Bose, 1885-
Mamba's daughters; a play, dramatized from the novel. . . Farrar 1939 182p illus $2 812
1 Negroes—Drama (W) 39-27083
Negroes of Charleston and Ediwander Island. First produced January 3, 1939
The story of the Negro race "as it lives in field and town of the deep South, and under the stress of a changing day. Mamba is the matriarch of the little family upon which the drama centers. . . But it is her daughter, Hagar, who is the character of stature." N.Y. Sun

Porgy; a play in four acts, from the novel by Dubose Heyward; the Theatre guild acting version, with an introduction on the American negro in art. Doubleday 1928 xxi,203p (Theatre guild lib.) o.p. 1939 812
1 Negroes—Drama 28-14453
"This is the Theatre guild acting version of Du Bose Heyward's novel of the same name. The scene of the play is Charleston, South Carolina, the chief character is Porgy, a crippled negro beggar. The play has "the same lyric quality and pathetic theme as the novel." Chicago

Howard, Sidney Coe, 1891-1939
Silver cord; a comedy in three acts. Scribner 1927 204p (Theatre guild lib.) pa $1 812

Sinclair Lewis's Dodsworth; with comments by Sidney Howard and Sinclair Lewis on the art of dramatization. Harcourt 1934 162p illus $2.50 812
34-27270
"Sidney Howard has done an extraordinarily expert job in dramatizing Sinclair Lewis's novel, 'Dodsworth.' He has avoided nearly all the pitfalls which surround the adapter of a novel to stage purposes and has managed in a series of brief and pungent scenes to catch the essentials of character and to reveal them in a dialogue of masterful brevity." Commonweal
Two additional comedies are:
Howard, S. C. Late Christopher Bean. French 1933 187p 75c
Howard, S. C. They knew what they wanted. French 1925 179p 75c

1 Reed, Walter, 1851-1902—Drama 2 Yellow fever—Drama 34-18182

A dramatization of the story of the fight against yellow fever which began with Walter Reed's experiments in Cuba in 1900

"It is more than just a good play; it is a great one. The material of tremendous drama is of course in the authentic history. . . The stage has here taken a lesson from the screen, and has bettered the instruction. But the important thing is the tremendous ethical drive which comes with the skilful presentation of the work of these heroes of science." Christian century

Kaufman, George S. 1889- and Connelly, Marcus Cook, 1890-

Beggar on horseback, a play in two parts. Suggested by "Hans Sonnenstoesser's hohlenfahrt," by Paul Apel. Liveright 1924 237p illus $2 812

24-16612

"A popular comedy satirizing big business, life of the rich, and the soulless middle-class American family. A dream is the device used to convey the authors' extravagant fancies." Chicago

"Burlesques campaign methods and our national politics. 'Love' is made the chief issue of a presidential campaign, a beauty contest is launched, the winner to wed the successful candidate. About this ludicrous theme plays the satiric dialog with its constant flow of broad or witty sallies. Pulitzer prize play for 1932." N.Y. libraries

Kelly, George Edward, 1887-

Craig's wife; a drama. Little 1926 174p $1.75 812

26-1781

Awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1926

"Domestic drama in which a man's eyes are opened to his wife's selfishness, jealousy, worship of 'things,' and, above all, inherent dishonesty." N.Y. libraries

"The strength of Mr. Kelly's dramatic talent lies in his patience of concentrating all attention upon a simple trait of character, like paranoia or selfishness. His novelty lies in his looking at middle-class American family life with very naturalistic fidelity." Literary rev.

Kingsley, Sidney, 1906-

Men in white; a play in three acts. Covici 1933 137p illus $2 812

34-1965

Percy Mackaye's "Kentucky mountain fantasies" (Longmans 1928 173p illus $2.50) contains three short plays: Napoleon crossing the Rockies; The funeralizing of Crickneck; Timber

MacLeish, Archibald, 1892-

Air raid; a verse play for radio. Harcourt 1938 36p 75c 812

1 Aeronautics—Drama 2 Radio plays
(W) 38-29024

"A short radio play, written in free verse, which gives a vivid impression of the first air raid on a town. It gives fleeting pictures of the life of the town, of the warning signal, the incredulity of the women as they throng the streets and refuse to hide, and the suspense before the silence that follows destruction and death." Bkl.

The fall of the city; a verse play for radio. Farrar 1937 33p 50c 812

1 Radio plays 37-27310

Presented over the radio in 1937 with Orson Welles and Burgess Meredith in the principal parts

"There's nothing timeless about a microphone. It carries words for today. So does this book. It should have the widest possible reading... In it literature at last shows some hope of catching up with music at the dial's point." N.Y. Times

Moody, William Vaughn, 1869-1910

Prose plays. Houghton 1910 336p front (Poems and plays, v2) o.p. 1939 812

Odets, Clifford, 1906-

Six plays, with a preface by the author. Random house 1939 433p $2.50 812

(W) 39-27752

Also available from Modern lib. at 95c

Contents: Waiting for Lefty; Awake and sing; Till the day I die; Paradise lost; Golden Boy; Rocket to the moon

"Most readers, I think, will find 'Waiting for Lefty' more exciting, 'Golden Boy' more entertaining, and 'Awake and Sing' both more touching and generally interesting than the 'Paradise' or the 'Rocket.' Mr. Odets seems to me best in handling characters whom he is willing to treat as definitely individual." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

O'Neill, Eugene Gladstone, 1888-

"Hers, then, was not the work to blaze a new path in our Drama, but, keeping alive the best standards of sheer sensitiveness and beauty in the Drama, to be one of the protestants—but with no self-consciousness or self-advertising—against the harsh realism of her youth." G. P. Baker in Foreword

J. P. Peabody's "The piper" (Houghton 1909 212p $2) is her best known play. Also in the Riverside literature series at 68c

Rice, Elmer L. 1892-

American landscape; a play in three acts. Coward-McCann 1939 145p $2 812

(W) 39-27050

"Play based upon American customs and ways of living. In order to have a peaceful ending to a long life, an elderly Connecticut shoe manufacturer decided to sell the family business to a chain store company, and the family home to a Nazi culture group. The other members of the family, including ancestors long dead, protested, and the 'American way' won." Book rev. digest

Street scene, a play in three acts. French 1929 239p illus $2 812

29-7657

Awarded the Pulitzer prize in 1929

"Ambition, love, rancor, jealousy and revenge in a 'walk-up' apartment in a mean quarter of New York. The play occupies twenty-four hours and is supposed to be enacted on the sidewalk and 'stoop' in front of the tenement. The forty-one characters of different ages, races and nationalities are all dwellers in the house." Cleveland

E. L. Rice's "Counsellor-at-law" (French 1931 298p illus $2) is another interesting play dealing with social conditions

Riggs, Lynn, 1899-

Green grow the lilacs. French 1931 166p $2 812

31-7653

"A medley of vivid characters, quaint old songs, and an undercurrent of tragic suggestion that never quite reaches fulfillment are the elements of this play of Indian Territory. . . It has qualities of lyricism and beauty that are unforgettable." Providence

Saroyan, William, 1908-

My heart's in the Highlands; a play. Harcourt 1939 140p $2 812

39-17112

"A tender drama which portrays a boy and his father, a tenth-rate poet, struggling to uphold the dignity and worth of beauty and life in the face of poverty and degradation." Cleveland

Includes the author's story, "The man with the heart in the Highlands" (p126-40) upon which the play is based

Music: p105-08

William Saroyan's "Time of your life" (Harcourt 1939 247p front $2.50) (W) is another comedy laid in a water front bar

Shaw, Irwin, 1913-

Bury the dead. Random house 1936 107p $1 812

36-9991

"The play opens in the second year of the war that is to begin tomorrow night. A squad of soldiers is discovered digging a grave for the six corpses that lie waiting. But once buried, the corpses refuse to stay. They rise up out of the grave. Threats, prayers, pleadings, force, all fail to make them lie down again. A powerful and moving play." Wis. bul.

Irwin Shaw's "Gentle people" (Random house 1939 212p illus $2) (W) is a play about life in Brooklyn

Sherwood, Robert Emmet, 1896-

Abe Lincoln in Illinois; a play in twelve scenes; with a foreword by Carl Sandburg. Scribner 1939 250p $2 812

1 Lincoln, Abraham, pres. U.S., 1809-1865 —Drama (W) 39-27098

Deals with Lincoln's life from his first meeting with Ann Rutledge until he leaves Springfield to take office as president

In the last act "Mr. Sherwood's drama suddenly moves into epic proportions, taking on body and imaginative power. In the opening scene of the Lincoln-Douglas debate, in the scenes of his candidacy for the presidency, and above all his final adieu to his fellow citizens of Springfield as he leaves for Washington, this final act is informed with a rare dignity, even a majesty." Commonweal

Idiot's delight. Scribner 1936 190p $2 812

36-8866

"This play, produced by the New York Theatre Guild in March, 1936, has been awarded the [1935] Pulitzer prize for drama. The scene is a winter resort hotel in the Italian Alps; the characters are a confused medley of English honeymooners, American cabaret dancers, a German scientist, a Russian adventuress, Italian servants and officers. The time is 'the eve of the "inevitable war" ' and its coming furnishes the climax." Book. rev. digest

Petrified forest. Scribner 1935 176p $2 812

35-5154

"The scene is a desert gas-filling station and the petrified forest refers both to the actual forest adjacent and to several of the characters. The garrulous old exploneer, living in the past—and off the income from his real-estate speculations—the American legionnaires, unaware that a new world has grown up since they came back from the war, and several others, are 'petrified'. . . The gunmen who finally shoot up the place are the only ones who definitely know what they want and and go straight about getting it in the hot present." Sat. rev. of lit.

Thomas, Augustus, 1857-1934

The witching hour; a drama in four acts. rev 1916 French 1916 111p pa 75c 812

Our town; a play in three acts. Coward-McCann 1938 128p $2 812

(W) 38-27331

Awarded the Pulitzer prize for 1938

"Drama of life in a small New Hampshire village, called Grover's Corners. The people of the village go about their daily affairs, thru a few years in the early 1900s, and then some of them experience death. Altho when produced little or no scenery is used, the play has a stage manager who links together the separate parts of the action with running comment, somewhat in the manner of the Greek chorus." Foreground of American fiction. Am. bk. 1934 447p $2.50 813.09

1 American fiction—History and criticism 2 Authors, American 34-18177

"A fresh approach to the subject of American fiction, beginning with Crane, Norris and London and coming down to our day. With its criticisms, evaluations and synopses of all the significant novels of the period, should be useful for work with clubs. Well indexed, and supplied with many notes and references." Wis. bul.

"Among the weightier analyses of current American fiction. While there is an excess of generalized deduction, there is also considerable pungent interpretation, and much that is said about individual writers—Norris, Dreiser, Sherwood Anderson, Cabell, Hergesheimer, etc.—is incisive and illuminating." Springfield Republican

Contents: Wherein we approach all authors at their best; Which deals with the demiurge; Which hints at the witch-woman; Which admires the economist; Which considers the reactionary; Which values the candle; Which indicates the mountebank; Which concerns the contemporary; Which defers to the arbiters; Wherein we await the dawn

"Essays on literature—ironical, humorous, and keenly critical—presented as a long-drawn conversation with John Charteris, author, on the comparative merits of romanticism and realism." Pittsburgh

J. B. Cabell's "These restless heads, a trilogy of romantics; decorative illus. by S. B. Schaeffer" (McBride 1932 253p front $2.50) is a miscellaneous collection of short essays giving the author's views on life

Cather, Willa Sibert, 1875-
Not under forty. Knopf 1936 147p $2 814
36-34376

Contents: Chance meeting; Novel démeublé; 148 Charles street; Miss Jewett; "Joseph and his brothers"; Katherine Mansfield

"Not Under Forty has a title which, according to the author, means that 'the book will have little interest for people under 40 years of age.' It is to be hoped that 'people under 40' will disappoint Miss Cather of her gloomy prophecy. If they do not they will miss a collection of sketches and essays that, while unpretentious, convey pleasantly mature impressions and wisely mature thoughts in language that has sufficient youth and zest for all but the consciously and rambunctiously young." Springfield Republican

Crothers, Samuel McChord, 1857-1927
Gentle reader. Houghton 1903 321p $2 814
3-25285

Contents: Gentle reader; Enjoyment of poetry; Mission of humor; Cases of conscience concerning witchcrafts; Honorable points of ignorance; That history should be readable; Evolution of the gentleman; Hinter-land of science; Gentle reader's friends among the clergy; Quixotism; Intimate knowledge and delight

"Crothers is the true successor of Oliver Wendell Holmes. Kindly, mellow humor and sprightly fancy characterize his essays." Pratt alcove

S. M. Crothers's "Among friends" (Houghton 1910 278p $2) contains nine additional essays in the same vein

Durant, William James, 1885-
Great men of literature. . . Garden City pub. co. 315p illus (Star ser.) $1 814

Reprinted from the author's "Adventures in genius," published 1931, but omitting the fourth and fifth parts of the earlier book: "Adventures in travel" and "Adventures in controversy"

A miscellaneous collection of essays and magazine articles. Part 1 contains essays on the ten "greatest" thinkers, on the ten "greatest" poets and on one hundred best books, with a list of books; part 2, Adventures in philosophy: Spengler, Keyserling, Bertrand Russell; part 3, Adventures in literature, on Flaubert, Anatole France and John Cowper Powys

"Dr. Durant here adds to the wise thinking and lucid style which have characterized his previous books a discursiveness that decidedly enhances the appeal of this new volume." Boston Transcript

Eastman, Max, 1883-
Art and the life of action; with other essays. Knopf 1934 226p $2 814
34-36212

"It is not surprising to find Mr. Eastman's discussion of the most burning question in esthetics today—the relation of art to current activity in social reconstruction—sympathetic and well informed. . . The rest of this book is a miscellany of critical and descriptive sketches. It is the title essay that makes it important." H. S. Canby in Sat. rev. of lit.

Other essays included are: Bull in the afternoon; Religion and the Bolsheviks; Higher criticism of the Marxian Bible: two book reviews; Floyd Dell's double life; On learning foreign languages; Volga at the flood; Russian soul and the Russian language; In a Spanish dungeon

Essays, ancient and modern. Harcourt 1936 203p $2 814
36-27382

This new collection of essays takes the place of "For Lancelot Andrewes." Three essays from that volume have been omitted, those on Middleton, Crashaw, and Machiavelli; and five essays not previously collected have been added. Contents: Lancelot Andrewes; John Bramhall; Francis Herbert Bradley; Baudelaire in our time; Humanism of Irving Babbitt; Religion and literature; Catholicism and international order; "Pensées" of Pascal; Modern education and the classics; In memoriam

"How much more satisfactory as a critic Mr. Eliot is when he is writing literary criticism than when he is elucidating the ethical or other principles on which he works. The essay on Pascal, in particular, is a brilliant and profound piece of writing, quite one of the best essays which Mr. Eliot has written in recent years, and the essay on 'In Memoriam' is little inferior to it." Spectator

Complete works; with a biographical introduction and notes by E. W. Emerson, and a general index. centenary ed Houghton 1903-04 12v ea $2.75 814

Morley, Christopher Darlington, 1890-

* Essays. Lippincott 1928 1106p $2.50 814

[28-26447]

"A collection representing the cream of all of Morley's essays... They have been selected from his books Shandygaff, Mince pie, Pipefuls, Travels in Philadelphia, Plum pudding, The powder of sympathy, The Romany stain. There are included also some essays never before published in book form except in the Haverford edition of his works." Book rev. digest

Christopher Morley's "Letters of askance" (Lippincott 1939 317p $2.50) (W) is a later collection of sketches reprinted from the Saturday review of literature

Newton, Alfred Edward, 1863-1940

Amenities of book-collecting, and kindred affections. Little 1918 xxi,355p illus $5 814

1 Book collecting 18-22198

"Papers by an American collector and lover of books, some of them reprinted from the Atlantic Monthly, others appearing here for the first time... The first five essays set forth some of the delights of collecting. Others are pleasant studies of notable figures, the great Johnson, Mrs Thrale, William Godwin, and Anthony Trollope. The last is a tribute to that young collector, Harry Elkins Widener, lost on the Titanic. The delightfully varied illustrations are chosen from items in the author's collection." Book rev. digest

1 Bible—Versions 2 Book collecting 3 Books 25-17139

"In the first chapter the author writes delightfully of the various editions of the Bible and of prayer books with a passing reference to hymnals, for which he has little affection. And this is followed by other bookish papers, one on Shakespeare, one on Gilbert and Sullivan, one on Shelley, etc." Wis. bul.

Nock, Albert Jay

Free speech and plain language. Morrow 1937 343p $3 814

37-28695

Seventeen essays, previously published in the "Atlantic monthly" or "Harpers magazine." They relate to such subjects as American education, Artemus Ward's America, Disadvantages of being educated, and the American upper class

"An intelligent and urbane, though conservative, commentary on American life. The author's primary interest is clearly education—or, at least, that indefinable quality known as 'culture'. . . While the papers vary in depth, they are stimulating, and are written in that lucid prose for which Mr. Nock has justly acquired a reputation." Boston

Peattie, Donald Culross, 1898-

Book of hours; decorations by Lynd Ward. Putnam 1937 202p illus $2.50 814

37-27229

"A book of essays, or meditations, one for each hour of the day. Beginning at Three ante meridian, that hour before dawn when the first bird stirs, the author touches on the aspects of nature as the day proceeds on its round." Wis. bul.

"A rare and distinguished book, in which thought, feeling and imagination are fused in the light of poetic insight." N.Y. Times

Phelps, William Lyon, 1865-

Essays on things. Macmillan 1930 290p o.p. 1939 814

"A series of essays in which the author discourses provocatively of such inevitabilities as the weather, war, optimism and pessimism, sunrise, English tea, a private library all your own, going abroad the first time, and many other subjects." Ontario library review

Repplier, Agnes, 1858-

* Eight decades; essays and episodes. Houghton 1937 304p $3 814

(W) 37-28784

Collection of sixteen essays, with an introductory autobiographical sketch in which the author recalls her life, decade by decade, up to her present age of eighty. Contents: Eight decades; Horace; Masterful Puritan; Perils of immortality; Town and suburb; Virtuous Victorian; Living in history; Divineness of discontent; Headsman; When Lalla Rookh was young; Allegra; Cruelty and humour; What is moral support; Estranging sea; Chill of enthusiasm; Condescension of borrowers; Grocer's cat

"These essays of Agnes Repplier's from her other books in other years make a rare and delightful volume, not only witty, pointed and erudite, but almost wholly dateless. . . The paper called 'Eight Decades,' which gives its name to the book and fills only forty-seven pages, is itself an essay, reminiscent, charming, incisive and evocative, but offering us, of autobiography, only crumbs." N.Y. Times

Points of friction. Houghton 1920 275p $2 814

20-19680

"Essays in the author's usual clever style, discussing with caustic humor the glad book, women's rights, prohibition, authors from the beyond, money, politics, etc. Keen and original, upholding recognized standards." Bkl.

Agnes Repplier's "Times and tendencies" (Houghton 1931 227p $2) is another delightful volume of essays

Santayana, George, 1863-

Obiter scripta; lectures, essays and reviews; ed. by Justus Buchler and Benjamin Schwartz. Scribner 1936 319p $2.50 814

36-27200

Miscellaneous collection of the author's papers and addresses on philosophical and literary subjects, which have been published at various times during the last thirty years. Bibliography

"The least of these pieces is a masterpiece in the art of thinking and the practice of writing, rich in a harmony of prose seldom heard, sparkling with imagery, rippling with irony. Whatever his philosophy may contribute to the tradition of knowledge, it has at least its own immediate pleasure in itself, in its exact and subtle expression. The beauty of what has been said is his compensation for what has been left unsaid." N.Y. Times

Sharp, Dallas Lore, 1870-1929

Magical chance. Houghton 1923 232p $2 814

23-12909

"The eight essays contained in this volume have a quality 'sui generis.' They lead on pleasantly through byways of literature and nature, with occasional glimpses of politics and religion verging on pantheism, to a philosophical concept of life." Literary rev.

into focus, it does make one think. She has studied deeply and seriously the things she talks about, but she does not use the conventional literary form and we still remain sceptical as to her manner being an improvement." Boston Transcript

Stewart, Charles David, 1868-
Fellow creatures. Little 1935 372p $2.75 814
35-27203

"An ingenious, inquiring, observant mind, a sense of humor, and a fresh and original way of putting things make of the author a delightful nature essayist. His range of topics, however, extends beyond the problem of snake locomotion, the trade of the spider and bee and wasp to his own early ways of earning a livelihood, and to stories of other men and women." "One need not be an enthusiastic fisherman to enjoy this volume of friendly essays. Dr. Van Dyke talks of other things besides fish—of the joys of the open air, of companionship and the companionable virtues, of old books and the like. The lure of angling, like the delight of life, is its uncertainty, and the familiar surprises which give zest to experience are the larger theme, to which the reminiscences of this devoted fisherman are but illustrations." Rosten, Leo Calvin, 1908-
* Education of Hyman Kaplan, by L. Q. Ross [pseud]. Harcourt 1937 176p $2 817

37-27486

"These sketches from the 'New Yorker' record the progress of Mr. Kaplan, a student in the American Night Preparatory School for Adults. It is Mr. Kaplan who declines the verb 'to fail' as 'fail, failed, bankropt,' and gave the plural of dog as dogies, Library as Public library, and cat as Katz. Enough to indicate the characteristic and amusing Jewish humor." Wis. bul.

Rourke, Constance Mayfield, 1885-
* American humor; a study of the national character. Harcourt 1931 324p $3 817

1 American literature—History and criticism 2 American wit and humor—History and criticism 3 National characteristics, American 31-7953

A study of the national character as revealed thru types, Yankee, backwoodsman, Uncle Sam, etc., by Sam Slick, Mr Dooley, Will Rogers and others

"Miss Rourke's volume is scholarly in temper and the conclusions which she draws emerge from a careful examination of every aspect of a century of recorded literary and dramatic humor." N.Y. Evening post

Skinner, Cornelia Otis, 1901-
Dithers and jitters; drawings by Alajálov. Dodd 1938 168p illus $2 817

(W) 38-28991

Contents: Dithers and jitters; Business party; Yoga attempted; "Pour le sport"; Importance of cocktails; It's a wise parent; Floral piece; Long after Audubon; Party on Olympus; Bonny boating weather; Platform performance; "The skin-game"; Vaulting ambition; "Allow me, madame"; Ear, nose, and throat; Heavenly bodies

"As in her acting, the inimitable Cornelia has a happy capacity for throwing herself whole-heartedly into a skit and conveying atmosphere in chunks to her audience. The circumambient ether in her collection of bright sketches is all humorous, with plenty of blithely barbed shafts of wit directed at the author himself." N.Y. Times

Excuse it, please! illus. by O. Soglow. Dodd 1936 225p illus $2 817

36-20356

"Nineteen sketches in which Cornelia Otis Skinner regales the reader with devastatingly funny visualizations of herself in awkward and ludicrous situations, not to mention the things she thought or said at critical moments." N.Y. libraries

Thurber, James, 1894-
Let your mind alone! And other more or less inspirational pieces; with drawings by the author. Harper 1937 245p illus $2.50 817

37-28558

"A series of articles in which the author reviews, in rather unsympathetic tones, the best-seller inspirational books such as Wake Up and Live, How to Win Friends and Influence people, and Live Alone and Like It. Other articles deal with a meeting of intellectual critics, [and] an attempt to write an autobiography." Book rev. digest

"Amusing, relaxing sketches, published in the New Yorker." Cleveland

James Thurber's "Middle-aged man on the flying trapeze; a collection of short pieces, with drawings by the author" (Harper 1935 226p illus $2) is an equally entertaining book on a wide range of subjects

Untermeyer, Louis, 1885-
Collected parodies. Harcourt 1926 324p front o.p. 1939 817

1 Parodies 26-17721

Four previous volumes of Mr Untermeyer's parodies and a considerable number of new works are here presented in a single volume

"Mr. Untermeyer has parodied nearly all the poets, living and dead, and done it remarkably well." Outlook

White Elwyn Brooks, 1889-

Quo vadimus? or, The case for the bicycle. Harper 1939 219p $2 817

(W) 39-4681

"Mr. White examines a quarter-century of our progress and advises posterity to watch out. Symptoms of decay touched on in these thirty-seven stories and essays (all but one of which first appeared in 'The New Yorker') include radio broadcasting, non-stop aviation, endorsement advertising, and the belief that anything will look wonderful if you just do it up in cellophane." New Yorker

817C CANADIAN HUMOR

There is no separate number in the 12th edition of the Dewey decimal classification for Canadian literature, but it is suggested there that C be prefixed to 810 or 820 as desired. In this catalog the C has been added to the subdivisions of 810. Some libraries may prefer to class with English literature

Leacock, Stephen Butler, 1869-

30-28083

Published in England with title: Leacock book

A representative selection of Leacock's humorous essays, sketches and parodies

"Those of us who have at times despaired because the professor talked too fluently to talk wittily will welcome this book, in which he talks at his best." N.Y. World

Model memoirs, and other sketches from simple to serious. Dodd 1938 316p $2 817C

(W) 38-37984

Cleverly-drawn parodies and short humorous sketches covering a wide variety of subjects. The first five so-called model memoirs are nonsense parodies on a Victorian girlhood, an Arabian safari, Downing street, the United States and Napoleon Bonaparte

Nonsense novels. Dodd 1911 230p $2 817C

[11-20594]

"As parodies, or more properly burlesques, the 'Novels' are of a general rather than personal nature, fastening upon the type in lieu of the individual, and conceived in a spirit of literary romping which, while not sounding the heights of ideal humour, can scarcely fail to exhilarate." Athenaeum

Except for the omission of "Great possessions" this is a reprint of the book published by Doubleday in 1925 and still obtainable from that publisher at $2.50. The reprint contains his previously published volumes "Adventures in contentment", "Adventures in friendship" and "Friendly road." These essays and also his "Great possessions" and "Adventures in understanding" are obtainable separately from Grosset at $1

Friendly refreshing essays and sketches revealing love of the country-side and the simple ways of country life

818 B16 ← R. S. Baker's 'Adventures in solitude" (Doubleday 1931 180p illus o.p. 1939) is another charming book of essays

Cabell, James Branch, 1879-

Ladies and gentlemen; a parcel of reconsiderations. McBride 1934 304p o.p. 1939 818

34-34569

"Mr. Cabell turns now to the departed great ones whose letters can never lie in the postman's bag, but who, if they could write letters, would doubtless complain that posterity has signally failed to understand them. To twenty of those who have become famous largely through a misunderstanding, Mr. Cabell directs himself in a series of letters whose chief concern is with the ironies of reputation." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"More than a few of Mr. Cabell's readers have a special liking and preference for 'The Silver Stallion.' 'Ladies and Gentlemen' is another ironical, deft, enlivening book particularly for them." Nation

Damon, Mrs Bertha Clark (Pope)

Grandma called it carnal. Simon & Schuster 1938 288p illus $2 818

(W) 38-27988

The story of the author's New England grandmother, Grandma Griswold, who fought the twentieth century and all its innovations single-handed—and won

"This book might be classified as a combination of autobiography, biography and philosophy, written in a charming essay style with a delicately humorous twist. It is a thoroughly delightful story." N.Y Times

Day, Clarence Shepard, 1874-1935

God and my father. Knopf 1932 83p $1.35 818

32-8194

Published in England under title: My father's dark hour

Day, Clarence S.—Continued

"The portrait of a hot-tempered and masterful father by an unusually outspoken son. The author tells of his father's fearless relations with his God, his impatient endurance of his pastors and the conflict of his high-spirited views with the faith of his wife." Book rev. digest

"A delightful little volume. . . The beauty of the book lies in its analysis of a state of mind which seemed perfectly reasonable to one generation and obviously absurd to another." Nation

‡ Life with father. Knopf 1935 258p $2 818
35-11496

Humorous essays of family life centering round the same dominating personality portrayed in "God and my father"

"Mr Day gives a fresh and gracious twist to the humorous sketch. There is civilized feeling beneath his vivacity." Springfield Republican

* Life with mother. Knopf 1937 250p $2 818
(W) 37-27499

"The book, like its predecessor, is a contemporary record of a family, its homes, its habits, and of the period in which it grew up. . . But it is also much more. By reason of the mind of one of the four sons, then simply the oldest of the red-headed Day boys, it is a penetrating commentary upon every family and every individual, a well of wisdom concerning the secrets of all hearts." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Edman, Irwin, 1896-

‡ Philosopher's holiday. Viking 1938 270p $2.75 818
(W) 38-27920

"Mr. Edman calls it a holiday, because he wrote it on a holiday. Yet actually it is a book about all his holidays, those times from early youth up, when he forgot routine and let his mind run free; or in an unexpected companionship with some new friend, got down to the brass tacks of what living and learning and enjoying is all about." Book-of-the-month club news

Miller, Max, 1901-

I cover the waterfront. Dutton 1932 204p $1 818
32-26658

"These short sketches gleaned from the routine life of a waterfront reporter at San Diego charm the reader on many counts—most of all, perhaps, because of the unusual characters and the tolerant affection the author shows toward them." Pittsburgh

"A distinctive touch marks all these sketches. They are original, unusual, fresh in tone and manner, with a quaint whimsicality of feeling and expression." N.Y. Times

Steffens, Lincoln, 1866-1936

Lincoln Steffens speaking. Harcourt 1936 315p $1.29 818
36-29259

"This compilation of fugitive pieces is derived from the author's published magazine articles, columns from the Pacific Weekly, book reviews, editorials, notes and jottings, and fragmentary sentences and paragraphs. Altho of such fragmentary nature, the book succeeds in painting a picture of the man who wrote them." Book rev. digest

"Despite the unevenness which must characterize such a book, the result is astonishingly stimulating. The book almost tells more about Steffens than did the Autobiography; it pulls the reader's mind up with a jerk on almost every page." Christian century

Thoreau, Henry David, 1817-1862

Little essays; selected by C. R. Murphy. Houghton 1931 184p $2 818

Contents: Selections from the 'Journal'; A week on the Concord and Merrimack rivers; Walden; Poems; Travel books; Nature essays; On religion and friendship; Man against the state; John Brown's body; Selected bibliography

An omnibus made up from Thoreau's best, primarily a reading edition, presented as far as seemed wise and possible by wholes not parts. The editor has felt free to abridge and to compound, 'Walden' going in entire, and also the best of his essays. Annotations are restricted to the prefaces and introduction. Adapted from editor's note

H. D. Thoreau's "Walden; or Life in the woods" (Houghton $2) is probably his best known work. It is obtainable in many other editions

Van de Water, Frederic Franklyn, 1890-

Home in the country. Day 1937 198p $2 818
1 Country life—Vermont 37-9709

"A two-year search through New England for a modest country home ended in a Vermont farmhouse, and two city people, who had expected to use it only in the summer, succumbed to the charms of the place and make it their year-round home. No details of rebuilding or renovating the old building, but an informal, personal relation of their delight in home owning, their dogs, and their Vermont neighbors." Bkl.

F. F. Van de Water's "We're still in the country" (Day 1938 253p $2.50) (W) are further experiences of the author and his wife on their Vermont farm

Wilkinson, Mrs Marguerite Ogden (Bigelow) 1883-1928

Dingbat of Arcady. Macmillan 1922 188p $1.50 818

22-5815

"An amusing account of the author's adventures here and there by rowboat and decrepit motors. In the spirit of camaraderie, she shares with the reader the ardor and gaiety of life out of doors, the hazard of chance acquaintance on the road, the finding of 'new joy in old beauty.'" N.Y. state lib.

Wolfe, Thomas, 1900-1938

Face of a nation; poetical passages from the writings of Thomas Wolfe; decorations by Edward Shenton. Scribner 1939 321p illus $2.75 818

(W) 39-30281

Over seventy passages from Thomas Wolfe's novels and short stories, chosen to represent his most poetical prose and dealing, for the most part, with the American continent and man's life upon it

"Of course that is what he was, a poet. No such book as this was needed to prove it. But such a book as this not only emphasizes the true quality of Thomas Wolfe's genius, but brings together, for those who will not have time soon to reread his big books, some of the best of those magnificent passages which caught our own memories in his poet's remembering." "The compilation of the Annals is the work of J. C. Ghosh; the Annals 1901-25, and the Index, are the work of E. G. Withycombe." Preface

"Chronologically arranged list of works of major English authors from 1475 to 1925, with some of the works of minor authors. Marginal notes give the births and deaths of authors, publication of periodicals, and foreign events having a bearing on English literature." Book rev. digest

"It is no exaggeration to say that the compilers of this little reference book have put every student of English literature in their debt... Omissions are insignificant, and errors, so far as it has been possible to detect them, limited to a few trifling misprints. No more useful work on English literature than this has been produced for a considerable time." Spectator

1 English literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. [1-27359]

First published in 1844 in two volumes, revised in 1901 in three volumes and again in 1922. The chief changes in the 1938 edition occur in volume 3 in which 253 new writers are included. Many names have been added to the biographical sections for English and American writers and to the "Complimentary lists of 19th and 20th century writers." A revised index to the entire set is included in each volume

"A chronological, not an alphabetical, cyclopedia, containing a large number of articles on individual writers, and some articles on literary forms, periods, and subjects; for each writer treated gives biography, comment on his writings, some specimens of his works, a bibliography, and in many cases a portrait. Appendices are included consisting of articles on the Censorship of the press and drama and on Copyright, and of a Perpetual Calendar." Preface to second edition

Includes in alphabetical arrangement a list of English authors, literary works and literary societies which have historical or present importance. A number of American authors are included. Under each author are given facts bearing on his life and literary activity. Under the title of a work is given an indication of its nature and for the important works of literature of the past, poetry, prose, drama, there is a brief sketch of the plot. . . Contains also an explanation of allusions mostly limited to those containing proper names and occurring in English literature

"Sir Paul Harvey has produced a fascinating book, even if its plan is rather uncertain, and its scope not clearly defined." New statesman and Nation

Sir Paul Harvey's "Concise Oxford dictionary of English literature" (Oxford 1939 567p $2.50) (W) based on his "Companion" may be preferred to the larger book because of the price. The "Concise dictionary" eliminates a considerable amount of detail but gives information in shortened form for all the important facts of English literature found in the larger work. The more complete work is preferable if it can be afforded

1 English literature—History and criticism 24-2319

A survey of English literature intended to occupy a middle place between the textbook and the elaborate compendium in several volumes. The parts were prepared by specialists, many of them associated with English universities. In general the same plan is followed for each author; separate sections for life and character, works, and style. Extracts are given only to illustrate a point of criticism. Does not attempt to cover 20th century writers. The print is clear. Illustrations, largely portraits, make the book more attractive

"The greater part of this book is, actually, a rapid, informal survey of English and American literature from pre-Shakespearian days thru the nineteenth century and the early twentieth. This survey leads out of the author's reminiscences of his own youthful reading in an 'age of literary appreciation' and an 'age of revolt' combined. The final chapter is devoted in large part to hints for building up private libraries for young people, suggesting titles which lead readers on to better reading." Book rev. digest

Winterich, John Tracy, 1891-
Twenty-three books and the stories behind them. Lippincott 1939 241p illus $2.50 820.9

1 Authors, American 2 Authors, English 3 Bibliography—First editions [39-3800]

"Such favorites as Pride and prejudice, Jane Eyre, Moby Dick, Uncle Remus, Treasure Island, Emerson's essays, Walden, and Little women are among the books discussed by Mr. Winterich in this series of papers amplified from the 'Publishers' Weekly,' in which they first appeared. He tells something about the authors, the conditions under which the books were written, and the way in which they were received by the public, throwing new light on old books and helping to bring them to life for the modern reader. Offers good reference material in identifying editions." Wis. bul.

821 ENGLISH POETRY

Aldington, Richard, 1892-
Life quest. Doubleday 1935 37p $1 821

35-16447

"Richard Aldington was prominent in the imagist group sponsored by Amy Lowell, with which group he began publishing in 1912. . . . While they produced sometimes rhythmical lines, much of their product is in reality prose written with broken lines that make it look like poetry. This group of poems is in the truly imagist style with perhaps a little more of thought centered around one idea, than is usual with such poets." Boston Transcript

Poems. Doubleday 1934 372p $2.50 821

34-14323

"A complete collection of the poems of this English writer, one of the leaders of the Imagist group. The volume contains a number of poems never before published in America, and a few which have not before appeared between book covers. The volume also contains an introductory essay by Mr Aldington on the nature of poetry." Book rev. digest

"It is possible indeed, that he may be remembered more for his novels than for his poetry. But the accent of his verse is that of the born artist, and will always delight lovers of the beauty of the word." Sat. rev. of lit.

Light of Asia . . . illus. by Willy Pogany. McKay 1932 182p illus $3.50 821

1 Buddha and Buddhism—Poetry 33-452

"A poetic exposition in eight books of the Hindoo theology. . . The poem, which was published in 1878, is rich in sensuous Oriental pictures and imagery. It has been translated into many languages, both European and Asiatic; and has done much to create an interest in the religion of Buddha." H. R. Keller's Reader's digest of books

"Much of his verse is a highly finished study in the manner of Wordsworth, tempered with the love of Goethe and of the Greeks. . . His devotion to beauty, the composure, simplicity, and dignity of his temper, and his deep moral sincerity, gave to his poetry a singular charm." Garnett & Gosse's English literature

Auden, Wystan Hugh, 1907-

Another time; poems. Random house 1940 114p $2 821

(W) 40-27257

Contents: People and places; Lighter poems; Occasional poems

"Auden's new book, Another Time, has the drive and energy, the running rhythm, the robust attack on civilized sham, and the instinct for lightness and the music halls that marked his earlier volumes. . . And [the book] reveals a new note of tenderness, a mature appraisal of love in an otherwise crumbling world." Living age

"Not since the publication of T. S. Eliot's 'Poems,' has there appeared poetry of such dynamic originality and potentiality for influence upon a new school of modern poetic thought and expression. Like Spender, Auden acknowledges his debt to Eliot. But he has more to say than Eliot has said. . . He directs his more robust energies toward not only an attempted analysis but solution of that chaos through mass as well as through individual action." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

W. H. Auden's "On this island" (Random house 1937 68p $1.50) is a collection of 31 new poems

Blake, William, 1757-1827

Poetical works; including the unpublished French revolution, together with the minor Prophetic books, and selections from The four Zoas, Milton, & Jerusalem; ed. with an introduction and textual notes by John Sampson. Oxford lvi,453p illus (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

A17-1019

This edition includes besides the purely lyrical poems, the earlier blank verse poems, the hitherto unprinted "French revolution," the whole of the minor prophetic books, together with selections from the three longer Prophecies. There are also a bibliographical introduction, a chronological table, and index of first lines. Illustrated with reproductions of Blake's title pages

"His poetry deals in the subtlest kind of symbolism with a skill that connot be matched. His philosophy is a series of intuitive flights into the realm of the Absolute, soaring with tranquil and imperious assurance; to our minds they are presented as a group of strange, complicated symbols, which to Blake are the clearest, the most familiar realities." Legouis and Cazamian's Hist. of Eng. literature

"Mr. Blunden has gathered the poems of sixteen years. The spirit of the book is not the spirit of to-day. It is the spirit of the early Romantics, of the lull before the great Romantic storm, intimate, domestic, observant, melancholy, humorous, charming; the spirit of William Collins and William Cowper." Nation and Athenaeum

Blunt, Wilfred Scawen, 1840-1922

Poetical works. Macmillan 2v $6.80 821

[14-22324]

"A rebel in literature as in life, he brought with his poetry the breath of a new candor to the Victorian age. Incapable of ever becoming 'classics' in the dull schoolroom sense, these poems have a classic simplicity, sincerity and power that make them enduring achievements in English literature." Floyd Dell

Poetical works; excluding the eight dramas. Oxford 1936 575p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

36-11110

The contents of two volumes, "October and other poems" and "New verse," and two new poems, have been added to those in the first edition of 1914

"The charm of Robert Bridges, who is especially a nature poet, lies in his love of quiet effects, pale colours, small soft sounds . . . Much of his work makes me think of the old Japanese colour prints." Lafcadio Hearn

Testament of beauty; a poem in four books. Oxford 1930 175p front $3.50 821

31-9920

First published 1929. This edition of 1930 contains the author's final corrections

This "we believe to be the greatest poem he has written. In verse which untiring discipline has moulded to a new freedom he tells us that life is happiness, and reasons with us why it must be so, and, better still, invites us to share with him the breath of a happiness that is unassailable." Times (London) lit. sup.

Brontë, Charlotte, 1816-1855, and others

Bronte poems; selections from the poetry of Charlotte, Emily, Anne and Branwell Bronte; ed. by A. C. Benson. Murray, J. 1915 xxix, 390 front 3s 6d 821

[15-11037]

Formerly carried also by Putnam

"Representative work by the four Brontës is presented in this volume. Fully one half of the book is devoted to Emily, and rightly, for, as Mr. Benson says, 'The most fragmentary and faulty of Emily's poems, even if it is but a few inconsequent lines, is more interesting than the most polished and finished poem by either Charlotte or Anne.' A number of the poems are printed here for the first time. The format of the volume is that of the 'Oxford book of English verse.'" Book rev. digest

"The scholar will be likely to find not a few faults in Mr. Benson's edition. Not only is it a selection, but the poems selected are very frequently printed with large omissions. . . Whatever the faults of the book, gratitude is due Mr. Benson for giving us an opportunity of possessing some of the Brontë poems in such a cheap and convenient shape." Spectator

Campbell, Thomas, 1777-1844

Complete poetical works; ed. by J. L. Robertson. Oxford xxiv,376p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

26-14868

Contains a critical introduction, a chronology of the poet's life, and an index to first lines

"He has the glorious distinction of being, in three different pieces, [Ye mariners of England; Battle of the Baltic; Hohenlinden] nearer than any other poet among many to being a perfect master of the great note of battle-poetry. . . Perhaps no other poem of Campbell can be named with these three, as a whole, but most of his earlier and shorter poems give flashes of undoubted poetry." Cambridge hist. of Eng. literature

Carroll, Lewis, pseud. 1832-1898
Collected verse; with illus. by Sir John Tenniel, A. B. Frost, Henry Holiday, Harry Furniss, and the author. Macmillan 1933 445p $2 821

33-12449

"The present volume contains all the verse which appeared in the books by Lewis Carroll published during his lifetime, together with a number of hitherto unpublished juvenile pieces from the original MSS. of Useful and Instructive Poetry and The Rectory Magazine, in addition to many others collected from Collingwood's Lewis Carroll Picture-Book and Life and Letters of Lewis Carroll, and from other works now out of print or not readily accessible. The order followed is mainly chronological." Preface

Another good edition is "Collected verse" (Dutton 1929 xxxviii,228p $2) with an able introduction by J. F. McDermott

Chaucer, Geoffrey, d. 1400
Canterbury tales; tr. into modern English verse by F. E. Hill. Longmans 1935 583p $3 821

35-27085

A rendition of Chaucer into modern English which preserves the meter and much of the flavor and richness of the original

The 1935 edition, with no illustrations, contains 24 of the "Canterbury tales" and the "Prologue." A volume in the Hill translation also published by Longmans in 1930 is available (190p illus $3.50, school ed $1.32). It contains only the "Prologue," four of the "Canterbury tales," "Book of the duchess" and six other lyrics

Geoffrey Chaucer's "Canterbury tales; ed. by Arthur Burrell" in Everyman's library (Dutton 1909 519p 90c) is a good inexpensive edition. Spelling and vocabulary slightly modernized

Poetical works; ed. by A. J. Carlyle and R. M. Carlyle. Oxford xxii,600p (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

33-27214

This edition reproduces the text of the author's own edition, adding the posthumous volume of "Tales and a few poems" gathered under the titles "Juvenilia" and "Occasional poems." There is a biographical and critical introduction and an index of first lines

"He very seldom has the absolute spirit of poetry . . . but the vigour and the distinction of his verse, as well as his wonderful faculty of observation in rendering scene and character, are undeniable." G. E. B. Saintsbury

Davies, William Henry, 1871-

Poems. Cape, J. 1934 475p 7s 6d 821

35-2565

Formerly carried also by Oxford. This is a complete collection of the author's poetry to the time of publication, and therefore replaces the "Collected poems," 1929. The earlier collection is still obtainable from P. Smith at $3

"The good poems, in the main, are those with which we are familiar by way of the anthologies; they are fresh and lovely, and deserve to be remembered." N.Y. Times

Day-Lewis, Cecil, 1904-

Collected poems, 1929-1933. Hogarth 1935 156p 5s 821

35-24929

The edition formerly carried also by Random house, contained an essay "A hope for poetry" which the Hogarth edition does not have

Contents: Transitional poem; From feathers to iron; Magnetic mountain. All previously published as separate volumes

"Of the three chief representatives of the most recent revival of poetry in England, we may say this, that if W. H. Auden is the most savagely intellectual, and Stephen Spender the most impenitently evangelical, Cecil Day Lewis is the most lyrically broad-minded." Sat rev. of lit.

De La Mare, Walter John, 1873-

Memory and other poems. Holt 1938 92p $2 821

(W) [38-15746]

"De La Mare's themes for these exquisite short poems range from such objects of beauty and mystery as a rose, a bird, a shadow, to the facing of sorrow, old age and death." N.Y. libraries

* Poems, 1919 to 1934. Holt 1936 379p $2.50 821

36-6634

"Includes all the poems from "The veil" and "Fleeting" and almost all from "Flora," selections from "Crossings" and "The three royal monkeys," and other occasional rhymes written within the dates

"Lovers of De La Mare's strange, frost-filigree and moonlight craftsmanship will find in this large volume one example after another in which his wonderful technique is exercised upon a real mood of poetic insight and intensity. The reader realizes afresh how visual rather than oral this poet is in his workmanship. . . . On the printed page his magic is inescapable." Christian science monitor

Walter De La Mare's "Poems, 1901 to 1918" (Constable 1920 2v 21s) contains Poems, Listeners, Motley, Songs of childhood, Peacock pie

Dobson, Austin, 1840-1921

Complete poetical works. Oxford 1923 xxiii,525p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

24-15714

"A complete collection containing all the poems included in the ninth edition . . . and in addition fifty-four war rondeaus and other miscellaneous poems. Some changes in the arrangement have been made and three complete indexes have been added." Bkl.

"A deft master of light verse. In his 'vignettes in rhyme' he revives for us the movement and color of his beloved eighteenth century in France and England, in shrewd character sketches and lively anecdotes, mingling wisdom and sentiment with delightful fancy. Although Dobson's art is frankly conventional and bookish, the grace and ease of his verse raise him high in the ranks of minor poets." English and Pope's What to read

[17-26316]

"Poems of a young Englishman who died in 1915 at the age of thirty, and who belonged to the so-called Parnassian School—a group of seekers after perfection of form and the objective interpretation of beauty." Cleveland

"As Parnassian he created some of the sweetest and most melting rhymes, some of the most vivid and sunlit pictures, some of the most plastic poetic art of our own day." Bookman

Ford, Ford Madox, 1873-1939
Collected poems; with an introduction by W. R. Benét. Oxford 1936 348p $3 821
36-23887

"This is the first extensive printing in book form in America of Mr. Ford's Poems. The volume includes the poems which have appeared in England in Collected Poems (1916); On Heaven and Poems Written on Active Service (1918) and New Poems (1927). There is also a section of hitherto unpublished poems." Publisher's note

"He brings you up, sometimes even in bad poems, with the realization that somehow all this is actual experience. Most of his poems are narrative, or narrative and descriptive both." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Collected poems. Scribner 1934 139p $2.50 821
34-27266

"The longer one dwells with these, on the whole, fugitive poems, the more one's liking for them increases. And one guesses the reason for this to be their sincerity, their poetic up-rightness, their intense human quality." N.Y. Times

Gay, John, 1685-1732
Poetical works including "Polly," "The beggar's opera," and selections from the other dramatic work, ed. by G. C. Faber. Oxford 1926 xlvii,700p front $1.50 821
27-26598

A good edition edited by G. C. Faber. The introduction is largely textual and there is also a bibliographical summary and a discussion of the doubtful poems. Indexes to titles, first lines, and first lines of the songs in the operas
"The originality of Gay's talent is to be found . . . in a clear-sighted realism, with an inclination to irony, which alternates between the sense of and search for the picturesque, and parody. There is in him a kind of intellectual cynicism that knows how to see freely and make us actually see, and thus to emerge from convention." Legouis and Cazamian's Hist. of Eng. literature

Hardy, Thomas, 1840-1928
* Collected poems. Macmillan 1926 xxviii, 818p $3.75 821

27-26086

This edition adds to the contents of the 1920 edition the poems published separately under the titles "Later lyrics and earlier" and "Human shows, far phantasies"
"There have been many poets among us in the last fifty years, poets of sure talent, and it may be even of genius, but no other of them has this compulsive power of Hardy. The secret is not hard to find. Not one of them is adequate to what we know and have suffered. . . Therefore we deliberately set Mr Hardy among the greatest." Athenaeum

Thomas Hardy's "Chosen poems" in the Golden treasury series (Macmillan 1934 277p $1.50) contains lyrical, narrative and reflective poems and war poems and lyrics from "The dynasts"

Henley, William Ernest, 1849-1903
Poems. Macmillan 1921 289p $2.40 821

22-149

Contents: In hospital; Bric-à-brac; Echoes; Rhymes and rhythms; Hawthorn and lavender; London voluntaries; London types; Three prologues; For England's sake; Epicedia; Song of speed; Appendix
"There are echoes . . . of old ballads, of standard verse, of modern singers as various as Tennyson and Emily Brontë and Swinburne. But, even in these . . . Henley almost always contrives to blend an original tone." Cambridge hist. of Eng. literature

Herbert, George, 1593-1633
Poems. Oxford 1913 327p (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

The introduction by Arthur Waugh contains biographical as well as critical material. The poet's works in Greek and Latin are given in addition to his English poems, and all are indexed by first lines

Herrick, Robert, 1591-1674
Poetical works. Oxford 1921 446p (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

[15-27760]

An edition based on the library edition edited by F. W. Moorman and published in 1915. The brief introduction is by another hand. Indexes of titles and first lines

Herrick was "a cavalier pastoral poet. His lyrics dwell on love, flowers, music, precious stones, etc., agreeable to the court life and fancies of Stuart days." Pratt alcove

Hinkson, Mrs Katharine (Tynan) 1861-1931
Collected poems. Macmillan 1930 xxiv, 381p $5 821

31-26360

In an appreciative foreword A. E. (G. W. Russell) says of this poet: "Katharine Tynan was the earliest singer in that awakening of our imagination which has been spoken of as the Irish Renaissance. I think she had as much natural sunlight in her as the movement ever attained." Foreword

Hodgson, Ralph
Poems. Macmillan 1917 64p $1.75 821

17-14542

"A compilation in one small volume of poems hitherto published in chapbook or broadside form. Mr. Hodgson is of the more conservative modern school of poets, and, on account of the mingled simplicity and whimsical grace of some of his work, he has been compared in turn to Walter de la Mare, William Davies and William Blake." Cleveland

Hood, Thomas, 1799-1845
Complete poetical works; ed. with notes by Walter Jerrold. Oxford 773p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

13-12349

This edition contains a brief introduction and a chronological table of the poet's life, notes, and index of first lines

Hood "was the poet of the heart, and sound at heart himself,—the poet of humane sentiment, clarified by a living spring of humor, which kept it from any taint of sentimentalism. To read his pages is to laugh and weep by turns; to take on human charity. . . Even his artistic weaknesses (and he had no other) were frolicsome and endearing." E. C. Stedman

Housman, Alfred Edward, 1859-1936
* Collected poems. Holt 1940 264p $3 821

(W) 40-27330

Contents: Shropshire lad; Last poems; More poems; Additional poems; Translations; Note on the text; Chronology of the poems; Index of first lines and titles
"It is a volume for all admirers of the man who has been called the greatest English poet of our day. . . As a whole, the latest additions to the body of Housman's work add little to the original 'Shropshire Lad' and 'Last poems.' But there are poems among them . . . that may stand with the best of such flawless lyric writing as English poetry is not likely to see soon again." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

The following may also be obtained separately:

Housman, A. E. Last poems. Holt 1922 79p $1.25

Ingelow, Jean, 1820-1897
Poems. Oxford 503p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

A13-1907

"Miss Ingelow may be termed an idyllic lyrist, her lyrical pieces having always much idyllic beauty, and being more original than her . . . ambitious efforts in blank-verse." E. C. Stedman

Joyce, James, 1882-
Collected poems. Viking 1937 63p front $2 821

(W) 37-28693

"Fifty lyrics of great delicacy and simplicity. Two-thirds of them were included in 'Chamber music,' published by Huebsch in 1918, the others are hitherto unpublished in America." Bkl.

Keats, John, 1795-1821
* Complete poetical works and letters. Cambridge ed Houghton xxiv,473p illus $3.50, student's ed $2.50 821

99-5665

In this edition the attempt is made to follow a chronological arrangement as nearly as it can be ascertained from the letters. Text has been collated with the first editions and there are historical and bibliographical notes

Other recommended editions are:

Kingsley, Charles, 1819-1875
Poems. Dutton 236p (Everyman's lib.) 90c 821

A27-284

"As a poet he wrote but little, but there are . . . many isolated lyrics, which are worthy of a place in all standard collections of English literature." Encyclopedia Britannica, 11th ed.

Kipling, Rudyard, 1865-1936
* Rudyard Kipling's verse; inclusive edition, 1885-1932. Doubleday 1934 937p $5 821

34-28421

The previous edition, published 1927, included poems to 1926; this edition adds 36 poems written between 1926 and 1932, together with "The muse among the motors." Contains the poems published as separate volumes and also songs and poems first published in his prose works

"Poems that sing themselves, that breathe of the open and free, poems of adventure and romance that are of the very soul of youth." Pratt alcove

For the library that prefers separate volumes the following are suggested:
Kipling, Rudyard. Departmental ditties and Ballads and barrack-room ballads. Doubleday 1899 217p $2.50
Kipling, Rudyard. Songs for youth. Doubleday 1925 222p illus $2.50 A selection of 55 poems, attractively illustrated

Langland, William, 1330?-1400?
Vision of Piers the Plowman; done into modern English by W. W. Skeat. Oxford 1905 xxix,151p front (Medieval lib.) $2 821

[22-19754]

"This long, allegorical, alliterative poem by an author (or authors) contemporary with Chaucer describes all sorts of human types and throws much light upon social and religious institutions in 14th Century England." A. D. Dickinson

"Vision of Piers Plowman; newly rendered into modern English by H. W. Wells; with an introduction by Nevill Coghill and notes by the translator" (Sheed 1935 304p $3) is another good version in which modern English is used in the alliterative metre of the original

Lawrence, David Herbert, 1885-1930
Last poems; ed. by Richard Aldington and Giuseppe Orioli, with an introduction. Viking 1933 316p $3 821

33-10247

"These poems are moving, for they approximate a spiritual record of Lawrence's life during his last year. Technically they are not among his best, some are very slight, but they are direct and sincere and show the intense vitality and strong personality peculiar to Lawrence." Cincinnati

D. H. Lawrence's "Collected poems" (Viking 1929 2v $5) is also available

Macaulay, Thomas Babington Macaulay, 1st baron, 1800-1859
Lays of ancient Rome, and other historical poems; with an introduction by G. M. Trevelyan. Longmans 1928 182p illus $3 821

1 Rome—History—Poetry 28-23843

Contents: Introduction; Preface; Horatius; Battle of the Lake Regillus; Virginia; Prophecy of Capys; Ivry; Armada; Battle of Moncontour; Naseby; Last buccaneer; Epitaph on a Jacobite; An early revision of the Armada; Battle of Bosworth Field

"It was Macaulay's conjecture that the half-legendary history of Rome's earliest days was preserved for generations in ballad form. The ballads were lost, but the legends were re-told by the historians. In the 'Lays of Ancient Rome' Macaulay sought to 'reverse that process, to transform some portions of early Roman history back into the poetry out of which they were made' . . . It may be said that these poems are so stirring that their author seems almost to have been a Roman citizen, exulting in the heroic past of his people." English & Pope's What to read

MacNeice, Louis, 1907-
Poems. Random house 1937 115p $2.50 821

38-1239

"This is the first American edition of the author's poems (1926-37). He belongs to the post-war Oxford group of which W. H. Auden, Stephen Spender and C. Day Lewis are the leaders." Book rev. digest

"MacNeice is perhaps too emphatically contemporary, insisting again and again upon the wireless, the factory chimneys, the policemen and the buses. Yet this is the main interest of the substance of his poems, that the circumference is always social and the center is always personal." Poetry

Macpherson, James, 1736-1796
Poems of Ossian. Centenary ed with additional Ossianic ballads and songs by William Sharp. Grant, J. 6s 821

Poems published as alleged translations from the Gaelic Ossian legends, but which are now considered to be original poems inspired by the legends. This edition by Sharp was first published in 1896

Masefield, John, 1878-
* Poems. complete ed with recent poems. Macmillan 1935 2v in 1 $5 821

35-5388

Some few poems in the earlier edition of 1929 have been dropped and the following have been added: Poems from Sard Harker, Odtaa, The Wanderer, Minnie Maylow's

story, and A tale of Troy. In addition to these, this volume contains: Salt-water ballads, Miscellaneous poems, Everlasting mercy, Widow in the Bye street, Dauber, Daffodil fields, Sonnets, Lollingdon downs, Reynard the Fox, and other poems

"As for the poems here presented again, there can be no question that certain of them, lyrics, sonnets, and narratives alike, will live for some time. The stamp of a powerful and impressive personality is upon them. Masefield is no great philosopher, but he is a noble one; and he knows the true springs of song and is a natural narrator." Sat. rev. of lit.

Meredith, George, 1828-1909

Poetical works; with some notes by G. M. Trevelyan. Scribner 1912 623p front $4 821

12-23125

"The text, except for a few emendations and changes in arrangement, is that of the Scribner Memorial edition, issued in three volumes. . . Explanatory notes have been added. Portrait, table of contents, and index of first lines." N.Y. state lib.

"Meredith's verse is dramatic and realistic, but occasionally ventures upon a classical or romantic study." E. C. Stedman

Meynell, Mrs Alice Christiana (Thompson) 1850-1922

Poems. complete ed Scribner 1923 144p front $2.50 821

23-7220

This edition includes all of the poems previously published in "Preludes," "Poems," "Later poems," "Poems, a collected edition," "A father of women," and "Last poems"

"To many people her poems are rightly exceedingly attractive, they are intellectual, they are melodious, they are in admirable taste, and, in almost every poem, there are here and there lines which must give deep pleasure to every intelligent reader of poetry." Spectator

Mrs. A. C. T. Meynell's "Selected poems" (Scribner 1931 57p front $1.50) contains a selection of her best poems with the biographical sketch from the "Encyclopaedia britannica"

Milton, John, 1608-1674

"He may not soar very high, he may not dive very deep; but he skims the surface with a curiously light, deft and variously fluttering wing. . . One thing no competent and fair-minded enemy has ever denied him—an almost unique faculty of marrying words to music and music to words." Cambridge hist. of Eng. literature

Morris, William, 1834-1896

Earthly paradise; a poem. Longmans 2v o.p. 1939 821

First published 1868-70

"One of the most beautiful of nineteenth century romances. . . The poem is a collection of the tales of Golden Greece, and of the dim, rich, mediaeval time. . . The author draws upon Greek mythology, upon the 'Gesta Romanorum,' the Nibelungenlied, the Eddas; indeed, upon the greatest story-books of the world. He has woven them all together in one beautiful Gothic tapestry of verse." H. R. Keller's Reader's digest of books

Story of Sigurd the Volsung and the fall of the Niblungs. Longmans 1904 345p $2.75, school ed 80c 821

4-13922

"In 'The Story of Sigurd,' which remains his masterpiece of sustained power, he goes sheer through civilization, and finds an ample beauty shadowed under the dusk of the Gods . . . And now, at last, he touches the heart; for he sings of the passions of men, of the fierceness of love and hate, of the music of swords in the day of battle." Saturday rev.

Two other well-known poems are:

Morris, William. Defence of Guenevere, and other poems. Longmans 248p $1.40

Morris, William. Life and death of Jason. Dutton 304p (Everyman's lib.) 90c

A "poet who treated old themes with a fresh beauty. His 'Marpessa' and 'Christ in Hades' [included here] received an immediate welcome from the public." Neilson and Thorndike's Hist. of Eng. literature

Pope, Alexander, 1688-1744
* Complete poetical works, [ed. by H. W. Boynton]. Cambridge ed Houghton xx,672p illus $3.50, student's ed $2.50 821
3-10221

"We cannot deny him the tribute of greatness. . . It is too much to claim that his verses attained the highest imaginative flights. . . He sought above all, in imitation of classical models, correctness of style." Painter's Hist. of Eng. literature
"Pope gave our heroic couplet its strictest melody and tersest expression." Thomas Campbell

Another good edition is the Globe, edited by A. W. Ward (Macmillan lii,505p $1.80)

Rossetti, Christina Georgina, 1830-1894
Poetical works; with memoir and notes, &c., by W. M. Rossetti. Globe ed Macmillan lxxiii, 507p front $1.80 821
8-13713

"While she naturally displayed a temper akin to her brother's . . . large parts, and some of the best parts, of her poetical accomplishment are quite distinct from anything of his. . . Her lyrics have a lighter, more bird-like, movement and voice than his stately descants; she is less prone to an extreme regularity of metre, and her whole tone is often different. . . Her most characteristic strain is where . . . pathos blends with, or passes into, the utterance of religious awe, unstained and unweakened by any craven fear." G. E. B. Saintsbury

Rossetti, Dante Gabriel, 1828-1882
Poems and translations, 1850-1870. . . Oxford 482p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

Contains also a prose story "Hand and soul" and the poet's translations from the Italian: the poets before Dante, Dante and his circle, and Dante's "Vita nuova"
The "work of the poet-painter who with Millais, Hunt and others founded the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood in protest against existing conventions in art and literature. With the publication of his Poems in 1870 Rossetti was quickly acclaimed as a new poet of originality and beauty." Pratt alcove

Russell, George William, 1867-1935
Collected poems, by A. E. [2d ed] Macmillan 1926 373p $3.75 821
26-27675

Collected from "Homeward," "Songs by the way," "The earth breath," "The divine vision," and "Voices of the stones," with some new verses including many poems not in the first edition. Includes, the poet says, "what poetry of mine I would wish my friends to read"

Mystical, decorative verse in which "the presence of true inspiration and of haunting beauty . . . is incontestable." Nation

G. W. Russell's "Selected poems" (Macmillan 1935 198p $2.50) is the author's own choice of his representative poems. Many are contained in the "Collected poems"

Sackville-West, Victoria Mary, 1892-
Solitude; a poem. Doubleday 1939 56p $1.75 821
39-22151

"Concerned not with the country scene but with the reflections that it induces. Among the fields and orchards, beneath the sky whose stars cannot be seen from city streets, the poet watches late into the night, alone." New statesman and Nation
"It has many lovely and even some exhilarating passages, phrased with a true poetic nicety and precision." Manchester guardian

Sassoon, Siegfried Lorraine, 1886-
Selected poems. Heinemann 1925 75p 3s 6d 821
25-15082

A representative selection of the author's early verse which includes poems from "The old huntsman," "War poems" and "The picture show"
"Siegfried Sassoon, at first accepting without question the conventional attitudes of patrioteers, revolted into a crude and violent pacifism. His later work has been less violent and more conventional, and, though the satirical strain is recurrent, his lyrics in recent years have been deeply personal rather than stridently social." Manly & Rickert's Contemporary British literature

Scott, Sir Walter, bart. 1771-1832

Sitwell, Edith, 1887-

Selected poems; with an essay on her own poetry. Houghton 1937 285p $3 821

[37-490]

"Rare and varied poems, distinguished by the great technical skill and sharp use of words, natural to this great English poet." Cincinnati

"By an almost constant utilizing of the effects of synaesthesia—the associations of visual sensations with auditory, of tactual sensations with visual, etc.—she contrives to create a hard, brittle world that has something of the unreal theatrical quality of the world of Rousseau." Manly and Rickert's Contemporary British literature

Southey, Robert, 1774-1843

Poems; ed. by M. H. Fitzgerald. . . Oxford xxviii,768p front (Oxford standard authors) $1.50 821

14-14907

Not a complete edition, this contains Thalaba the Destroyer; The curse of Kehama; Roderick; Madoc; A tale of Paraguay; and selected minor poems. It is also furnished with the usual critical apparatus in an introduction, bibliographical and critical, a biographical table, notes and index of first lines. A list of the poems not reprinted in this edition is given in an appendix

Spender, Stephen, 1909-

Poems. Random house 1934 68p $1.50 821

34-35674

"Stephen Spender, with his first book of poems, shows promise of being the best lyric poet of his generation in England. . . His talents are obvious, and one is made aware of his ease of movement, freshness, and clarity. He is still a trifle overfond of generalizing his emotions and of dodging the concrete image. These are habits that have afflicted all minor romantic poetry, but such flaws are rare in his work; his statement of affirmation carries everything before it." Horace Gregory in Nation

Spenser, Edmund, 1552?-1599

Poems; ed. by R. E. N. Dodge. Cambridge ed Houghton xxiii,852p front $4, student's ed $3 821

Stephens, James, 1882-

Collected poems. Macmillan 1926 268p $3.50 821

26-18496

In this reprinting from his previous volumes of verse Mr Stephens has discarded a great number of his poems and retained some of the most criticised. The poems thus chosen he has arranged in subject-sequence. Adapted from Preface

"James Stephens is April in Ireland. Chase his laughing fancy down the lyric lane and it stops in tears; or, the other way about. Whether sprightly or serious, his thought nearly always wears a thin, shimmering mantle which may be called Loveliness. That his poetry is not great is as unimportant as the dragon-fly's failure to be the rainbow." North American

Stevenson, Robert Louis, 1850-1894

* Complete poems. Scribner 1923 528p front $4 821

23-17137

Contents: Child's garden of verses; Underwoods; Songs of travel and other verses; Ballads; New poems

"Stevenson was a poet, a reckonable poet. He was a better short-story writer . . . It is astonishing, after all, that he was so good a poet in the intervals of fecund prose creation. He was a casual poet, with extraordinarily lucky moments." Literary rev.

Swinburne, Algernon Charles, 1837-1909

Complete poetical works. Heinemann 1924 2v 15s 821

[20-10082]

"The most fertile lyric poet of the Victorian era, whose unequalled versatility in the use of lyric form was amazing in its brilliance. Receptive of manifold influences, classical, English and foreign, he reproduced them in a style which was wholly individual." Cambridge hist. of Eng. literature

"The collected poems, supplemented by over two hundred and fifty pages of notes analyzing the poems exhaustively. Includes some biographical data, an index to first lines, and a title-index of poems and notes." Book rev. digest

"Thompson has written, amidst the pains of a grievous life, some masterpieces filled with a strangely sumptuous and ample harmony, in which amplitude and sumptuousness are not always reconciled, and in which poetry at times is the loser for their secret struggle. The instants of their union

Wilde, Oscar, 1854-1900
Poems. Methuen 3s 6d 821

An attractively printed edition. There is a biographical and critical introduction by Temple Scott in which he says, "there is enough of each kind [of literary expression in Wilde's works] so excellent in quality that one is fain to believe that Wilde would have been distinguished as great in any one. . . Indeed, there are many who concede to him the title of poet on 'The Ballad of Reading Gaol' alone."

Wolfe, Humbert, 1885-
Humoresque. Benn 1926 86p 3s 6d 821

26-27552

A "group of poems about the lost love of Pierrot and Pierrette, and about Pantaloon and the Constable and Harlequin. Each one speaks for himself in lovely poetry and in a characteristic manner. Here we have, in a variety of metres, all sides of Humbert Wolfe: his serious side, seriousness with a tinge of irony, pathos, mischievous humor, charming little will-o'-the-wispy nothings that one could almost blow away with a breath. The poems are divided like a drama in five acts." Providence

Humbert Wolfe's "Requiem" (Benn 1927 125p 6s) is another recommended volume of his poetry

1 American poetry—Collections 2 English poetry—Collections 36-9243

Also obtainable as "Chief modern poets of England" and "Chief modern poets of America" at $1.75 each
First published 1929. The revised edition contains work of several poets not previously represented—Edgar Lee Masters, Robinson Jeffers, T. S. Eliot, Archibald MacLeish—and enlarged sections on other poets among whom are W. B. Yeats, James Stephens, Edna St Vincent Millay
The editors' aim has been to represent a limited number of the outstanding and contemporary poets and to include enough poems by each to allow the reader to judge the poet as an individual. Each poet is therefore represented by from five to forty poems. Selections are preceded by biographical sketches. Index of titles and first lines

1 English poetry—Collections 4-13936

The "plan is not to offer a collection of absolutely flawless poems, long since become classic and accepted as models; but in fact to make a truthful exhibit of the course of song during the last sixty years, as shown by the poets of Great Britain in the best of their shorter productions. [It] . . . is designed to supplement my 'Victorian Poets' [listed in class 821.09] by choice and typical examples of the work discussed in that review." Preface
The last section is devoted to Colonial poets. There are biographical notes and indexes of first lines, titles, and poets

Part 1 is devoted to various aspects of poetry—as picture, story, comedy, drama, and as related to human problems and emotions. Each section is accompanied by a generous selection of poems so that this part constitutes an anthology. Part 2 treats of the structure and forms of poetry: the sonnet, ballad, rondel, ballads, limerick, epic, ode, etc. This part contains in expanded form some of the same subjects treated in Untermeyer's "Forms of poetry" entered in class 808.1

3 Poetry—History and criticism 35-18099

A critical survey of English and American poetry of the last two decades and of the forces which have influenced it. Bibliography: p275-80

"I recommend this book to all those who wish to know just what influences are contemporary and just how the modern attitude of poets toward poetry differs from the old. Miss Deutsch takes us back as well as forward, discusses tradition and the Imagists, and brings us down inevitably to Spender and Auden and Day Lewis. Her judgments are for the most part sound." W. Considers the epic in its relation to English literature, beginning with "Beowulf" and ending with Matthew Arnold

"Professor Dixon is a writer of discretion and apt phrase, and the sincerest compliment we can pay him is to say that he has packed a large amount of readable, lucid and truly critical writing into a book which might have been, from its scope and subject, exceedingly uninspiring." Saturday rev.

Gummere, Francis Barton, 1855-1919

The popular ballad. Houghton 1907 360p (Types of English literature) o.p. 1939 821.09

1 Ballads 7-18086

"Prof. Gummere starts out with a severely critical consideration of just what must be meant by 'popular' as applied to ballads and rules out all but about 300 specimens of the genre. . . He restricts the present study to these remnants of oral tradition, divides them into half a dozen classes, studies their sources, and gives a critical estimate of their worth. . . He has a cleverness of statement and an ability to use aptly and vividly a very great fund of erudition that will make his book entertaining as well as instructive for the general reader, while the special student will find it a mine of information." 1 English poetry—History and criticism 16-25166

A volume "based on Lafcadio Hearn's lecture notes prepared for his students in Tokyo university. A particular interest that attaches to them is that they represent an attempt to make English literature comprehensible to the oriental mind. The difference in point of view between East and West is made plain in the chapter 'On love in English poetry.' Poets treated somewhat at length are Rossetti, Swinburne, Browning, and William Morris, and there are shorter notes on Tennyson, Charles Kingsley, Matthew Arnold, Jean Ingelow and others." 2 Imagination [27-9075]

First published 1927. The 1930 edition has few minor corrections

"In this exhaustive study of the genesis of two great poems of Coleridge, the Rime of the ancient mariner and Kubla Khan, Professor Lowes traces the working of the creative imagination, the growth of the poet's vision and the way he brings ordered unity out of the shapes and images which haunt the background of his mind." Book rev. digest

"There has gone into it love and industry, sensitiveness and scholarship . . . intuition and imagination of a rare kind. . . In addition to being a contribution to criticism and scholarship it must also be a valuable contribution to psychology." Pittsburgh

822 ENGLISH DRAMA

In this class are listed collected plays of individual authors and some single plays which are regarded as specially desirable. Many of these are contained in the general collections listed in class 822.08. The small public library may prefer to buy heavily in classes 808.82 and 822.08 rather than to buy the individual plays. Because selection of individual plays will depend on the collections held, no stars have been added

Collections indexed in Firkins (see class 808.82 Bibl.) are not indexed in this Catalog

This interesting and valuable Mermaid series, of which a number of volumes will be found listed here, gives literal reproductions of the old texts of many of the Elizabethan and Restoration dramatists. In some cases all the plays of a writer are given, in other cases only a selection of "best" or representative plays. They are edited by well-known scholars and there are biographical and critical introductions and a few explanatory footnotes

Bennett, Arnold, 1867-1931, and Knoblauch, Edward, 1874-

Milestones; a play in three acts. Methuen 1912 122p 3s 6d 822
[12-11219]

"The play represents three successive generations of one family beset by the same problems under varying aspects in 1860, in 1885 and in 1912. With exquisite irony it shows how the radicals of one age become the conservatives of the next and how, to each generation as it passes, 'the age is going to the dogs' and 'women are not what they used to be.'" Pittsburgh

Besier, Rudolf, 1878-

Barretts of Wimpole Street; a comedy in five acts. Little 1930 165p $2 822

1 Browning, Mrs Elizabeth (Barrett)—Drama A31-174

"The long-famous courtship and elopement of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning furnish the theme for this drama. . . The author has followed the known facts faithfully and yet has succeeded in creating a play which is of commanding interest in itself." Pittsburgh

Carroll, Paul Vincent

Shadow & substance. Random house 1937 176p illus $2 822
38-1431

"A moving drama, staged in the house of the clergy in an Irish town. The canon, an austere scholar with no patience for religious sentimentality, is irritated by his young assistant's campaign against an irreverent, satirical book and attempts to protect the schoolmaster who is its author. The priest and the iconoclast are enemies, but each in his own way loves the little servant girl whose visions leave them skeptical but whose simplicity and faith confound them." Bkl.

White steed, and Coggerers. Random house 1939 190p front $2 822
(W) 39-27112

"The white steed tells the story of an honest but narrow and bigoted young priest who attempts, like a sort of modern Savonarola to puritanize the town." Commonweal

1 Beaconsfield, Benjamin Disraeli, 1st earl of, 1804-1881—Drama [11-29412]

"An interesting example of the well constructed modern 'one-part' play. The dramatic effects are familiar but well handled, and the comedy of manners fulfils the author's intention to create a theatrically effective picture of Disraeli's times, not a historically accurate portrait of the man himself." Bkl.

L. N. Parker's "Pomander walk; a comedy in three acts" (French 1915 125p illus 75c) is a delightful play of the 18th century

Contents: Aylmer's secret; Ulysses; Sin of David; Nero; Faust; Pietro of Siena

"In all these dramas the full onrush of poetic exclamation is made subservient in an admirably workmanlike way to the structure of the play as a whole. Therefore the mere diction of many passages is thin as to poetic content even while their dramatic value is high and they fulfil their proper function." Literary rev.

Paolo & Francesca; a tragedy in four acts. Dodd 1905 120p $2 822

1 Francesca da Rimini—Drama 2-483

A tragedy in blank verse which gives in an effective and dramatic fashion a beautiful and sympathetic interpretation of the story of the ill-fated lovers

"Probably Mr. Shaw would consider the most important part of this volume to be his one hundred and twenty-seven page introduction to 'Androcles,' in which he sets forth in all its phases his theories of Christian sociology, beginning with a review and interpretation of the Four Gospels. 'Overruled' is a farcical comedy concerned with the gallantries of married people, the slight preface dealing with sex in conduct and art. 'Pygmalion' has no preface, but is provided with a sequel carrying forward the history of the characters several years and disposing of them in ways for which those who see the play without first reading the sequel will be scarcely prepared." 1 Shakespeare, William, 1564-1616—Criticism and interpretation 33-15121

"The great rewards in reading Shakespeare lie, for Mr. Smith, in his poetry and his characters. Of Shakespeare on the stage he thinks little and of the mysteries of meaning in which the scholars have become entangled, much less. Delightful essays written with intelligence and humor." Wis. bul.

"The first third is an account of Shakespeare's life. . . The second part is more technical: a discussion of Shakespeare's medium, which is to say, the theatre of his time, the limitations and conventions of his stage, and the mechanics of his verse. The third part is a detailed and critical examination of each of the thirty-six plays." Book-of-the-month club news

" 'Shakespeare,' by Mark Van Doren. . . is a sensitive appreciation of Shakespeare's art, conducive to more enjoyable reading of the plays. The present book is aimed at more informed reading, for it summarizes the facts that scholarly research has unveiled about the dramatist's life and the Elizabethan theater, and gives a short critical estimate of each play. Illustrated with portraits of Shakespearian actors and old prints. Classified, annotated bibliography: p417-75." Bkl.

1 Figures of speech 2 Shakespeare, William, 1564-1616—Style 35-28759

"This is the first of a series of books in which the author expects to synthesize the results of ten years' labor in gathering and classifying Shakespeare's images—metaphors, similes, personifications, etc. . . It is the author's thesis that we can learn much concerning the poet and his views on life and his own works thru this extensive study of his imagery." Book rev. digest

Shakespeare. Holt 1939 344p $3 822.3

1 Shakespeare, William, 1564-1616—Criticism and interpretation (W) 39-25286

This book was written out of the conviction that "the interest of the plays as they have come down to us exceeds the interest either of the individual who wrote them or of the age that produced him." One chapter is devoted to each play and one to the poems

"The book is written on a level of original but unpretentious insight and is remarkable for its closeness to the plays. Nowhere does Mr. Van Doren depend for effect on grand generalizations. His comments seem to stream naturally out of the dramas; they are not superimposed upon them. A wise and distinguished book." New Yorker

"With the exception of a few trivial corrections, the text of this edition stands as it was in 1935. I have, however, added several pages of notes at the end of the volume." Preface

A critical interpretation and commentary

"Not the sharpest disagreement with what Dr. Dover Wilson says could dull the reader to the delights of the way he says it. He has been twitted before now with his imagination and his enthusiasm; but imagination is no bad quality in the interpreter of high tragedy, especially when its eye is so firmly held to the object as in this book." "The field covered is a wide one, practically the whole life of English fiction from Richardson to [1900]. . . In a general way, Mr. Howells is happiest with those fictional creations whose authors have used his own method—that of the realist. . . His attitude toward the romanticists makes him a bit less sympathetic perhaps to the children, fair or foul, of their making; yet the strictures are so frank, so gently put, and so intensely honest. . . that they carry the more weight, whatever one's opinion." Beerbohm, Sir Max, 1872-

And even now. Dutton 1921 320p $2 824
21-18410

"Impressions of books and writers . . . form the subjects of these essays and whimsies. Humor and satire and lightness of touch characterize them, with some fantastic exaggerations and now and then a suspicion of deeper sentiment. A visit to Swinburne in his childish old age is described in 'No. 2. The pines.' Other essays are: Books within books; A point to be remembered by very eminent men; Quia imperfectum; The crime; William and Mary; Laughter; Servants." Book rev. digest

"Hardly a sentence of his can be read without inward pleasure at its craft; there is hardly a page without its luminous crystallisation of thought or experience. Yet perhaps his greatest achievement is his power of imposing on us his personality." Saturday rev.

This collection, edited by H. D. Traill, comprises v26-30 of the "Works of Thomas Carlyle"
In these miscellaneous essays is found the essence of Carlyle's philosophy and the reasons for his influence on English letters

On heroes, hero-worship and the heroic in history. Oxford 245p (World's classics) 80c 824
33-27222
First published, 1841; in this edition, 1904
By means of sketches on Mahomet, Dante, Shakespeare, Luther, Samuel Johnson, Cromwell, Napoleon and others, Carlyle aims to prove the importance of the great man in history and to show that the essential heroic qualities have been the same in all great men

Past and present. Dutton 309p (Everyman's lib.) 90c 824
1 Great Britain—Social conditions 2 Social problems A13-542
Contrasting England of the Middle 19th century with England of the 12th century
The same collection of essays may also be had in the Modern student's library (Scribner $1)

* Sartor resartus. On heroes, hero-worship and the heroic in history. Dutton 1908 xx,474p (Everyman's lib.) 90c 824
A10-8
Also obtainable in the Doubleday-Doran series in literature (Doubleday $1)
"Sartor resartus" contains the germ of Carlyle's philosophy. It purports to be an interpretation of the work of an erudite German professor, but is really the story of Carlyle's own fierce spiritual conflict between doubt and faith. It presents a philosophy of clothes, or the outward forms of things

Chesterton, Gilbert Keith, 1874-1936
As I was saying. Methuen 1936 227p 6s 824
36-18613

(32-9875)

"A selection of essays and reviews from among the author's writings of forty-eight years, reprinted from various journals and covering a wide variety of subjects. The order in which they here appear is chronological." Book rev. digest

"Several essays are of the first importance and all are vital and authentic, carefully selected as having some kind of interest either in relation to the time when they were written or in relation to to-day." Times (London) lit. sup.

Havelock Ellis's "Fountain of Life" (Houghton 1930 488p $4) brings together in one volume the three series of "Impressions and comments" separately published. They consist of personal, fragmentary notes

Forster, Edward Morgan, 1879-

Abinger harvest. Harcourt 1936 363p $3.50 824

36-10167

"Pervaded by Forster's clear thinking, his culture and his warm human sympathies, and distinguished by his lucid graceful prose, this miscellany reprints about 80 articles, essays, reviews, poems etc. from various periodicals. The arrangement is according to subjects, which include a commentary on passing events, literary criticism, the past, the East, and the text of the Abinger pageant, Abinger being a village in Surrey that Forster has known all his life." N.Y. libraries

Galsworthy, John, 1867-1933

These essays show "the two distinguishing features of this author, his master craftsmanship—for he is a veritable jeweler in words—and his highly socialized conscience." North American review

Other essays by John Galsworthy are:
Galsworthy, John. Candelabra. Scribner 1933 311p $2.50
Galsworthy, John. A sheaf. Scribner 1916 393p $2

Gissing, George Robert, 1857-1903

* Private papers of Henry Ryecroft. Dutton 267p (Everyman's lib.) 90c 824

A28-507

There is also an edition at $2 (Dutton)

First published 1902 as a serial in the Fortnightly, under the title of "An author at grass"

Under pretense of editing the musings of one Henry Ryecroft, Gissing collected these observations upon life, literature, art, philosophy and religion, and divided them into four chapters, named after the seasons. These essays, if they may be called by any such formal term, reveal with quiet charm and sincerity Gissing's own struggle toward successful authorship

Grey, Edward Grey, 1st viscount, 1862-1933

* Fallodon papers; woodcuts by Robert Gibbings. Houghton 1926 168p illus $2.50 824

Hazlitt, William, 1778-1830

Best of Hazlitt, comp. by P. P. Howe. Methuen 1923 204p 2s 3d 824

23-26885

Formerly carried also by Doran. Many small libraries will find this collection sufficient for their needs

"Carefully selected essays chosen by the authoritative biographer of Hazlitt with the view of illustrating the character and genius of the great essayist. Prepared for general reading but excellently adapted for the student of English literature." Bkl.

There are several well chosen collections of Hazlitt's essays in inexpensive editions. Two of these are "Essays; ed. by P. Van D. Shelly" in the Modern student's library (Scribner 1924 $1)

Table talk; or, Original essays. Dutton 337p (Everyman's lib.) 90c 824

A10-2166

Miscellaneous essays first published 1821-22. Also available in the World's classics series (Oxford 80c)

Considered by many the author's best work, these miscellaneous essays on a variety of subjects are written in what Hazlitt himself called "the genuine master spirit of the prose writer, viz. the tone of lively sensible conversation"

William Hazlitt's "Selected essays" edited by Geoffrey Keynes (Random house 1930 807p $3.50) is another representative, well-edited collection

Hudson, William Henry, 1841-1922

Traveller in little things. Dutton 1921 339p $2.50 824

21-19489

"Miscellaneous essays on nature and human nature. Among them are several delightful sketches of little girls the author has known." Wis. bul.

"This is one of those excellent books about which there is little to say critically, because its quality is like the charm of upland pasture or the odor of an April wind, better described than analyzed. It is decidedly not a book with which to begin an acquaintance with Mr Hudson's calm, rich prose, but it is a good book for lovers of Hudson, precisely because it is fragmentary and various, a note-book, really of a personality long since matured." H. S. Canby in Nation

Hunt, Leigh, 1784-1859

Essays and sketches; chosen and edited with an introduction by R. B. Johnson. Oxford xx,419p front (World's classics) 80c 824

26-11903

"Leigh Hunt's essays do seem actual talk captured in print. They really are 'causeries,' ranging from light chatter to an occasional strain of grave monologue. . . . As an essayist, pure and simple, Leigh Hunt is undoubtedly not in the first rank. But as a miscellaneous writer, talking in print on an extraordinary variety of subjects, a greater variety than you will find in either Lamb or Hazlitt, he has few serious rivals." Introduction

Huxley, Aldous Leonard, 1894-

Olive tree. Harper 1937 307p $2.75 824

37-27162

Miscellaneous collection of sixteen papers of varying length, some of which have been previously published. Contents: Writers and readers; T. H. Huxley as a literary man; Words and behaviour; Modern fetishism; Literature and examinations; English snobbery; Time and the machine; New-fashioned Christmas; Historical generalizations; Crébillon the younger; Justifications; D. H. Lawrence; B. R. Haydon; Waterworks and kings; In a Tunisian oasis; Olive tree

"Whether Mr. Huxley is writing as scientist or literary artist, he is always well worth reading. He has an astonishing range of general scholarship and, better still, an original, earnestly inquiring mind that is directed ultimately, whatever various paths he may explore, towards the search for truth." Manchester guardian

A. L. Huxley's "Along the road" (Chatto 1925 267p 7s 6d) consists of entertaining essays on travel, with comments on art, literature and other subjects

Huxley, Thomas Henry, 1825-1895

* Lectures & lay sermons. Dutton 294p illus (Everyman's lib.) 90c 824

A11-2041

Miscellaneous essays written at various times chiefly during the sixties of the last century

Contents: On a piece of chalk; Geological contemporaneity and persistent types of life; On the advisableness of improving natural knowledge; Liberal education, and where to find it; On the methods and results of ethnology; Criticisms on "The origin of species"; Emancipation—black and white; Lectures on the structure of the skull

Bibliography: pref. p16

Inge, William Ralph, 1860-

Political: War and population; War losses; Ambassador Page's letters; America in the great war; American character; Royalty; Capital punishment; Revolutions; "England"; Jews. Social: Birth rate; "Consumptionism"; Rights of animals; Utopias; Happy people; Spoon feeding; Medical superstitutions; Psychotherapy; Eugenics; Divorce; Betting; Schoolboy stories. Religious: Lambeth conference; Reunion in Great Britain; Religion in England after the war; Psychology and the mystics; Modernism; Nationalism and Christianity; Lives of Christ

"Though he always talks in character, it is impossible to foretell what he is going to say, but whatever it is it is always something highly entertaining. This book is often wise, always witty and the best possible fun." Spectator

Two other collections of his essays are:
Inge, W. R. More lay thoughts of a dean. Putnam 1932 316p $2.75
Inge, W. R. Rustic moralist. Putnam 1937 387p $3

Johnson, Samuel, 1709-1784
Selections from Dr Johnson's 'Rambler'; ed. with preface and notes, by W. H. White. Oxford 1907 xxxi,136p illus $1.25 824

33-27216

The purpose of this small volume is not to give examples of felicitous expression, but rather to show what Johnson thought as a moralist and critic of life. Condensed from Preface

Lamb, Charles, 1775-1834
Collected essays. Dutton 1929 2v illus $5 824

29-27459

Contents: v 1 Essays of Elia and the Last essays of Elia; v2 Miscellaneous essays and sketches

This edition is illustrated with drawings by C. E. Brock, contemporary portraits in photogravure, and maps of London and its vicinity on end papers

Charles Lamb's "Complete works and letters" may be obtained in the Modern library giants (Modern lib. 1935 xxviii,1124p $1.25)

* Essays of Elia. Dutton 327p (Everyman's lib.) 90c 824

A10-28

Includes "Essays of Elia" and "Last essays of Elia"

"Written for the most part on trivial subjects, with no purpose but to please, they bring us close to the lovable nature of the man, full, indeed, of sadness, but full, too, of a refined and kindly humour, ready to flash out in a pun, or to light up with a warm and gentle glow the cloud that overhangs him." H. S. Pancoast's Introduction to English literature

Lang, Andrew, 1844-1912
Letters to dead authors; with an etched portrait by S. J. Ferris and four additional letters. Scribner 253p front o.p. 1939 824

1 Authors 2 Literature 4-13981

First published 1886

These letters are in fact charming and good-humored critical essays addressed to Thackeray, Dickens, Ronsard, Herodotus, Pope, Lucian, Rabelais, Jane Austen, Isaak Walton, Chapelain, Sir John Mandeville, Dumas, Theocritus, Poe, Scott, Eusebius, Shelley, Molière, Burns, Byron, Omar Khayyam and Horace

Lucas, Edward Verrall, 1868-1938
All of a piece; new essays. Lippincott 1937 217p illus $2 824

38-5569

"Since Mr. Lucas has a genial, sparkling personality, most richly expressed in the personal essay, the reader finds this varied miscellany a treasury of wit, urbanity, and quiet grace." Cincinnati

Lynd, Robert, 1879-
Art of letters. Scribner 1921 240p o.p. 1939 824

1 Criticism 2 English literature—History and criticism 23-26547

"Mr Lynd has wide sympathy. He loves books and he enjoys talking about them; indeed, he talks about them with so much gusto that he makes the reader share his enjoyment." Brander Matthews in N.Y. Times

Macaulay, Rose
Personal pleasures. Macmillan 1936 395p $2.50 824

[36-618]

"Short, witty essays extolling the things that mean happiness to one intellectual. They range from book auctions, cows, eating and drinking, flying, and following the fashion, to showing off and telling travelers' tales." Bkl.

Macaulay, Thomas Babington Macaulay, 1st baron, 1800-1859
Critical and historical essays. Cambridge ed Houghton 1925 3v $6 824

26-26957

"His essays are as good as a library. They make an incomparable manual and vade mecum for a busy, uneducated man who has curiosity and enlightenment enough to wish to know a little about the great lives and great thoughts, the shining words and many-colored complexities of action that have marked the journey of man through the ages. Whatever his special subject, he contrives to pour into it with singular dexterity a stream of rich, graphic and telling illustrations from widely diversified sources." Fortnightly rev.

T. B. M. Macaulay's "Selections from Macaulay's prose" edited by Elizabeth Jackson in the College library series (Harper 1925 254p $1) is a good inexpensive collection with long excerpts from his best known works

McFee, William, 1881-
Harbours of memory. Doubleday 1921 xxx,320p $2.50 824

21-26979

Contents: Harbours of memory; Crusaders; City of enchantment; New method of reviewing books; On a balcony; Shining hour; Knights and Turcopoliers; Some good but insufficient reasons for silence; The idea; Lost adventures; Market; Race; Artist philosopher; Port Said miscellany

"It is a volume to pick up at intervals and enjoy in leisurely fashion. It is full of swift, revealing phrases, touches which illuminate character." N.Y. Times

William McFee's "More harbours of memory" (Doubleday 1934 339p $1) gives additional reminiscences of sea life and personal experiences

Machen, Arthur, 1863-

Dog and duck; a London calendar, et cætera. Cape, J. 1924 219p illus 3s 6d 824

1 Folklore—Great Britain 2 Great Britain—Social life and customs 3 Holidays
34-9488

Formerly carried also by Knopf

"Essays on a variety of subjects. The title essay deals with an old English game, 'dog and duck'; others treat of holidays, of valentines, of Christmas mumming, of the vice of collecting, of London fogs." Pittsburgh

"These essays . . . are nearly all in the wistful note which is characteristic of this author." Times (London) lit. sup.

Meredith, George, 1828-1909

Essay on comedy, and the uses of the comic spirit. Constable 105p 5s 824

1 Comedy [1-18781]

Formerly carried also by Scribner

"No writer of the nineteenth century stands more alone than he, and none is more difficult to deal with. . . But he has supplied the key to his own mind in his Essay on comedy (1877), which had been delivered as a lecture twenty years before it was published as a book. It shows him to be one of the profoundest of all students of comedy." H. Walker's Literature of the Victorian era

Meynell, Mrs Alice Christiana (Thompson) 1847-1922

Essays. Scribner 1914 267p front $3.50 824

14-30868

A selection made largely from her previous volumes: Rhythm of life, Colour of life, Spirit of peace, Children, Ceres' runaway. It also contains: Seventeenth century, Prue, Mrs Johnson and Madame Roland

"The essays chosen represent the author at her best, with her own charm and delicacy, which appeal to a limited but devoted group readers." Bkl.

Moore, George, 1852-1933

* Conversations in Ebury street. Liveright 1924 315p $2.50 824

24-30885

"A collection of papers on literary subjects and on art, many of them in the form of dialogs between the writer and the visitors to his house in Ebury street. The French writers, Balzac, Verlaine and others are favorite subjects, while Shakespeare, George Eliot, Hardy and a few English contemporaries receive briefer notice." Bkl.

"It is one of those rare books which, coming to the end of it, one feels it would be a pleasure to begin over again. . . This book shows us Mr. Moore in his old age, without any flagging of his powers of imagination, still conscientiously perfecting his prose style, for much of the prose in Conversations in Ebury Street is the most perfect he has written." Spectator

Murray, Gilbert, 1866-

Essays & addresses. Allen, G. 1921 221p 10s 6d 824

22-4103

Formerly carried also by Houghton under title: Tradition and progress

Contents: Religio grammatici: the religion of a "man of letters"; Aristophanes and the war party; Bacchae of Euripides; Stoic philosophy; Poesis and mimesis; Literature as revelation; Soul as it is and how to deal with it; National ideals: conscious and unconscious; Orbis terrestris; Satanism and the world order

"No one with more acute discrimination, or with livelier appreciation of life as well as of letters . . . has more successfully increased our wisdom and sympathy by showing the essential likeness between our sense of life and that of the ancient Greeks, between the Peloponnesian War and the World War. And finally there is hardly another in our time who has maintained with so much firmness and moderation, and with so little dogmatism, the worth and potency of the individual human soul in its lonely stand against apparent wrong and injustice." North American review

Nicolson, Harold George, 1886-

Small talk. Harcourt 1937 252p $2 824

(W) 37-27450

Contents: Christmas trees; Defence of shyness; English cant; Vision of America; Men's clothes; Early influences; American and English humour; Mr William Fletcher; Edwardian week-end; Our youngers and betters; Coincidences; On being efficient; What struck me most in America; On telling the truth; On being polite; Good taste and bad; Travelling companion; Man who knew everybody; How to read books; Food; Americans and ourselves; Meeting celebrities; In defence of the American man; On learning foreign languages; How to write books; Cure for overwork; Fête de la Victoire; Percy Flound

"Brilliant and often deeply searching, these essays of Harold Nicolson's are easily perceptive and as easily entertaining. Their wit is urbane and evocative. They are very good company. It is a guest to be welcomed—a book of such 'small talk' as this." N.Y. Times

Pater, Walter Horatio, 1839-1894

Greek studies; a series of essays. Macmillan 269p $3, Caravan lib. $1.40 824

Powys, Llewelyn, 1884-

Earth memories; with an introduction by Van Wyck Brooks. Norton 1938 284p $2.75 824

(W) 38-27447

"Forty-one essays, many of which have previously appeared in print elsewhere, are collected in this volume. Powys is drawn to his childhood garden, to the English countryside, to simple memories of nature, of common farmers and workers, and to a strong sense of God." Book rev. digest

Priestley, John Boynton, 1894-

Balconinny, and other essays. Harper 1931 235p $2.50 824

30-11162

"A collection of the author's pleasant short essays, originally contributed to the London Saturday Review. The Balconinny, the playful name for a miniature balcony on a house overlooking the sea, provides the material for the title essay. Other essays are on such important matters as getting rid of a motor car, the younger generation and its dancing, the abominations of lectures, a cold in the head, how it feels to take a minor part in an opera." Book rev. digest

Self-selected essays. Heinemann 1932 319p 7s 6d 824

33-1515

Formerly carried also by Harper

"There is something very companionable and smiling about these short essays, more than half of which have not appeared before in any volume. Drollery, imagination and the flick of ironic truth are present in excursions abroad, to public dinners and musical parties and in those more subtle excursions into temperament and character." N.Y. libraries

Quiller-Couch, Sir Arthur Thomas, 1863-

Soliloquies in England, and later soliloquies. Scribner 1922 264p $3.50 824

22-26764

"Soliloquies of a spirit ranging freely and tolerantly over a variety of themes, but philosophic and literary interests are the strongest. The author's critical faculty is shown at its best in the essay on Dickens." Book rev. digest

"As a philosophic commentator on human life as a whole Mr. Santayana need not be taken too seriously. As a writer of prose and a fashioner of aphorisms he can scarcely be taken seriously enough." Nation

Shaw, George Bernard, 1856-

Prefaces. Constable 1934 802p o.p. 1939 824

34-28641

Contains the essays which were published as introductions to his plays and are interesting for Shaw's views on current politics and social problems. There are 37 prefaces grouped as sociological, political, religious, and autobiographical and professional. Most of them were written long after the plays, to which they were attached, had been performed many times

23-17336

"Stories of travel and chance" published in various periodicals between 1907 and 1918

"Several of his papers deal with the war. He does not describe the fighting, but its effect on those who come back from it—how it disgusts them with life, how it works in them a change, not outwardly perceptible, which makes them strangers to their own kith and kin. All this is admirably thought and said." Times (London) lit. sup.

1 English fiction—History and criticism 2 Woman—History and condition of women 3 Women as authors 4 Women in England 5 Women in literature and art A30-1

"With sparkling raillery, originality and wit, with an understanding that is both broad and deep, Mrs. Woolf considers the past and future of woman as a creator of fiction, her need 'of a room of her own and five hundred [pounds] a year,' symbols of the power to think for oneself and of the power to contemplate. A book to rejoice the heart of every intelligent woman." N.Y. state lib.

Three guineas. Harcourt 1938 285p illus $2.50 824

1 Peace 2 War 3 Woman—History and condition of women 4 Woman—Social and moral questions 5 Women in public life (W) 38-27681

The framework of this discourse on woman's place in present day English political and social life, is the author's attempt to answer three requests for donations—from the treasurer of a peace society, from the treasurer of a woman's college, from the treasurer of a society for helping women obtain professional employment

"Written with the beautiful precision and in the mellifluous—almost anesthetizing—style which distinguish Mrs. Woolf's work. It is marked by her learning, so lightly and often so wittily worn; it contains many passages which those who hope for peace and freedom may well cherish and ponder." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

1 American letters 2 English letters 33-32890

"It is a fascinating book, and one wanders along through the various categories, dipping in here and there into those of greeting and congratulation, of condolence, of apology, of introduction, of thanks for hospitality, of description, of literary comment, of humor and wit . . . The compilers have made their selections with discrimination, for every letter has some quality or content that makes it worth while." N.Y. Times

827 ENGLISH SATIRE AND HUMOR

Butler, Samuel, 1835-1902
Note-books; selections arranged and ed. by H. F. Jones; with an introduction by Francis Hackett. Dutton 1917 437p front $2.50 827

1 Satire, English A17-1079

First published 1912 by Kennerly

"Butler, snapshotting at life, is perpetually delightful. He is a vigorously intellectual man whose mind is so logically ordered that what to him is most obvious is for his hearers an agreeable succession of surprises." Saturday rev.

Carroll, Lewis, pseud. 1832-1898

Hunting of the snark; an agony in eight fits; with nine illus. by Henry Holiday. Macmillan 53 numbered leaves illus $1 827

27-27813

One of the masterpieces of nonsense. It is a story in verse wherein the Bellman, the Butcher, the Beaver, the Barrister, the Banker, and the Baker seek the snark with thimbles and care, and pursue it with forks and hope

Lewis Carroll's "Logical nonsense" (Putnam 1934 568p $5) contains all his works except the mathematical ones

Gilbert, Sir William Schwenck, 1836-1911

Bab ballads, with which are included Songs of a Savoyard; with 350 illus. by the author. Macmillan 563p illus $3 827

[A13-2271]

Includes the original "Bab ballads," first published 1869, "More Bab ballads" and "Songs of a Savoyard." This collection with additional illustrations by the author was first published 1898

"Very clever, humorous, and satirical verses with accompanying grotesque sketches by the man who wrote the librettos of the 'Savoy' comic operas." Pratt alcove

Sir W. S. Gilbert's "Lost Bab ballads; collected and ed. by Townley Searle" (Putnam 1932 127p illus $2) includes the ballads omitted in earlier collections

Jerrold, Walter Copeland, 1865-1929, and Leonard Robert Maynard

(eds.) Century of parody and imitation. Oxford 1913 429p front $1.50 827

1 English poetry—Collections 2 Parodies

A15-312

"Includes poems parodying some 92 authors; excludes the work of living parodists. The table of contents gives an alphabetical list of authors parodied and an index of first lines." Mudge

"This collection of parodies and imitations in verse begins fittingly with the 'Rejected addresses,' here printed in their entirety. The editors own, in their preface, to a somewhat vague use of the word 'century,' and as a matter of fact they go back as far as Canning and George Ellis. . . The volume is well equipped with notes, and certainly provides a good variety of entertaining reading." Athenaeum

Lear, Edward, 1812-1888

* Lear omnibus; filled up by R. L. Mégroz. Nelson 1938 237p illus $1.50 827

20-22604

Also available in the Oxford standard edition (Oxford $1.15)

"Gulliver's travels," the coldly savage satire on the human race which children read with such delight, is published here in an edition more suitable for adults. The volume contains also his "Tale of a tub," a satire on the weaknesses of the three branches of the Church—the Roman, the English and the Calvinistic; the "Battle of the books," a good-natured contribution to the controversy as to the comparative merits of ancient and modern literature; and "A discourse concerning the mechanical operation of the spirit, etc." an essay on religious fanaticism

"Gulliver's travels and selected writings in prose & verse" are obtainable from Random house for $3.50. Other editions of "Gulliver's travels," including several attractively illustrated ones, are listed in the Children's catalog

Development of English humour. Macmillan 1930 pt 1 $2.50 827.09

1 English literature—History and criticism 2 English wit and humor—History and criticism (30-27958)

This first volume of a projected three volume work deals with English humor from the early times to the renascence

"A popular subject which Professor Cazamian redeems for scholarship by a treatment altogether profound. He does not offer us the usual perfunctory remarks followed by a list of side-splitting illustrations. Readers will be disappointed if they come to laugh, though they may remain to reflect." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Contains extensive bibliographical footnotes

Hazlitt, William, 1778-1830

"Essays on a group of comic characters of English literature from Touchstone to Sam Weller. Beside Shakespeare and Dickens the other writers represented are Fielding, Sterne, Jane Austen, and Peacock." Pratt

"He is more appreciative than critical; he takes no great pains to erect standards for his own judgments, but writes in easy, competent style in praise of great writers. So he makes excellent casual reading." Spectator

English humour. Longmans 1929 180p (English heritage ser.) $1.25 827.09

1 English wit and humor—History and criticism 29-20682

"Mr. Priestly has an unfailing instinct for what is genuinely humorous and not merely witty or spiteful . . . [His] essays on the real humorists of literature—Lamb, Peacock, Dickens, Shakespeare—showing through these writers what humour is, positively, (as against what it is not) are succinct and subtle, giving true balance to what is altogether a most stimulating book." Spectator

830 GERMAN LITERATURE

Kuno Francke and W. G. Howard have edited "German classics of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries" (Stechert 1913-14 20v $37.50) a monumental collection of later German literature in translation. Swiss and Austrian writers are also represented in this anthology. The price, of course, is prohibitive for the average library but the selection is comprehensive, and the illustrations and general make-up are very attractive

830.9 German literature—History and criticism

Five desirable studies of German literature, four of which are unfortunately out of print, 1939, are:

831 GERMAN POETRY

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von, 1749-1832

* Goethe's poems and aphorisms; ed. for the Goethe society of America, by Friedrich Bruns. Oxford 1932 211p (Oxford library of German texts) $1.50 831

A small but representative selection chosen and arranged to reveal the phases of development of Goethe both as a literary master and a thinker. Prepared for the Goethe society as a centenary memorial volume. The German and the English translation are given on opposite pages

Heine, Heinrich, 1797-1856

* Heinrich Heine: paradox and poet, by Louis Untermeyer; the poems. Harcourt 1937 xxxii,444p front $2.75 831

Mr Untermeyer's first volume of translations of Heine's poems, containing a selection of three hundred and twenty-five, appeared in 1917 and in a revised edition in 1923. This new volume contains more than five hundred poems, many of them here translated for the first time. Several poems of considerable length, such as "For 'La Mouche,'" "The God Apollo" and "Jehuda ben Halevy," are also included. Most of the earlier translations have been revised, some of them entirely rewritten

"Naturally, those versions, good as some of them are, cannot satisfy any one familiar with the originals. . . On the whole, however, in spite of occasional mistranslations and some errors of taste, it is a competent performance." Babette Deutsch in Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Other translations of Heine are obtainable as follows:

Nibelungenlied

Nibelungenlied; tr. into rhymed English verse in the metre of the original, by G. H. Needler. Holt 1904 xxxvi,349p $2 831

4-32378

"A German epic poem based on legends of great antiquity. Its present written form dates back to the early part of the thirteenth century. Siegfried is the hero and Brunhild the heroine of the romance. It is the chief monument of early German literature." Pratt alcove

"What distinguishes this translation of the great German epic from all previous attempts is, in the first place, the faithful and happy reproduction of its metrical form. Professor Needler has added a succinct but adequate introduction." Nation

Rilke, Rainer Maria, 1875-1926

Translations from the poetry of R. M. Rilke, by M. D. Herter Norton. Norton 1938 245p $2.50 831

(W) 39-1371

"Literal translations of some seventy poems from the works of a German mystic poet who died in 1926. The selection here given includes a few of the early lyrics and the entire Marien-Leben cycle, and many poems from the Buch der Bilder and Neue Gedichte. The originals and translations are printed on opposite pages." Book rev. digest

"Rilke's supreme poetic beauty can never, it is certain, be brought over into another language. But many times in this volume a suggestion of his purity and strength comes through." New Yorker

R. M. Rilke's "Duino elegies; the German text, with an English translation, introduction, and commentary by J. B. Leishman and Stephen Spender" (Norton 1939 130p front $2) is the last great work of this noted poet

Schiller, Johann Christoph Friedrich von, 1759-1805

Poems of Schiller, tr. by E. A. Bowring. Bell, G. 1902 377p o.p. 1939 831

4-18031

"Translation of the entire poetical writings of the noted German philosopher, dramatist and poet who shares with Goethe the highest literary distinction and popularity among the German people. Schiller's lofty idealism seems to express the spirit of Germany before 1871, while Goethe is thought to represent more fully the aspirations of the German nation of today." Pratt alcove

832 GERMAN DRAMA

Feuchtwanger, Lion, 1884-

Three plays; Prisoners of war; 1918; Dutch merchant; tr. by E. D. Ashton. Viking 1934 306p $2.75 832

34-38162

"Three plays by Lion Feuchtwanger written during or just after the war are now translated into English by Emma D. Ashton. 'Prisoners of War' has title of interest to recommend it, but '1918,' cast in an episodic form to suggest the extensive field a novel might cover and 'The Dutch Merchant,' are interesting as revelations, respectively of the first high hopes for the German Republic, and the author's subsequent retreat to individualism." Literary essays; a selection in English, arranged by J. E. Spingarn. Harcourt 1921 302p o.p. 1939 834
1 Art—Addresses, essays, lectures 2 Literature—Addresses, essays, lectures [22-1472]
Formerly carried also by Harcourt
"Professor Spingarn calls his selection the first attempt to include in a single volume the whole range of Goethe's critical and esthetic studies, and Viscount Haldane in his foreword to the book says: 'Goethe's gifts as a critic fell within a large whole of knowledge which was his in a degree for which we must look back over two thousand years to Aristotle if we wish to find a rival.' The translations are from various sources and some of the essays included have never before appeared in English. The essays are grouped under the headings: The theory of art; The theory of literature; On Shakespeare; On other writers; Extracts from the conversations with Eckermann. There is a chronology of Goethe's critical studies and an index." Book rev. digest

Icelandic sagas. Macmillan 1913 120p (Cambridge manuals of science and literature) $1 839.6
1 Sagas [13-6314]
"Treats of the history of the sagas both in their original form of oral account and the later written narrative, describes the types of sagas, historical, mythical and romantic, and gives brief outlines of the most important. Includes an annotated list of English translations and a map of the saga district." Cleveland

Edda Sæmundar
Poetic Edda; tr. from the Icelandic with an introduction and notes by H. A. Bellows. Am.-Scandinavian foundation 1923 2v in 1 front (Scandinavian classics) $3 839.6
23-16414

"The book is the bible of Northern mythology, morality, and literature. Its leading mythological poem, 'Voluspo,' a sort of Genesis and Apocalypse combined is an imaginative conception of the creation and ultimate destruction of the world. The 'Hovamol' a collection of shrewd saws, gives a picture of the ethical conceptions of the Vikings. The Lady of Thrym is a ballad. In the poems of Sigurd and Brynhild we get the Norse version of the Lay of the Nibelungs." Springfield Republican

"The book is a variorum edition as valuable to the scholar as to the general reader." P. A. Hutchison in N.Y. Times

Edda Snorra Sturlusonar
Prose Edda, by Snorri Sturluson; tr. from the Icelandic, with an introduction by A. G. Brodeur. Am.-Scandinavian foundation 1916 xxii,266p (Scandinavian classics) $2 839.6
1 Mythology, Norse 2 Scalds and scaldic poetry 16-22078

" 'The prose Edda' is a Scandinavian classic (of the early thirteenth century), and one of the greatest. It has found a very skilful and sympathetic translator in Dr Brodeur. His version contains all of the 'Gylfaginning' and all of the Skaldskaparmal (the poesy of the skalds). It is the first translation in English which contains all of the second part. Dasent renders only the narrative passages of this portion." Nation

Koht, Halvdan, 1873-
Old Norse sagas. Am.-Scandinavian foundation 1931 191p $2 839.6
1 Sagas 31-29767

Also available from Norton at $2.50

This volume contains a collection of lectures originally delivered at the Lowell Institute, Boston, in 1930 and thoroughly revised for publication. Contents: Art of the sagas; Origin of the saga; Earliest written sagas; Icelandic family sagas; Master of the saga: Snorri Sturluson; Historical value of the sagas; Fiction sagas; End of the saga. Bibliography

"One must be thankful to Professor Koht for his brief but comprehensive survey of the saga and its history, and for his analysis of the forces that give it its enduring worth. Though it be true that the actual reading of sagas is the best study of the saga, Professor Koht's work will be found interesting by way of introduction and valuable for the background which it provides." N.Y. Times

Phillpotts, Bertha Surtees, d. 1932
Edda and saga. Holt 1931 255p (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) $1.25 839.6
1 Eddas 2 Sagas 32-7940

Cover "almost the whole range of early Northern literature as it has come down to us. 'Edda' covers not only the collection of poems known as the Elder or Poetic Edda, but also Snorri's Younger or Prose Edda, that very remarkable manual for poets, which re-arranges and interprets, long after heathen days, much of the ancient lore contained in the Poetic Edda and in some Eddic poems which are now lost. 'Saga' covers the prose stories of all kinds, from history to romance, which are the special glory of Iceland." Chapter I

Locock, Charles Dealtry, 1862-
(tr.) Selection from modern Swedish poetry, tr. in the original metres. Macmillan 1929 161p o.p. 1939 839.71
1 Swedish poetry 30-9132

Cover title: Modern Swedish poetry

A translated selection from the works of the following modern Swedish poets: Verner von Heidenstam, awarded the Nobel prize in 1916; Oscar Levertin; E. A. Karlfeldt; Anders Osterling; Bo Bergman; Harriet Löwenhjelm; Dan Andersson; and others

"There are here a number of good poems well translated . . . Mr Locock has, on the whole, triumphed over his difficulties in a remarkable fashion. Several of his versions, which none the less appear to be quite faithful, do not read like versions at all." New statesman

Stork, Charles Wharton, 1881-
(comp. and tr.) Anthology of Swedish lyrics from 1750 to 1925; tr. in the original meters. Am.-Scandinavian foundation 1930 xxxix,294p (Scandinavian classics) $2.50 839.71
1 Swedish poetry 30-13381

First edition covered the period 1750-1915. In this edition, 13 poems, the work of 10 poets, have been added to bring the collection to 1925, and to the introductory essay has been added a page on poetry during the decade of 1915-2

Stork, Charles W.—Continued

This anthology emphasizes later poets, and nine in particular—Bellman, Tegnér, Runeberg, Rydberg, Snoilsky, Fröding, Levertin, Heidenstam and Karlfeldt. An introductory sketch outlines the history of Swedish lyric poetry. There are brief biographical notes about the poets who are represented

Tegnér, Esaias, 1782-1846

Poems . . . tr. by H. W. Longfellow and W. L. Blackley; with an introduction by P. R. Lieder. Am-Scandinavian foundation 1914 xxvii,207p (Scandinavian classics) $2 839.71

14-19150

Metrical translations of two long poems by one of Sweden's greatest poets. "Children of the Lord's supper" is given here in the Longfellow translation, which is also included in that poet's "Complete poetical works" (see class 811). It is a beautiful idyl of life in a Swedish village

"Frithiof's saga," translated by Blackley, tells the ancient love story of the humbly born Frithiof for the noble Ingeborg. It is in 24 cantos, each in a different meter. Tho it is a narrative poem, the tone is distinctly lyrical, and remarkable for its emotional intensity and vividness

"An eccentric genius of immense power . . . a woman-hater, violently hostile to the feminist movement. . . Strindberg's work is very uneven, at its lowest coarse and crude, at its best rising to the highest poetic beauty. One virtue prevails through it all, its unflinching honesty, the will to see things as they are and to record them without fear." J. Macy's Story of the world's literature

Jaegermester Plov is well-traveled, widely read, and conversant with the wisdom of the ancient world as well as the conquests of the modern world. The sketches, originally contributions to a Danish newspaper, the 'Berlinske Tidende,' and written in a poetic prose that loses nothing through translation, are 'leaves of grass' which spring 'from the spirit that comes from the contact with real things.'" Contents: v 1: Gauntlet; Beyond our power; New system v 2: Love and geography; Beyond human might; Laboremus

"The gauntlet," his best known play, has for its theme the double standard. "Beyond our power" is concerned with psycho-pathological phenomena. "New system" is a social satire. "Love and geography" is a play of domestic relations, "Beyond human might" of capital and labor, and "Laboremus" is a psychological study of individualism

Plays by an 18th century Danish dramatist

Contents: Jeppe of the hill; Political tinker; Erasmus Montanus

"The first is another version of the ancient fable which furnished Shakespeare with a motive for his 'Taming of the shrew,' but Jeppe, the drunken peasant, becomes a protagonist, instead of a mere spectator like Sly. . . 'The political tinker' satirizes the working folk who are for ever criticising the conduct of their political superiors. Holberg was a fine old, crusted Tory. . . 'Erasmus Montanus' is amusing, and more nearly akin to our notions of comedy than either of the others but it is hopelessly out of date. . . But the piece is worth reading for the sake of its character studies." Nation

Translation of the French work entitled "Panorama de la littérature contemporaine"

Three periods in modern French literature are discussed: the symbolist and naturalist period, (1880-1900); the eclectic period, (1900-1914); and the post-war period since 1914, including dadaism, super-realism, and the younger literary generation in France

"Will be useful to the American student if he reads it as a collection of essays. The historical chapters about schools and general movements must not be taken too seriously: but the biographies of Rimbaud, Mallarmé, Barrès, Proust, Valéry, and Gide are worth reading." René Lalou in Nation

1 French literature—History and criticism 18-16504

First published in 1892. Many slight revisions have been made in each successive edition, but the only completely remodelled work was the fifth edition (1897). The present revision is likely to be the last. Adapted from Preface

Brilliant and scholarly, this is a standard work on the subject, by one of England's greatest critics and one of the best known authorities on French literature. The book covers the period from the earliest texts to the close of the 19th century with both brevity and completeness is it so successful in style. A reading knowledge of French is made necessary by frequent quotations which are not interpolated but so introduced as to be inseparable from the text. The very full bibliography [62p], given by chapters, is made up largely of French works." Bkl.

36-8362

Translations of seventy-two of Baudelaire's poems, done by two American poets. The original and the translation are given on opposite pages

"A distinguished and valuable addition to the world's small stock of genuine, translated, poetry. In considerable measure, and this is high praise, their seventy-two poems make the reader, who knows no word of French, free of the strange, perverse, beautiful, horrible, fascinating, repulsive, experienced and imagined, world of Charles Baudelaire." 20-6312

"Here, line for line and almost word for word, the old French epic poem has been made into English. So far as the English language will allow, the original verse form has been kept with its endings of assonance and its short, sharp iambic stresses. . . The book is also worthy of note for its introduction by Mr G. K. Chesterton, its preface by Mr Saintsbury, and for the three fine, sombre-spirited poems dedicated by Mr Moncrieff to warrior friends of his own." Dial

Chanson de Roland. "Song of Roland; tr. into English verse by Leonard Bacon" (Yale univ. press 1914 164p o.p. 1939) is imbued with the spirit of the time, but is perhaps not so fine a translation as that entered above

Poems; tr. by Roger Fry; with commentaries by Charles Mauron. Oxford 1937 307p $3 841

"If a reader knows Mallarmé already or has enough French to read him, Roger Fry's translations . . . with the original on the opopsite page, will be a real help, for they are the work of a man who spent years studying his subject." M. M. Colum in Forum

"Mallarmé's poetry . . . is beyond the comprehension of most intelligent and sensitive Frenchmen. Even the wise Larousse, according to M. Mauron, defines it as 'unintelligible.' Whether the present volume will lighten its obscurity and clarify its meaning depends more than anything on the individual reader, in particular on how much he is prepared to cooperate with translator and commentator." Roman de la Rose

Romance of the Rose, by W. Lorris & J. Clopinel; Englished by F. S. Ellis. Dutton 1900 3v (Temple classics) ea 80c 841

[1-25146]

A modern translation of the famous allegorical poem of 13th century France. The first part, by Lorris, is a fanciful dream tale of the trials and triumphs of love. The latter part, continued by Meung, is an elaborate satirical treatise on the science and politics of the day. The poem is valuable as a vivid and colorful picture of medieval everyday life. Each volume in this edition is prefaced by a summary of the chapters in that volume

[15-25731]

In these critical and personal studies, originally delivered as lectures, Miss Lowell traces the history and development of each individual genius, in the attempt to give the reader the effect of having known the man and read his books as they were published. This she does by eschewing pedantry and giving an enthusiastic free play to her sympathies and appreciations. She quotes freely from their poems in the original, and gives prose and verse translations in an appendix. Condensed from Boston Transcript

[A13-375]

"Originated from the comic-opera plots of its own time and finds today its natural complement in the music of Rossini. . . It is simply a question of conspiracies and disguises, of a jealous guardian, a pretty ward, a romantic lover and a helpful barber. . . Beaumarchais' style is original, diversified and witty in the extreme. Above all, he created a new and immortal character in Figaro, who has been called the 'légataire universel of all the valets of comedy.'" Nitze and Dargan's History of French literature

Deval, Jacques, 1894-

Tovarich; adapted by R. E. Sherwood. Random house 1937 159p $2 842

(W) 37-1737

"Living in poverty in Paris, a Russian general and a grand duchess are delighted to get a position as servants in a banker's home. The general is the custodian of a fortune put in his hands by the czar and in spite of starvation, and pressure from the Bolsheviks, he holds it in trust for Russia until he believes that the czar would have approved its use to save a Russian province. Idealistic, romantic comedy." Bkl.

France, Anatole, 1844-1924

Man who married a dumb wife; a comedy in two acts; tr. for Granville Barker by C. H. Page. Dodd 1915 93p illus $1.50 842

[15-8253]

"A clever satire based on an incident in Rabelais, worked out in the broad medieval manner, but with many ultra-modern applications—a wife cured of her dumbness at her husband's request, proves so talkative that he is driven to submit to an operation to secure his own deafness." Cleveland

Guitry, Sacha, 1885-

Deburau; a comedy; in an English version by Harley Granville Barker. Putnam 1921 226p o.p. 1939 842

1 Deburau, Jean Gaspard, 1796-1846—Drama 21-2539

"Romantic French tragi-comedy of elevated and serious quality. Delightfully fables the life of the famous French pantomimist of the early 19th century, his love affair with Camille, his successes and failures, and his final retirement in favor of his son." Viewpoints in modern drama

Hugo, Victor Marie, comte, 1802-1885

Dramatic works. Little 3v o.p. 1939 842

Contents: v 1: Hernani; Marion de Lorme; King's amusement; Lucrezia Borgia; Twins. v2: Angelo, tyrant of Padua; Ruy Blas; Burgraves; Torquemada; Amy Robsart. v3; Cromwell; Mary Tudor; Esmeralda

"Hugo's plays are melodramas without much truth to character or plausibility of plot. But the story goes and the lines are charged with superb rhetoric which sometimes mounts to a very high poetic plane." J. Macy's Story of the world's literature

Ruy Blas; modernized in English verse by Brian Hooker. Holt 1931 164p $2 842

31-3796

Maeterlinck, Maurice, 1862-

* Blue bird; a fairy play in six acts; tr. by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. Dodd 1911 287p $2.50 842

11-1744

"Maeterlinck's best-known production. Bread, sugar, water, milk, and fire come to life in its allegorical pages. And two children seek the bluebird symbol of happiness, through the past and future, the land of night and the unborn." A. D. Dickinson

Pélléas and Mélisande, Alladine and Palomides, Home; tr. by Richard Hovey. Dodd 1924 205p $2.50 842

[32-10434]

"Pélléas and Mélisande" is a beautiful poetical tragedy on a theme similar to Paolo and Francesca. It forms the libretto of Debussy's opera. "Alladine and Palomides" is a highly romantic play based on the Arthurian legends but imbued with characteristic fatalism and unearthly atmosphere. "Home" ("L'intérieur") is Maeterlinck's best example of the static type of play which he has done also in "The intruder." The action takes place entirely in the emotions of the audience as they see an old man hesitate to dispel with tragic news the happiness inside his lighted home

Sister Beatrice, and Ardiane & Barbe Bleue, two plays tr. by Bernard Miall. Allen, G. 1901 5s 842

[2-11128]

"Sister Beatrice," based on John Davidson's "Ballad of a nun," is a modern miracle play illustrating the mercy of the Virgin. In "Ardiane & Barbe Bleue," the fairy tale of Blue Beard is retold in modern version. It has been set to music by Dukas

Some additional plays of Maurice Maeterlinck which may be added are:

Maeterlinck, Maurice. Betrothal; a sequel to the Blue bird, a fairy play in five acts and eleven scenes; tr. by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. Dodd 1918 222p $2.50

Maeterlinck, M. Intruder, and other plays; tr. by Richard Hovey. Dodd 1918 209p o.p. 1939

Maeterlinck, Maurice. Mary Magdalene; a play in three acts; tr. by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. Methuen 1910 2s

Maeterlinck, Maurice. Miracle of Saint Anthony; tr. by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos. Methuen 1918 3s 6d

Maeterlinck, Maurice. Monna Vanna; a play in three acts; tr. by Sutro. Allen, G. 152p 3s 6d

Molière, Jean Baptiste Poquelin, 1622-1673

Moliere; tr. by K. P. Wormeley. Little 6v o.p. 1939 842

[12-11645]

"This is usually regarded as the most illustrious name in all French literature. There can be no doubt that Molière is France's greatest dramatist even though he produced no tragedies. His greatest plays are 'Tartuffe' (his masterpiece, in which he scored hypocrisy), 'The Doctor in Spite of Himself' (Médecin Malgré Lui), 'The Miser' (L'Avare), 'The Bourgeois Gentleman,' and 'The Hypochondriac' (Le Malade Imaginaire)." A. D. Dickinson

Two collections which are available are:

Molière, J. B. P. Plays; introduction by Waldo Frank. Modern lib. 1924 364p 95c
Six of the best known plays in translation: High-brow ladies; School for wives; Tartuffe; Misanthrope; Physician in spite of himself; Miser

Molière, J. B. P. Three Molière plays: Tartuffe, Scapin the trickster, The school for wives, freely adapted ... for the English stage, by F. Anstey [pseud]. Oxford 1933 274p illus $3

Pathelin

Farce of the worthy Master Pierre Patelin; tr. from the medieval French by Moritz Jagendorf. Appleton-Century 1925 44p (Appleton modern plays) 50c 842

25-6875

"A quaint medieval farce in the version used by the Washington Square Players. It was published in Poet Lore under the translator's pseudonym, Maurice Relonde." Chicago

"This celebrated farce stands out amongst all others, not only because of the excellence of its composition and execution, the firm drawing of character, the drollery of situations and style, but because it is much longer and contains a real action, or rather an extremely skilful fusion of two actions in one." G. Paris's Mediaeval French literature

Racine, Jean Baptiste, 1639-1699

Best plays; tr. into English rhyming verse with introductions and notes by Lacy Lockert. Princeton univ. press 1936 412p $3 842

37-237

Contents: Andromaque; Britannicus; Phèdre; Athalie

Six plays by Corneille and Racine. See entry under Corneille, Pierre

Rostand, Edmond, 1868-1918

L'aiglon; a play in six acts; tr. by L. N. Parker. Harper 1911 262p illus $2.50 842

13-4514

A moving tragedy of the Eaglet, Napoleon's son, the little King of Rome, who was held captive among his enemies

Another version is "L'Aiglon; tr. by Basil Davenport" (Yale univ. press 1927 334p $3). It is a beautiful translation, faithful to the original

Chantecler, play in four acts; tr. by Gertrude Hall. Duffield 1910 289p o.p. 1939 842

10-19179

"Prose translation of the brilliant French poetic drama, which presents through symbolical barnyard scenes a satire on modern life. Faithful to original in spirit, but losing in lyrical intensity and the rendering of colloquial witticisms." N.Y. state lib.

* Cyrano de Bergerac; an heroic comedy in five acts, a new version in English verse by Brian Hooker, prepared for Walter Hampden, with a prefatory gesture by Clayton Hamilton. Holt 1923 256p front trade ed $2, school text 84c 842

1 Cyrano de Bergerac, Savinien, 1619-1655—Drama 23-17560

A romantic comedy of sword-play and word-play. The hero is the gallant Gascon swash-buckler and poet, possessed of an incredibly long nose and a keen wit. The play has a wide appeal

Hooker's translation is published also by Modern library at 95c

Far princess (La princesse Lointaine); a drama in four acts, tr. from the French by John Heard, jr. Humphries 1925 169p front $1.50 842

[25-8502]

"A play written for Sarah Bernhardt and presented in Paris in 1895, two years earlier than the far more famous 'Cyrano de Bergerac.' Among all the works of Rostand, this play is considered second only to 'Cyrano' by many critics." Providence

"Nothing in modern times, it is probable, has so completely mirrored the mood and the age of the troubadours as this beautiful play." Boston Transcript

Edmond Rostand's "Plays; tr. by H. D. Norman" (Macmillan 1921 2v $10.50) contains adequate translations of all his dramas except the posthumous "Don Juan." Contents: v 1: Romantics; Princess Far away; Woman of Samaria; Cyrano of Bergerac. v2: Eaglet; Chanticleer

French novelists, manners & ideas, from the renaissance to the revolution. Appleton-Century 1929 239p $3 843

1 French fiction—History and criticism [29-10516]

"Discusses the evolution of the modern French novel and of the two tendencies which have most affected its course—romanticism and realism. A valuable feature of this outline is the inclusion of some of the minor novelists of the period, with descriptions of their work." Book rev. digest

"The whole book is a survey written with unusual spirit, with critical perceptions of varying styles, with appreciation of the historical method, and in readable prose. It is a valuable addition to literary history." N.Y. Times

F. C. Green's "French novelists from the revolution to Proust" (Dent 1931 354p 7s 6d) is a sequel to the earlier title. Of special value to the student for its sketches of lesser novelists

"To provide the general reader with a reliable and attractive version of Montaigne's essays has been this translator's effort, and he has done it in a readable and accurate manner. The author of the introduction has commented in an interesting, and sometimes acute, manner on certain points in regard to Montaigne and his works." Providence

"Mr Trechmann's translation is extremely good in a conscientious way . . . though it does not entirely reproduce the suppleness and tang in Montaigne's style, it does give his meaning clearly and accurately." Leonard Woolf in Nation and Athenaeum

Other available editions are:

Gargantua and Pantagruel; tr. from the French into English by Sir Thomas Urquhart and Peter Le Motteux. . . Oxford 1934 3v illus map (World's classics) ea 80c 847

34-28426

"Urquhart's translation of books I and II was published in 1653, and of book III in 1693. Motteux' translation of books IV and V was first published in 1694"

"An extraordinarily vivid and varied picture of life in France at the moment when the forces of Medievalism and Renaissance came, in that country, into active conflict. At the same time it displays the man himself in his dominating characteristics, in his revolt from monastic discipline, his enthusiastic humanism, his beneficent activity as a physician, and his interest in current affairs." Introduction

The Everyman's library edition of the same translation is "Heroic deeds of Gargantua & Pantagruel" (Dutton 1929 2v ea 90c). If any library prefers an abridged edition, there is "Gargantua and Pantagruel" condensed by Donald Douglas in the Modern lib. at 95c (1928 543p)

848 FRENCH MISCELLANY

Daudet, Alphonse, 1840-1897

Suffering, 1887-1895; tr. by Milton Garver; with commentary and notes by André Ebner. Yale univ. press 1934 89p $2 848

1 Pain 34-6268

"This document, which for thirty years had remained unpublished in the hands of Daudet's widow, is now given to the public in translation, with commentary and notes by Daudet's secretary and an appreciation by Marcel Proust. The book, written while the author was suffering from an incurable malady, consists of brief notes describing his sensations, and eloquent of the spiritual victory that he gained over physical defeat." Book rev. digest

"There is nothing morbid in this book. Both for those who suffer and for those who are well, it is a shout of triumph. It reminds our day of soporifics and anodynes that there is a positive beneficence in pain." Yale review

849 PROVENCAL LITERATURE

1 Italian literature—History and criticism 4-14030

First published in 1898 in the series, Short histories of the literatures of the world

Generally conceded to be the best history of Italian literature in English. It covers in eminently readable style the period from the beginnings of Italian literature in Sicilian and Tuscan writings, to Carducci and D'Annunzio

Sanctis, Francesco de, 1818-1883

History of Italian literature; tr. by Joan Redfern. Harcourt 1931 2v o.p. 1939 850.9

1 Italian literature—History and criticism 31-24165

First English translation of a classic Italian work first published in 1870-71. "An intimate history of the Italian people. It begins with the thirteenth and the fourteenth centuries when Italy was profoundly religious, and was alive with the political fervour that arose from the struggles of the free communes . . . and it ends with the revival of spiritual life in Italy accompanied by the rise of the new science and philosophy and the progress of civil reform, which resulted in the renewal of Italian nationality that reached its culminating point in the nineteenth century." Introduction

"Of this beautifully translated and impeccably edited version . . . there is only one thing to say: that it is a precious gift to American literature and American culture . . . De Sanctis is not only the greatest of Italian critics. He is one of the great critics of the world." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

851 ITALIAN POETRY

Ariosto, Lodovico, 1474-1533
Orlando furioso; tr. into English verse, from the Italian, with notes by W. S. Rose. new ed Bell, G. 2v illus (Bohn's illustrated lib.) o.p. 1939 851
15-10449

"The purest and most perfect example of renaissance poetry." J. A. Symonds
"A very beautiful combination of a tale of chivalry and something like a classic mode of narrative. . . We have to take its merits somewhat on trust, for there is no translation of it that has permanently endeared it to English readers. . . Orlando is of course the Roland of French story, the chief peer of Charlemagne." J. Macy's Story of the world's literature

Petrarch, Francesco, 1304-1374
Sonnets; tr. by Joseph Auslander. Longmans 1931 336p front $2.50 851
31-28480

"Mr. Auslander omits the verses in other forms which Petrarch strewed through his sonnets. His work has a steadiness of flow, as well as a competence of craftsmanship, which makes it greatly to be preferred to that composite volume, the chief resource of English readers of Petrarch, in which the poet Thomas Campbell assembled translations from many pens. The two dedicatory and prefatory sonnets of Mr. Auslander's own leave no doubt as to his mastery of this form." Christian century

Two other collections are:

Petrarch. Some love songs; tr. and annotated and with a biographical introduction by W. D. Foulke. Oxford 1915 244p o.p. 1939 Arranged by subject and with an index

Petrarch. Sonnets, Triumphs, and other poems; tr. into English verse by various hands, with a life of the poet by Thomas Campbell. Bell, G. 1912 (Bohn's lib.) o.p. 1939 A very desirable edition

Tasso, Torquato, 1544-1595
Jerusalem delivered; tr. into English Spenserian verse by J. H. Wiffen. Bell, G. 1913 (Bohn's lib.) o.p. 1939 851
[17-21272]

The last of the four great Italian poets. The story of his heroic poem is the liberation of Jerusalem under Godfrey of Bouillon in the crusade of the 11th century. It is religious in tone, marked by beautiful romantic episodes, vivid characterizations, and fine poetic quality. Wiffen's translation is standard

Symonds, John Addington, 1840-1893

Introduction to the study of Dante. 4th ed Macmillan 1899 288p o.p. 1939 851.15

1 Dante Alighieri, 1265-1321 W10-54

First edition, 1872. The 3d edition, published in 1893, was corrected, and its preface was the last thing written by Symonds. This 4th edition differs from the 3d only by the addition of a short preface by H. F. Brown. In his delightful style the author summarizes the historical background, the main events of Dante's life, the subject and scheme of the "Divine comedy," the qualities of Dante's genius, and the poetry of chivalrous love

1 Dante Alighieri, 1265-1321 14-12662

"Based upon his larger work, 1898, but not a mere abridgment, as it includes some names and material not included in the earlier work, omits names in one poem now known not to have been written by Dante and brings other matter in line with more recent information. Conciseness is attained by judicious condensation rather than by omission of anything vital." Mudge

852 ITALIAN DRAMA

Annunzio, Gabriele d', 1863-1938

Francesca da Rimini; tr. by Arthur Symons. Stokes 1902 223p illus $1.25 852

2-25299

An impressive re-telling of the old story of Paola and Francesca. Here Francesca considers herself tricked into marriage, and glories in her intrigue with her husband's younger brother, Paola

Gabriele d'Annunzio's "Gioconda; tr. by Arthur Symonds" (Heinemann 1902 144p o.p. 1939) is a play which presents the problem of the relationship of artist to society

Giacosa, Giuseppe, 1847-1906

Stronger; Like falling leaves; Sacred ground; three plays, tr. from the Italian with an introduction by Edith and Allan Updegraff. Little 1913 326p illus (Modern drama ser.) o.p. 1939 852

[13-25735]

"Stronger" is a drama of idealism in conflict with materialism. "Like falling leaves" portrays the effects of a reversal of family fortunes. "Sacred ground" is a plea for feminism

"It was Giacosa who, more than any other, infused a true Italian element into his best plays; he did much to free the stage of his country from French adaptations and pseudo-French 'triangle' plays." B. H. Clark's Study of the modern drama

Goldoni, Carlo, 1707-1793

Coffee-house; a comedy in three acts; tr. by H. B. Fuller. French 1925 94p (World's best plays by celebrated European authors) 50c 852

26-2285

This dramatist of the 18th century substituted comedy drawn from life for the old commedia dell'arte, and thus became the father of modern Italian comedy. The survival of his plays is due to his comic situations, amusing dialog, and convincing if not profound characterization

Carlo Goldoni's "Curious mishap; a comedy in three acts; ed. by R. D. T. Hollister" (Wahr 1924 105p illus $1) is another comedy published in the series called Play production plays

Pirandello, Luigi, 1867-1936

1 One-act plays 28-8379

Indexed in Firkins

Contents: Imbecile; By judgment of court; Our lord of the ship; Doctor's duty; Chee-Chee; Man with the flower in his mouth; At the gate; Vise; House with the column; Sicilian limes; Jar

"With a few exceptions, tragedy and mystical psychology are the keynotes of these eleven plays. 'Chee-Chee' and 'The jar' are humorous and might be used by amateurs." Cleveland

* Three plays. . . Dutton 1922 233p $2.50 852

22-23819

Indexed in Firkins

Contents: Six characters in search of the author; "Henry IV"; Right you are! (If you think so)

"Pirandello is an evasive and subtle writer for translation. Both Edward Storer in 'Six characters' and in 'Henry IV,' and Arthur Livingston in 'Right you are!' have brought the understanding which comes from real appreciation to their translations of Pirandello." N.Y. Times

Two other plays available in translations by Samuel Putnam are:

Pirandello, Luigi. As you desire me (Come tu mi vuoi) a play in three acts. Dutton 1931 221p $2.50

860.9 Spanish literature -History and criticism

George Ticknor's "History of Spanish literature" (6th ed rev and enl Houghton 1891 3v o.p. 1939) is still the classic work on the subject, the result of a lifetime study. Important for all large libraries

Bell, Aubrey Fitz Gerald, 1882-
Contemporary Spanish literature. rev ed Knopf 1933 315p $2.25 860.9
1 Spanish literature—History and criticism 33-27020
First edition 1925. A few corrections have been made and the list of books by Spanish authors has been brought up to date. Covers the last quarter of the nineteenth century and the first quarter of the twentieth. The literature of Spanish South America and the regional literatures of Spain have been omitted
The author "has written with learning and infectious enthusiasm a book which has more than the advantage of being the first in the field." Ernest Boyd in Bookman

"One of the simplest and yet most authoritative introductions to Spanish and Spanish-American literature that could be desired. The presentation is that of a distinguished scholar who has mastered the complex field and summarizes the knowledge at hand with the precision of authority, adding where appropriate, his own results and contributions. The part devoted to the novel presents a view of such figures as Galdós and Blasco Ibáñez that may cause some to modify, or at least to reconsider, their former unqualified admiration." "The plan of this outline has been 'to relate Spanish literature to the geographic, ethnic, social, and historic facts which have determined it,' and to stress the evolution and development of the great schools of writing as they have appeared. The book thus sketches the history of Spanish literature from its beginnings to modern writers of note, furnishing biographical data concerning the writers, and a sketch of their important works, and wherever possible grouping authors in the schools to which they belong." Book rev. digest

"The great merit of his new history of Spanish literature is that it gives due recognition to the work of living Spanish scholars." Times (London) lit. sup.

861 SPANISH POETRY

Cid Campeador

Lay of the Cid; tr. into English verse by R. S. Rose and Leonard Bacon. Univ. of Calif. press. 1919 130p o.p. 1939 861

A19-388

This ancient epic celebrates the patriotism and achievements of the hero of the chivalrous age of Spain, Rodrigo Diaz, who vanquished five Moorish kings and received from them the title of El Seid, or My Lord. By the Spaniards he was called El Cid Campeador, or the Lord Champion

Another translation, less readable, but valuable, is "Poem of the Cid" (Hispanic soc. 1921 3v o.p. 1939) in the series, Hispanic notes & monographs. Contents: v 1 Text, reprinted from the unique manuscript at Madrid; v2 Translation, by A. M. Huntington; v3 Notes, by A. M. Huntington

Garcia Lorca, Federico, 1899-1936

Poems; with English tr. by Stephen Spender and J. L. Gili; selection and introduction by R. M. Nadal. Oxford 1939 xxviii,143p front $2 861

"Simplicity and devotion to the tradition and lore of his people distinguish the verse of the famous contemporary Spanish poet who was killed in 1936. The original text is accompanied by an English translation by Stephen Spender and J. L. Gili." Cincinnati

Formerly carried by Appleton-Century Anthology of over 200 poems, the work of 89 poets representing 19 Spanish-American countries. Spanish originals and English translations appear on opposite pages, and the introduction by Isaac Goldberg is in both languages as well. Among the famous poets included are Rubén Darío of Nicaragua, José Santos Chocano of Peru. Amado Nervo of Mexico and Gabriela Mistral of Chile

"There is but one regret about Miss Blackwell's volume: the failure to include longer pieces leads to the misleading impression that Spanish-American poets are incapable of sustained work, an impression contrary to fact." Boston Transcript

The brothers Quintero are leading playwrights in Spain, with a hundred and fifty plays to their credit during many years of collaboration. Contents: Women have their way; Hundred years old; Fortunato; Lady from Alfaqueque

" 'The women have their way' tells how a young man, coming from Madrid to an Andalusian town, is edged into a betrothal by the gossip of the women. It is 'the tragedy of El Gran Galeoto turned to laughter.' In 'A hundred years old' Papa Juan celebrates his hundredth birthday. 'Fortunato' portrays the plight of a deserving man who cannot earn a living for himself and his children. 'The lady from Alfaqueque' is a satire on provincial clannishness." Cleveland

This prolific dramatist of the 17th century is typical of his age, and much given to borrowing from other writers. In spite of his limitations as a creator of real characters, he is one of Spain's greatest dramatists, because of the perfection, grace, and lyric splendor of his work.

All but the last two plays in this volume are to be found also in the Everyman's library edition of "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam (first & second editions) & six plays of Calderon; tr. by Edward Fitzgerald" (Dutton 1928 329p 90c)

[14-14369]

"The 'great Galeoto' of this play, translated from the Spanish, is Everybody. He is the They of 'They say.' He acts 'without passion, without guile, often for mere distraction's sake.' And so it is that he acts in this drama in which a happy home and three happy lives are wrecked thru the influence of curious eyes and thoughtless, chattering tongues." Book rev. digest

1 Cervantes Saavedra, Miguel de, 1547-1616. Don Quixote A35-1815

"After a brief introduction there is a discussion of Cervantes and chivalry books . . . Two more preliminary chapters have to do with the character of Dorothea as an example of cleverness and of Cardenio as the type of cowardice. These chapters will make their appeal rather to the close student of the book than to the so-called general reader for whom the book means the knight and the squire. To those two great central characters Señor Madariaga comes at length and . . . we have close and subtle analyses of both, in which the intermixture of idealism and doubt in the Don is carefully disclosed, the growth of idealism in Sancho is shown, and the reciprocal action of each on the other is traced and developed." "The authors chiefly represented are Gil Vicente, Camoens, João de Deus Ramos, Anthero de Quental, and Guerro Junqueiro, and a number of old and modern ballads and hymns of the revolution and the republic are given (three with music). The translations are on the pages facing the originals, and there are brief introductions, footnotes, and an index." Library association record

870 LATIN LITERATURE

The "Loeb classical library" edited by E. Capps, T. E. Page and W. H. D. Rouse (Harvard univ. press ea $2.50) is a series of several hundred volumes of Greek and Latin texts with English translations on opposite pages. This library, founded by James Loeb, is to include "everything of real importance from Homer to the fall of Constantinople." Most of the familiar Latin masterpieces have already appeared, and more are being added every year, many freshly translated for this series. Any library where there is a demand for classical authors not included in the Standard catalog will be safe in buying the Loeb edition. Each volume contains a brief biography and bibliography

F. S. Smith's "Classics in translation; an annotated guide to the best translations of the Greek and Latin classics into English" (Scribner 1930 307p $3) will be useful in large libraries or those libraries especially interested in the classics

1 Latin literature—Collections 24-28253

A fairly comprehensive anthology containing over 600 pages of standard translations, designed to trace the course of national life and development as well as literary history. The selections are less fragmentary than those in the collection of Dora Pym, and the book contains good historical, biographical and critical notes, and an index of authors and titles (in English)

Pym, Dora

1 Latin Literature—History and criticism [15-7470]

The second edition has a few slight corrections. Gives biography, criticism and appreciations of authors to the end of the Augustan age. Quotations are in English, with the Latin text in footnotes

"Occasionally Duff gets involved in an enumeration of minor authors which may be largely skipped. But the work is an excellent orientation over all Latin literature." Trinity college list

J. W. Duff's "Writers of Rome" in the series of World's manuals (Oxford 1923 112p illus $1) is a small, inexpensive account that some small libraries might find sufficient. It covers the period from 240 B.C. to 117 A.D., including Cicero, Caesar, Ovid, Cato, Virgil, Tacitus, and others

Fowler, Harold North, 1859-
History of Roman literature. 2d ed Macmillan 1923 315p illus $2.50 870.9

1 Latin literature — History and criticism 23-5781

"This is a little more than a reprint of the first edition [1903] the chief change being in the Bibliography which has, I hope, been in some measure brought up to date. In the text only a few minor corrections have been made." Preface to the second edition

A standard history, useful for reference because it contains dates and details about both those writers whose works are extant and also those whose writings are lost. There are numerous extracts, for the most part in translation. The book covers the period from the 3d century B.C. to Boëthius in the 6th century A.D.

"A study of Latin literature from its earliest beginnings to the death of St. Augustine. The author states in his preface that 'this volume claims no originality of matter or treatment, but is an attempt to put together within a moderate compass, such things as are known or reasonably supposed concerning the classical and early post-classical writings in the Latin tongue.' The final chapter contains a sketch of certain Christian writers whose interest for the non-theologian seemed greatest. Bibliography." Book rev. digest

"Professor Rose analyses the contents of almost every single work or book within a long work; and though he does not pretend to pass aesthetic judgment to any great extent, he indicates plainly enough where excellence and goodness, and often their opposites, lie. His work in fact has its value as a dictionary of Latin literature besides that of a history." Times (London) lit. sup.

Metamorphoses; with an English tr. by F. J. Miller. Harvard univ. press 1916 2v (Loeb classical lib.) ea $2.50 871
[16-14341]

This edition gives the original side by side with a literal translation in prose, also a short biographical introduction and an excellent index. The Latin text is based on that of Ehwald

"Professional men of letters have always liked Ovid for his sincerity, his vivacity, his imagination. His imagination is at its best in the 'Metamorphoses' in which he put together many of the Greek and Graeco-Roman myths . . . Perhaps Ovid never wrote a stunningly great line . . . but he was a born story-teller and a poet of really extraordinary facility. His work as a whole had an incalculable influence on the literature of modern countries, unsurpassed even by the influence of Virgil." J. Macy's Story of the world's literature

"Overid with an English translation . . . by A. L. Wheeler" (Harvard univ. press 1924 xliv, 501p $2.50) another volume of the Loeb classical library, contains books I-V of "Tristia" and I-IV of "Ex Ponto"

"The volume does perfectly what it is supposed to do. In the first place it tells most readably who Ovid was and what kind of poetry he wrote, and, in the second place, it traces the steps of his great influence through European literature down as far as today—ending with a statement of what he might mean to any contemporary so fortunate as to take him up." 1 Latin poetry—History and criticism
[23-18649]

"The book is not a history of Latin poetry but rather a group of essays on the theory of Latin poetry as revealed by its critics and the place of the poet as an interpreter of Roman life. The essays discuss also the influence of nature and of philosophy on Roman poetry, language and style in Latin verse and its ornaments—repetition, alliteration and assonance." Book rev. digest

"A very charming feature is a series of the author's own versions, in fluent verse of many of the more familiar poems of Virgil, Horace and Lucretius, as well as the work of some of the later and less known writers." N.Y. Times

In addition to the books entered in this class, the following title is recommended:

Sellar, W. Y. Roman poets of the Augustan age: Virgil. 3d ed Oxford 1897 xx, 423p $3.50 A full and exhaustive study of Virgil's life and of the conditions of the age in which he lived

Glover, Terrot Reaveley, 1869-

Virgil. 6th ed Macmillan 1930 343p $4 873

1 Virgil [A13-2684]

First published in 1904 with title: "Studies in Virgil." Successive editions have apparently included few changes beyond new prefaces

"In scholarly but interesting fashion with many footnotes the author discusses the various Aeneas myths, Roman life in the Augustan age and Virgil's place in it, Rome and the Roman Empire, and Virgil's interpretation of life. His conclusions are in the orthodox tradition of Sellar, Nettleship and Sainte-Beuve." Cleveland

* Virgil and his meaning to the world of today. Longmans 1922 159p (Our debt to Greece and Rome) $1.75 873

1 Virgil 23-26135

"Mr Mackail appears to have far outshone all previous interpreters and appreciators of Virgil. His style is beautifully clear, piquant, epigrammatic; his devotion to Virgil makes every word and every sentence glow with a white heat of enthusiasm; in short, he appears as a man of intense poetical feeling interpreting to the world this greatest of Roman poets." Aeneid; tr. by H. H. Ballard. 3d ed Scribner 1930 333p $1 873

[11-24096]

This edition is identical with that of 1911, with the exception of six lines. The notes were prepared primarily for students of the 8th and 9th grades but this version is suitable for either school or public library use

"A successful rendering in hexameters . . . Lacking something of the grandeur of the classic translations, it yet combines faithfulness and ease. . . Its great merit is in its 'readableness.' " F. S. Smith's Classics in translation

Ænid; tr. into English verse by T. C. Williams. Houghton 1910 xxiii,503p illus map (Riverside literature ser.) $1.12 873

10-8062

This is a verse translation, praised for both accuracy and poetic quality. The introduction gives a sketch of Virgil's life and position, while the appendix contains questions and suggestions for the student, and a very useful pronouncing dictionary of proper names

"Though the poem of Virgil is in many passages an imitation from the Iliad and the Odyssey, the Roman element predominates in it and the Aeneid is the true national poem of Rome." A. C. L. Botta's Handbook of universal literature

Eclogues and Georgics; tr. from the Latin by J. W. Mackail. new ed Longmans 1915 119p $1.40 873

A16-508

"Prose translation of the 'Eclogues' sometimes called the 'Bucolics' taking the form of pastoral dialogues between Greek shepherds; also of the 'Georgics' which treats in succession of crops, orchards and vineyards, herds and flocks, and lastly bees. The 'Eclogues' were doubtless modeled by Virgil upon the Idyls of Theocritus. These pastorals are the survivals of the earliest written poems of Virgil." Pratt alcove

"In this re-issue, the translation has been modified so far as was necessary to bring it into accordance with what at present may be regarded as the standard text of Virgil." Translator's note

Mackail's translation is also obtainable in the following edition: "Virgil's works: The Aeneid, Eclogues, Georgics" (Modern lib. 1934 352p 95c)

874 LATIN LYRIC POETRY

Catullus, C. Valerius

Catullus, Tibullus and Pervigilium Veneris. Harvard univ. press 1924 375p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 874

[19-6668]

Each selection has the Latin original with an English prose translation opposite. Catullus and Tibullus are separately indexed. The translation of Catullus was made by F. W. Cornish, Tibullus by J. P. Postgate, and the "Pervigilium Veneris" by J. W. Mackail

"Tibullus was the father of the Roman elegy. . . The style of his poems and their tone of thought are like his character, deficient in vigor and manliness, but sweet, smooth, polished, tender, and never disfigured by bad taste." A. C. L. Botta's Handbook of universal literature

Horace

Odes and Epodes; with an English tr. by C. E. Bennett. rev ed Harvard univ. press 1927 430p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 874

[19-10172]

These are good literal prose translations of the Odes, Epodes and Carmen saeculare, opposite the original Latin. There is a short introductory chapter on the life and works of Horace, followed by a chapter on the metres he used. An index of proper names refers to the Latin originals by number and line

"In Latin poetry Horace ranks second only to Virgil. The grace, beauty, sanity, and geniality in the verse of this Roman of the Augustan age have long made it a favourite with men of letters, many of whom have delighted to translate and imitate him. So modern is his spirit that even today he is brought to the attention of tired commuters by the 'Colyumists' of the evening newspapers." A. D. Dickinson

Satires, Epistles and Ars poetica; with an English tr. by H. R. Fairclough. Harvard univ. press 1926 xxx,508p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 874

[27-1557]

The translator "has succeeded in reproducing much of the idiomatic forcefulness and skilful turn of the thought, in the Latin original. His introduction supplies some useful bibliographical help." Providence

Horace's Satires sketch boldly but good-humoredly the social life of his day. The Epistles are simple friendly correspondence, in which we find the man Horace, without a trace of the moral teacher or censor. His "Art of poetry," a brief and apparently casual letter, has had great influence on modern literature

875 LATIN ORATORY

Cicero, Marcus Tullius

De officiis; with an English tr. by Walter Miller. Harvard univ. press 1913 423p front (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 875

[14-5345]

"The offices," or "Duties," is a stoical treatise on moral obligations, in the form of a letter addressed to his son Marcus, who was a student in Athens. Cicero himself looked upon it as his masterpiece. This edition presents the Latin text with a literal translation opposite. The three parts of the essay are headed Moral goodness, Expediency, and Conflict between the right and the expedient. Well indexed

"Cicero's unique and imperishable glory is . . . that he created a language which remained for sixteen centuries that of the civilized world, and used that language to create a style which nineteen centuries have not replaced, and in some respects have scarcely altered." J. W. Mackail's Latin literature

De senectute, De amicitia, De divinatione; with an English tr. by W. A. Falconer. Harvard univ. press 1923 567p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 875

[23-12099]

These three essays are cast in the form of discourses after the manner of Aristotle. "Cato the Elder on old age" and "Laelius on friendship" are famed for beauty of style and delicacy of feeling. "On divination," which purports to be a conversation between Cicero and his brother, is directed against belief in the auspices and superstition in general. The English translation faces the Latin original on opposite pages. Each essay has a separate index to proper names

Cicero, Marcus T.—Continued

Philippics; with an English tr. by W. C. A. Ker. Harvard univ. press 1926 655p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 875

[27-2023]

The most famous of Cicero's orations, his indignant and eloquent speeches against Antonius after the assassination of Caesar. Each speech is preceded by a critical and explanatory introduction, and Latin and English texts are given on opposite pages. Index

37-39228

"Six of the seven orations contained in this volume are connected with one of the best known and least significant episodes in Roman history—the conspiracy of Catiline. They were delivered in the years 63 and 62 B.C. The seventh, Pro Flacco, was the last speech, now extant, made by Cicero before his banishment. Its date is 59 B.C." Prefatory note

Each section is preceded by a critical and explanatory introduction. A brief bibliography of manuscripts and editions is appended. Latin and English text on opposite pages

Letters of a Roman gentleman; selected from the correspondence of Cicero and tr. by A. P. McKinlay. Houghton 1926 xxvii,249p illus map o.p. 1939 876

26-18501

"From the 916 letters left by Cicero, Mr McKinlay has made a selection 'which includes the portions of his correspondence most significant for their humor, literary excellence, and pertinency to present-day problems.' These are arranged chronologically, with introductory notes and running comment." Book rev. digest

Cicero's "Letters to his friends; with an English tr. by W. G. Williams" (Harvard univ. press 1927-29 3v ea $2.50) is a larger collection. This edition is in the Loeb classical library, and like the other titles in the series has the original and the English texts on opposite pages

Pliny, the younger, d. 113

Letters, with an English translation by William Melmoth, rev. by W. M. L. Hutchinson. Harvard univ. press 1915 2v (Loeb classical lib.) ea $2.50 876

[16-654]

"Translations with accompanying Latin text of the 'Epistolae' of Pliny the Younger. These letters are models of refined thought and elegant expression. They reveal the occupations and interests of a cultured Roman gentleman of wealth, leisure, and influence during the first century. This translation by Melmoth, himself a talented letter-writer, first published in 1746, ranks as a lesser English classic because of its own literary merit and its accurate reflection of the spirit of the original." Pratt alcove

877 LATIN SATIRE AND HUMOR

Apuleius

Golden ass; being the Metamorphoses, with an English tr. by W. Adlington (1566) rev. by S. Gaselee. Harvard univ. press 1915 xxiv,607p front (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 877

[16-655]

This edition has parallel Latin and English versions. The translation was made in 1566, but has been revised for this series. Contains a brief three-page life of Apuleius. Index

The "Metamorphoses" or "Golden ass" was founded on an older work, which Apuleius made the groundwork of an elaborate romance, interspersed with numerous episodes, of which the beautiful story of Cupid and Psyche is the most celebrated

Juvenal, Decimus Junius

Juvenal and Persius; with an English tr. G. G. Ramsay. Harvard univ. press 1918 lxxxii,415p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 877

[18-21762]

Juvenal's sixteen satires and Persius's six with parallel Latin and English prose versions. The introduction presents biographical material, criticisms, comparisons and summaries of the satires, and bibliographies of the two poets. Brief index for each. The texts are based on Bucheler's edition

"Juvenal is the most savage—one might almost say the most brutal—of the Roman satirists." J. W. Mackail's Latin literature

Persius died young, and left only six satires, which show keen observation, dramatic power and charm, in spite of his youth and comparatively narrow experience

Nixon, Paul, 1882-

Martial and the modern epigram. Longmans 1927 208p (Our debt to Greece and Rome) $2 877

1 Epigrams 2 Martial 27-7987

"Perhaps one of the best things in this book is the opening chapter, which defines the epigram. Also, the author deals very effectively with the various periods. . . . Over three hundred of Martial's epigrams are included, most of them very happily translated by the author. It is a good reference work, made preeminently so by its index which enables one to find easily in Martial the original of each translation." Providence

Because of the large number of translations included, this volume can take the place of a collection of Martial's work in the smaller libraries. If a more complete edition is desired, one of the best collections in his "Epigrams; with an English tr. by W. C. A. Ker" in the Loeb classical library (Harvard univ. press 1919-1920 2v ea $2.50)

878 LATIN MISCELLANY

Caesar, Caius Julius, 102?-44 B.C.
Gallic war; with an English tr. by H. J. Edwards. Harvard univ. press 1917 xxii,619p front (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 878

[17-28110]

Latin text with parallel English translation, literal and scholarly. The introduction outlines Caesar's life and work and furnishes a brief analysis of the seven books. The appendixes contain chapters on the Roman army and Britain. Nine maps and plans are interspersed thru the text. There are four indexes—Persons, Tribes, Geography and Subjects

"It has probably been more widely read (if that school-room grind can be called reading) than any other Latin book. Many of us learned to hate it in our youth . . . But the mature reader who turns to Caesar's works . . . will find them immensely interesting, swift, vigorous stories. The 'Gallic war' is the basis of half our knowledge of the northern provinces of Rome, which have since become great modern nations." J. Macy's story of the world's literature

Caesar's "Civil wars; with an English tr. by A. G. Peskett," also in the Loeb classical library (Harvard univ. press 1914 369p illus $2.50) is a good edition of his later "Commentaries"

1 Literature, Comparative 2 Seneca, Lucius Annaeus, ca 3 B.C.-A.D. 65

[22-14144]

"An interesting essay, with bibliography and notes, written with keen historical sense, using the past to interpret the present, succeeding amazingly in giving life to the descriptions of the times, ideas and people of the early Roman empire, pointing out the influence of the philosophy of Seneca upon modern European and American civilization." Bkl.

Sallust, 86-34 B.C.
Sallust; with an English tr. by J. C. Rolfe. Harvard univ. press 1921 xxii,535p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 878

[21-6979]

The orations and letters of Sallust and the pseudo-Sallustian works. There is an introduction on the life of Sallust, the pseudo-Sallustian works, and the manuscripts. Contains a bibliography and index. The original text and translation are on opposite pages

"His histories have not only the charm of the historical romance, but are also valuable political studies. His characters are vigorously and naturally drawn, and the more his histories are read, the more obvious it is that he always writes with an object, and uses his facts as the means of enforcing a great political lesson." A. C. L. Botta's Handbook of universal literature

Seneca, Lucius Annaeus, ca 3 B.C.-A.D. 65
Moral essays; with an English tr. by J. W. Basore. Harvard univ. press 1928-35 3v (Loeb classical lib.) ea $2.50 878

(28-16432)

The original Latin and the English translation are given on opposite pages

"As a moral writer, Seneca stands deservedly high. Though infected with the rhetorical vices of the age, his treatises are full of striking and often gorgeous eloquence, and in their combination of high thought with deep feeling, have rarely, if at all, been surpassed." J. W. Mackail's Latin literature

Suetonius Tranquillus, Caius
Suetonius; with an English tr. by J. C. Rolfe. Harvard univ. press 1914 2v (Loeb classical lib.) ea $2.50 878

[14-4948]

Contents: Lives of the Caesars; Lives of illustrious men; Grammarians and rhetoricians; Poets. Text with parallel English translations. Contains biographical, bibliographical and critical notes, and a very good index

"The use which he makes of historical documents proves that he was a man of diligent research, and, as a biographer, industrious and careful. He indulges neither in ornament of style nor in romantic exaggeration. The pictures which he draws of some of the Caesars are indeed terrible, but they are fully supported by the contemporary authority of Juvenal and Tacitus." A. C. L. Botta's Handbook of universal literature

Tacitus, Cornelius
Dialogus, Agricola, Germania. Harvard univ. press 1914 371p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 878

[32-16143]

Latin and English on opposite pages. The "Dialogus" is translated by William Peterson, the "Agricola" and "Germania" by Maurice Hutton. The first is a dialog on oratory. The second is a brief biography of his father-in-law, Agricola, who was governor of Roman Britain. "Germania," perhaps his best known work, records his observations of the barbarous inhabitants of Germany

If any library wishes a more complete edition of Tacitus, there is the Everyman's library edition, "Historical works; tr. by Arthur Murphy" (Dutton 1907 2v ea 90c) The Annals, which compose v 1, record the history of Rome from the founding of the city to the fall of the republic. In v2 are the History, which covers the reigns of the 12 Caesars, 31 B.C. to 96 A.D., and Germania and Agricola

879 MEDIEVAL LATIN

Gesta Romanorum
Gesta Romanorum. . . tr. by Charles Swan. Dutton 1924 xx,472p (Broadway translations) o.p. 1939 879

24-18459

One of the most popular collections of tales in the later middle ages, probably told by the monks and used as examples in their sermons. These brief stories, which were supposedly based on Roman history (hence the title, "Deeds of the Romans") furnished plot and inspiration for many of the greatest poets—Chaucer, Gower, Shakespeare, Schiller, etc.

1 Goliards 2 Latin poetry, Medieval and modern 34-28432

In this reprint of a book first published 1927 the illustrations have been omitted. Latin originals of lyrics translated in the text are given on pages 222-35

"Begun as an introduction to a volume of translations from medieval Latin lyrics, this book has grown to be a fairly full account of the classic tradition that 'came to its wild flowering' in the rhyming Latin lyric of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries." Saturday rev.

"A fascinating book most readers will find this, for with all its sophistication it has grace and charm as well, and its nimble wit and happy renderings of Latin verse draw the unfamiliar reader into some real touch with medieval life." Amer. hist. rev.

1 Latin literature, Medieval and modern 31-6304

The authors "have undertaken and accomplished a rather overpowering task: to outline the development of Latin literature from the time when it ceased to be 'classical' till it died a natural death with the death of Latin as a universal language. Their field covers from the fourth to the seventeenth century. . . On the earlier periods of the book is admirably clear and detailed. A better introduction could hardly be required by anyone. . . There is an excellent bibliography and an index." New statesman and Nation

1 Greek literature—Collections 24-30793

Anthology of prose and poetry from the 10th century B.C. to the 2d century A.D. The translations are for the most part the best known for each selection, except that Gilbert Murray is not represented. Complete selections rather than fragments have been given whenever possible, including the whole of Agamemnon, Oedipus the king, Medea and Alcestis. Biographical and critical notes accompany the translations. The authors represented include Homer, Hesiod, Sappho, Anacreon, Pindar, Herodotus, Thucydides, Xenophon, Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Aristophanes, Plato, Aristotle, and Theocritus

1 Greek literature—History and criticism 2 Latin literature—History and criticism 3 Nature (Esthetics) 4 Nature in literature 30-5744

"A discussion on the subject of the feeling for nature among the ancient Greeks and Romans, as expressed in their literature, mythology, religion and art. The book refutes the argument that the ancients had no feeling for nature, which idea was first brought into prominence by Schiller's essay on Naive and sentimental poetry, written in 1795." History of ancient Greek literature. new and rev ed Macmillan 1923 503p front o.p. 1939 880.9

1 Greek literature—History and criticism 23-7097

First edition 1902. The revision in this edition is slight

Covers the literature of Greece between about 900 B.C. (Homeric poems) and the 9th century A.D., with brief excerpts from some of the shorter poems. Excellent for its analyses, and more useful for reference than for straight reading. Bibliography: p468-86

Hamilton, Edith, 1869-

1 Civilization, Greek 2 Greek literature —History and criticism 30-13749

An interpretation of the Greek mind and spirit and an application of the Greek ideal to the civilization of today

"The book is delightful reading throughout—and good sense, too. Of the greater writers, who have discussed the Greek way of life and thought, none has expressed himself in a manner more likely to appeal to the common reader. The atmosphere of ponderous erudition which hangs over the usual work of scholarship on the Greek period, is absent from Edith Hamilton's book." Outlook

Jebb, Sir Richard Claverhouse, 1841-1905
Greek literature. Am. bk. 176p (Literature primers) 64c 880.9

1 Greek literature—History and criticism 1-2322

First published in 1877. So brief as to be little more than an annotated outline; but the author, a great Greek scholar and translator, displays in these pages so wise a sense of proportion and so just a valuation of the literature that the book will be found very useful

Murray, Gilbert, 1866-
History of ancient Greek literature. Appleton-Century 420p (Appleton dollar lib.) $1 880.9

1 Greek literature—History and criticism 3-2394

First published 1897

A comprehensive history in spite of its small size. Murray has the gift of writing for both scholars and the general public. His knowledge of the subject is profound, but the book makes lively reading for any one who has the slightest interest in Greek literature

Rose, Herbert Jennings, 1883-
* Handbook of Greek literature; from Homer to the age of Lucien. Dutton 1934 454p $6 880.9

1 Greek literature—History and criticism [34-31431]

"Aims at giving a full and concise summary of Greek literature from Homer to Lucian. The book is well arranged, can be read continuously and can be appreciated without specialist knowledge of the language or the literature . . . All the titles of works are carefully recorded, even when—as, for example, with plays—they are mere names, and brief summaries of all extant works are given . . . The book deserves every recommendation as a well-produced, full and reliable manual." Times (London) lit. sup.

1 Greek poetry—Collections 14-2055

Includes translations of about 350 poems from the Greek anthology. There is an introductory essay on the Anthology, and a table of contents giving the name of the translator and the number of the selection in Mackail's "Select epigrams"

"By far the best anthology of English versions of the Anthology. Some of the translations are by the editor, while others are his choice amongst the versions of Frances Fawkes and other poets up to William Cory whose exquisite 'Heraclitus' is included." F. S. Smith's Classics in translation

Any library that needs a complete translation will find the Loeb classical library edition excellent. It has the titles: "Greek anthology; with an English tr. by W. R. Paton" (Harvard univ. press 1916-18 5v ea $2.50). In v 1 there is a list of the more important books containing verse translations from the anthology

Oxford book of Greek verse in translation; ed. by T. F. Higham and C. M. Bowra. Oxford 1938 112,781p $3 881.08

1 Greek poetry—Collections (W) 38-27322

Every piece in "the Oxford book of Greek verse," published 1930 is here translated, and the same arrangement of authors and numeration is followed, except for some minor differences. Two introductory essays deal with character and development of Greek poetry and Greek poetry in translation

"The editors . . . have not confined themselves to any one period for their translations, and the reader will find the best by both classical and modern authors: the choice runs from Pope and Gilbert Murray to T. E. Lawrence and Louis MacNeice. The originals cover the whole period of Greek verse from Homer through the classical dramatists to Bion and Moschus. In addition . . . prefaces by the editors outline the form and structure of Greek verse, and show the obstacles to be surmounted." Recommended books

883 GREEK EPIC POETRY: HOMER

Homer

Iliad; tr. into English blank verse by W. C. Bryant. Roslyn ed Houghton 2v in 1 $4 883
4-14077

Bryant's version reads less like a translation than one would expect of a metrical version. It is in the same meter as his own "Thanatopsis," and is particularly happy in descriptive passages

The Riverside literature series edition (Houghton, 2v in 1 $1.12) is abridged according to college entrance requirements. It omits books 11, 13, 14, 15, 17 and 21, and all unimportant passages in the other books

* Iliad; done into English prose by Andrew Lang, Walter Leaf and Ernest Myers. rev ed Macmillan 1903 506p $1.60 883
4-14075

The best prose translation, both scholarly and readable

The same translation is obtainable with an introduction by Louise Pound in the Modern readers' series with the title "Iliad; tr. by Lang, Leaf and Myers" (Macmillan 1930 xx, 460p $1)

Iliad; with an English tr. by A. T. Murray. Harvard univ. press 1924-25 2v (Loeb classical lib.) ea $2.50 883
[25-4962]

Prose translation, smooth and readable. The editor has attempted not to include controversial matters in the notes, but he is convinced of the single authorship of the poem. Index of names in the Greek

Odyssey; tr. into English blank verse by W. C. Bryant. Roslyn ed Houghton 1899 2v in 1 $4 883
[99-3026]

Like his "Iliad," Bryant's translation of the "Odyssey" is in rhymeless iambic pentameter. As a translation it is equally good

The Riverside literature edition (Houghton 2v in 1 $1.12) is apparently printed from the same plates as the Roslyn, but the book is smaller and inferior in paper, binding and general appearance

Odyssey; tr. by G. H. Palmer. Houghton 1912 xxiv,387p illus map $2.50 883
[13-24614]

An excellent prose translation. There is a fairly short introduction, but there are no notes nor indexes. The Riverside literature edition has been slightly revised (Houghton 1921 xxxiv, 402p illus map $1.08) but the trade edition of 1912 remains unchanged

"We are happiest in point of accuracy, facility and sheer enjoyment if we read a prose translation, that of George Herbert Palmer." J. Macy's story of the world's literature

Another attractive edition of this translation is illustrated by N. C. Wyeth (holiday ed Houghton 1929 xxviii, 314p illus $5)

‡ Odyssey; newly tr. into English prose [by T. E. Shaw]. Oxford 327p $1.75 883
[32-28146]

This translation was first published in 1932. In this reprint the margins have been trimmed, and a new preface added. A map of the wanderings of Odysseus has been added on the end-papers

"It seems to me that even if the translator's name had never been heard before this volume would be destined to rank among the half-dozen most eminent translations of the Odyssey in English." Henry Hazlitt in Nation

J. W. Mackail's translation of "Odyssey" (Oxford 1932 513p $6) is in rhymed quatrains

"New translation of the Odyssey, rendering it into modern English prose. In a closing chapter the translator explains his ideas in making the book, discusses some of the peculiarities of Homeric vocabulary and gives parallels from other literatures. Pronouncing index." Book rev. digest

"His version is always alive and gives us the Odyssey as the great and moving story it is, unlittered by the bric-à-brac of scholarship and by the fussiness of scholars anxious to point its literary merits . . . here is a pioneer work of paramount importance for the future of Greek." Pindar
Odes, including the principal fragments; with an introduction and an English tr. by Sir John Sandys. Harvard univ. press 1915 xlv,635p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 884
16-653

The odes celebrated victories in the great national games, and were accompanied by music, which is lost to us. The fragments represent almost every kind of lyric poem. The Greek and the English are on opposite pages in this edition
"We possess in their entirety only the 'Hymns of victory' ('Epinicia') of this greatest of Greek lyric poets. But we have enough of his work to recognize in it a 'grand style, sublimity and swiftness of thought, wealth of imagery and metaphor, and superb diction.'" A. D. Dickinson

Sappho and her influence. Longmans 1924 272p illus (Our debt to Greece and Rome) $2.25 884
1 Literature, Comparative 2 Sappho
25-1867

Contains many illustrative examples of her poems. "The historical estimate of Sappho in different literatures of the world given by Dr Robinson is almost encyclopedic. It includes the literature of Greece and Rome, of the Middle ages and the Renaissance, as well as Italian, Spanish, German, French, English and American literature, with a reference also to the Russian. . . One of the finest things in the book is the critical dealing with Sappho in art and music." Modern philology

Memoir, text, selected renderings and a literal tr. by H. T. Wharton; with paraphrases in verse by Anne Bunner. Brentano's 1920 177p o.p. 1939 884
20-18950

Gives an account of the life of the Greek poetess, with quotations from commentators. Then follow the fragments of her poems, each in the original according to Bergh's text, then in a literal prose translation, and in several English metrical translations. A note for each tells how and by what ancient writer the poem or fragment was preserved. A special chapter presents Anne Bunner's paraphrases in verse. The bibliography of 16 pages includes books and a few magazine references, in many languages, from the 16th century to the present

Theocritus
Theocritus, Bion and Moschus; rendered into English prose with an introductory essay by A. Lang. Macmillan 1889 xlii,210p (Golden treasury ser.) $1.40 884
[2-15397]

Charming prose translation of the "idyls" of a noted Greek bucolic poet of the third century B.C., including also the writings of two less known Greek pastoral poets, Bion of Smyrna, and Moschus of Sicily. The 31 page introduction on Theocritus and his age is valuable
"Theocritus is perhaps the most universally attractive of all Greek poets. . . One might almost say that there is hardly anything beautiful in the pastoral poetry of the world that does not come from Theocritus. His first idyll, the 'Dirge on Daphnis,' has perhaps had a greater number of celebrated imitations than any poem of its length in existence—from Bion's 'Adonis,' Moschus's 'Bion,' Vergil's 'Daphnis,' to our own 'Lycidas,' 'Adonais,' and 'Thyrsis.'" Aesop

Fables of Aesop; selected, told anew and their history traced by Joseph Jacobs; done in pictures by Richard Heighway. Macmillan 1926 xxv,222p (Modern readers' ser.) $1 888

1 Fables [24-26091]

Of the hundreds of Aesop's fables that have come down to us, Joseph Jacobs has chosen 82 of the most effective and most familiar. Fairly large print and illustrations in black and white make this edition attractive and readable

Editions of Aesop suitable for children are listed in the "Children's catalog," class 028.5. Some other editions suitable for adults are:

Aristotle

On the art of poetry; tr. by Ingram Bywater. Oxford 1920 95p pa 85c 888

A21-874

Contains a preface by Gilbert Murray. A pleasing translation for English readers

"After all the centuries that intervene, including the brilliant critical thought of the nineteenth century, Aristotle's Poetics stands solid and essential; whoever knows that book cannot go far wrong in his literary judgments—even of the latest novel." J. Macy's Story of the world's literature

The same translation of this treatise may be bought in the Modern readers' series: "Aristotle's Poetics, Longinus on the sublime; ed. with an introduction by C. S. Baldwin" (Macmillan 1930 133p $1). The essay "On the sublime" is translated by W. R. Roberts

The poetics; "Longinus": On the sublime; Demetrius: On style. Harvard univ. press 1927 xx,500p (Loeb classical lib.) $2.50 888

[27-26687]

Aristotle and Longinus, tr. by W. Hamilton Fyfe; Demetrius, tr. by W. Rhys Roberts. The treatise "On the sublime" is traditionally ascribed to Longinus; the real author is unknown

The Fyfe translation of the "Poetics" is perhaps more literal and a little less readable than Bywater's. Here the Greek originals and the translations face each other on opposite pages. Each selection has an index

Herodotus

Herodutus; with an English tr. by A. D. Godley. Harvard univ. press 1920-24 4v (Loeb classical lib.) ea $2.50 888

[21-6980]

Complete works of Herodotus, according to the text of Stein, with parallel Greek and English versions, introductions and maps. First two volumes have short indexes of proper names, and v4 has a long, full index to v 1-4

"The history falls into two chief parts. The first five books are an introduction, tracing the rise and growth of the Persian power. The last four books relate the Persian invasions of Greece under Darius and Xerxes. . . As a historian, he fails chiefly by inattention or insensibility to political cause and effect. . . And he tells us little or nothing about constitutional change. His charm of style is all the greater for his almost child-like simplicity, and he is one of the most delightful storytellers." R. C. Jebb's Greek literature

Dialogues; selections from the tr. of Benjamin Jowett; ed. by W. C. Greene. Liveright 1927 xxxix,535p (Black and gold lib.) $1.98 888

27-14313

"From eighteen of the dialogues have been chosen passages, comprising nearly one-third of the whole text of Plato, which give a fair conception of the philosopher's persuasive charm and of his many-sided interests, as well as of the essential unity of his thought. The general introduction attempts a survey of certain elements in Plato's philosophy, with some indication of its importance for the modern world." Preface

Thucydides; tr. by Benjamin Jowett; to which is prefixed an essay on inscriptions and a note on the geography of Thucydides. 2d ed rev Oxford 1900 2v $6 888

1 Greece—History 2 Inscriptions, Greek 9-25600

First edition, 1881

"Thucydides, the second great Greek historian, wrote an account of the conflict which took place in his own time between Athens and Sparta and their allies, the Peloponnesian war. He was the first great war correspondent and reporter with an immediate sense of fact. . . . All modern historians, even the most critically analytical, respect him. And thanks to that master translator from the Greek, Benjamin Jowett, Thucydides is an English classic." J. Macy's Story of the world's literature

Dawn of literature. Crowell 1931 367p illus o.p. 1939 890

1 Literature, Ancient—History and criticism 2 Oriental literature—History and criticism 31-22122

A survey of Oriental literature in Egypt, Babylon and Assyria, India, Persia, China, and Palestine. Tho emphasis has been placed upon earliest sources, literature of more recent date has also been included. Bibliography and index. Illustrations are mostly photographs of inscriptions

"For a rapid introduction to early writings in half a dozen of the foremost world literatures, this study is excellently designed. The author has pared down the formidable bulk of expert knowledge, and retained just enough to give the reader a compact framework of information within which to fit the various quotations." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

(ed.) Poetry of the Orient; an anthology of the classic secular poetry of the major eastern nations. Knopf 1928 xxv,328p $3 890

1 Oriental poetry—Collections 28-27861

"Mrs Tietjens, with perhaps a surplus of apparatus, has admirably represented the secular poetries of China, Japan, India, Arabia, and Persia in so far as they are accessible in the translations of Arthur Waley, Florence Ayscough, R. A. Nicholson, Gertrude Bell, Wilfrid Seawen Blunt, and many others. There was need for such an anthology, and the need has been met." Nation

"One of the most useful features of the collection will undoubtedly prove to be the brief historical and biographical notes prefixed, respectively, to the different national periods and the various poets. The bibliography will prove helpful to those who may be inspired to read further in the literatures of Oriental lands." Springfield Republican

"From the earliest times down to the arrival of Vasco da Gama in 1498, the intellectual life of India is discussed. Since the material is included in brief compass, it is necessarily presented rather sketchily in some cases; literature is given the most space. Nevertheless, for anyone who wishes to gain a general acquaintance with what is finest in Indian civilization, this book will make good reading, and it should help to dispel some of the doubts and the controversy about Hindu religion and customs have aroused." "We commend the book most warmly. It is not light reading, but it is material which will most generously repay the time and care which must be devoted to it." Spectator

Mahābhārata. Bhagavadgītā

Bhagavad-gita; tr. from the Sanskrit by A. W. Ryder. Univ. of Chicago press 1929 xxiv,139p $2 891.2

29-24224

"As the utterances of Jesus are to Christians so is the 'Song of the Blessèd One' to Hindus. Although of special importance to the sectaries of the god Vishnu, its verses are on the lips of others, so truly does it voice common Hindu ideas. The theme of the Bhagavad-Gita is man's relation to God; the teacher is God himself incarnate as Krishna. . . . The translation, being in verse, is of necessity free, yet does not depart objectionably from exactness." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Mr Ryder's verse translation is welcome as the first really popular poetic rendering to be based on accurate scholarship, and the insight which is born of sympathy." Sat. rev. of lit.

"In this valuable book the Keeper of the Manuscripts in the British Museum performs a great service, not only to Wales, but to the larger world outside. It is the first attempt that has been made to provide a comprehensive survey of Welsh Poetry. . . The book is addressed chiefly to the English reader, and to those Welshmen who have no effective knowledge of their native tongue. This, of course, involves extensive quotation, with translation." Cuchulain Cuchulain of Muirthemne: the story of the men of the Red Branch of Ulster; arranged and put into English by Lady Gregory. . . Scribner 1902 360p $2.75 891.6

[3-2086]

W. B. Yeats has written a preface to this edition. Lady Gregory here retells the old Irish tales, and her version is a blend of scholarship and imaginative reconstruction. The stories are coordinated and compressed into a homogeneous narrative that should be called a folk-version of the old saga, adapted to literature, rather than a translation

First published 1894. Authoritative and readable brief work which has proved popular. The scope is rather limited, and makeup and type are not good. But it is valuable for early Irish literature to the 18th century, and contains translated extracts of both prose and poetry

Mabinogion

Mabinogion; tr. by Lady Charlotte Guest. Dutton 432p (Everyman's lib.) 90c 891.6

A10-2213

A translation from the Welsh, of 11 tales from the "Red book of Hergest," a 14th century manuscript, and one tale of Taliesin from a much later manuscript. Lady Charlotte Guest, the first and best translator of this bardic literature, assigned to her collection the title "Mabinogion," meaning roughly the traditional lore acquired by aspiring bards. Some of the stories are pre-Christian and pre-historic, some reflect the Roman administration of Britain, and some center about Arthur

Another translation is "Mabinogion; tr. by T. P. Ellis & John Lloyd" (Oxford 1929 2v $3.50). In this new version the translators have used archaic English appropriate to the subject

"Pushkin apart, the volume contains renderings of a poem by Nekrasov ('The Birthplace'), a poem by Tyuchov, eight lyrics by Alexander Blok (including 'Ravenna'), and a short lyric by Anna Akhmatova. But the translations of Pushkin form the important part of the volume. They exhibit every side of his poetry, including as they do large fragments of 'Ruslan and Lyudmila' and of 'Evgeny Onegin,' 'Tsar Saltan' in its entirety and 'The Golden Cockerel,' a complete version of 'The Bronze Horseman,' and one or two of the shorter lyrics." "Comic situations, and side-splittingly funny reactions to them are the rule in this group of plays by a Russian dramatist of the early 19th century. . . Under it all there is satire, not only on human nature, but on the Russian government and officialdom. For instance, 'The government inspector' satirizes the political conditions in a small Russian town." Providence

1 Russia — History—Revolution, 1917—Drama 37-29650

"In 1929, Maxim Gorki planned a dramatic trilogy to mirror the events of [Revolutionary] years in the life of a provincial Russian town. The action of the first play ['Yegor Bulichoff'] takes place immediately preceding the March Revolution, the second ['Dostigaeff and the others'] covers the period from March to November 1917. The third play was to deal with the first years of the Soviet régime, but Gorki's . . . death left it unwritten." Prefatory note

"In spite of their propaganda, [the plays] are essentially concerned with how to meet life forcefully and sincerely, and how to die courageously and perhaps with a little humor. Nor are the plays dull and labored dialogues between ideas. They are human dramas definitely written to be presented on the stage, and utilize every fine theatrical effect." Theatre arts monthly

"Ostroviskii was a dramatist of the great realistic period of Russian literature, who devoted himself to the portrayal of the merchant class. 'It's a family affair' is a keen-edged portrayal of the low standard of Russian commercial morals in the 50's. 'A protégée of the mistress' shows how the serfs were subject to the caprices of irresponsible owners and, like Turgenieff's 'Sportsman's sketches,' helped to forward the movement for emancipation. 'Poverty is no crime,' 1854, shows the influence of the Slavophile movement; 'Sin and sorrow are common to all' is a tragic incident resulting from the conflict of the petty tradesmen and the nobility." Ser. 1. "The first two plays, 'Abigail,' a Biblical drama, and 'Forgotten souls,' a play of the Russian pale, are by David Pinski, whose longer drama, 'Treasure,' was published last year [1915]. The third play, 'She must marry a doctor' is by Solomon J. Rabinowitsch, known as 'the Yiddish Mark Twain.' Then follow two plays by Sholom Ash, 'Winter' and 'The sinner,' and one by Perez Hirschbein, 'In the dark.' " Book rev. digest
Ser. 2. "Two plays by Pinski, 'Little heroes,' a kindly ironical study of childish boastfulness and 'Stranger,' based upon a legend of the coming of the Messiah; Hirschbein's 'On the threshold,' a well drawn portrait of a domestic tyrant and miser; Levin's 'Poetry and prose,' the disillusionment which comes to a married woman who fixes her errant affections on a self-centered genius; Korbin's 'Black sheep,' a pathetic and powerful play on the hold of early evil associations on the son of a family of the slums raised to wealth and position, and his 'Secret of life,' a fantasy of youth on a quest to solve the eternal riddle." [30-26609]
Lane's translation was first published between 1838 and 1840. "Mr. Lane's intimate knowledge of the land and language, the customs and character of the 'Arabian Nights' folk enabled him to imbue his translation with all the spirit of the East and the true character of the Eastern people that color the original Arabic stories. . . [The] notes, which have in the past been published separately as a textbook of Muslim life, are included complete in this new single-volume edition. They are contained in the Appendix, organized by chapters, and indexed by numbers." Preface
Many editions intended for children will be found listed and described in the "Children's catalog," class 028.5
A selection from the famous translation by R. F. Burton is available entitled "Arabian nights; or, A book of a thousand and one nights" (Blue ribbon bks. 1932 823p illus $1) This is "a complete and unabridged selection arranged by Bennett A. Cerf from the famous literal translation." Subtitle

Arabic literature; an introduction. Oxford 1926 128p (World's manuals) $1 892.7
1 Arabic literature—History and criticism 27-12707
Brief history of a literature that flourished mostly between 750 and 1258 A.D. Arabic literature was produced by people of the most varied ethnic origins, who lost their nationalism under the influence of their Arab conquerors. This concise summary closes with a section on the period from 1258 to 1800 and a few paragraphs on western influence
C. L. Huart's "History of Arabic literature; tr. by Lady M. S. H. Loyd" (Appleton 1903 478p o.p. 1939) is a useful volume in the Short histories of the literatures of the world series. It is more comprehensive than Gibb, covering more completely the literature from its origins thru the 19th century

"A very scholarly work, presenting a series of stories that were supposedly popular in their day in ancient Egypt. . . They are provided with a long general introduction, special introductions for each story and a plethora of footnotes. The stories are interesting to Egyptologists for their faithful reflection of the habits and customs of the times. They have an added interest in the comparisons which they invite with stories from other literatures—the first of them, 'The two brothers,' for instance, suggesting the Old Testament story of Potiphar's wife. . . This work has been translated from the fourth French edition, the author having read and revised the translation." Book rev. digest

Sir W. M. F. Petrie, also an authority on Egypt, has edited "Egyptian tales translated from the papyri" (Series one-two Methuen 1918 2v v 1 6s, v2 5s). The editor assigns each tale to a definite historical period, and adds valuable notes

Kalevala

Kalevala, the land of heroes; tr. from the original Finnish by W. F. Kirby. Dutton 2v (Everyman's lib.) ea 90c 894.541

A10-39

Unrhymed verse translation in the same meter as the original. Notes and a glossary of Finnish names

"The great monument of Finnish literature. . . A kind of epic poem, which was arranged in a systematic collection, and given to the world in 1833, by Elias Lönnrot. . . . The poem, which strongly resembles 'Hiawatha,' takes its name from the heroes of Kaleva, the land of happiness and plenty, who struggle with three others from the cold north and the land of death. It begins with the creation, and ends in the triumph of the heroes of Kaleva." A. C. L. Botta's Handbook of universal literature

895 CHINESE AND JAPANESE LITERATURE

895.1 Chinese literature

In addition to the books entered in this class, the following titles are recommended:

Acton, H. M. M. and Ch'en, Shih-hsiang, trs. Modern Chinese poetry. Duckworth 1936 176p 7s 6d An anthology of Chinese poetry written since 1920

Shih ching. Book of songs; tr. from the Chinese by Arthur Waley. Houghton 1937 358p $3 Contains translations of 290 early Chinese songs, most of them of the period 800-600 B.C. The collection is known as the Shih ching, or song word scripture

Shih ching. Classics of Confucius: Book of odes (Shi-king); tr. by L. Cranmer-Byng. Dutton 1909 56p (Wisdom of the East ser.) o.p. 1939

1 Chinese poetry—Collections 22-3648

"A collection of poems from the Chinese, translated into English by Mrs Ayscough whose version was painstakingly rendered into free verse by Miss Amy Lowell." Pratt quarterly

It is claimed by some Chinese scholars that Amy Lowell, like Cranmer-Byng, has written such free English versions that they are more her own than they are Chinese. What the poems may have lost in their oriental quality, however, they have gained in appeal to the average reader. Miss Ayscough has appended valuable notes explaining the allusions in the poems

Buck, Mrs Pearl (Sydenstricker) 1892-

"Lecture given before the Swedish Academy at Stockholm when the author received the Nobel prize. It was repeated as the Phi Beta Kappa address before the author's own college, Randolph-Macon. In it she discusses the Chinese novel, which belongs to the people entirely, and has grown out of their life." Book rev. digest

"Not only because this lecture throws light on a lively and delightful literature, but because it also strengthens the reader's respect and liking for Pearl Buck and the tradition on which she has drawn for her several successful books, this brief essay is well worth reading." Boston Transcript

Ch'u, Ta-kao

(tr.) Chinese lyrics; with a preface by Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. Macmillan 1937 55p $2 895.1

1 Chinese poetry—Collections [38-2934]

"The lyrics . . . are practically all of the Sung period (tenth-thirteenth centuries). The poetry of this period has been hitherto comparatively neglected by translators as being more academic than inspired. Some of the authors here represented, such as Ou-yang Hsiu and Sung Ch'i, were eminent as men of letters rather than specifically as poets. . . We agree with Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch in enjoying the cadences which the translator has found for his English versions. It is quite remarkable that a Chinese should be able to render these poems not only in perfect English idiom but with such sensibility to the musical value of English words." Times (London) lit. sup.

History of Chinese literature. Appleton-Century 1901 448p (Short histories of the literatures of the world) $2.50 895.1

1 Chinese literature—History and criticism 1-29917

This, the first history of Chinese literature in any language, still has the unqualified approval of Chinese scholars. It can only serve as an introduction to a literature which has flourished since six or more centuries before the Christian era, but as an introduction it is more than adequate. A large part of the book is devoted to translations made by the author, and remarks by native critics, so that the reader may form some idea of the Chinese point of view. The translations include many poems, extracts from prose works, and synopses of dramas

1 Chinese poetry—Collections 19-8167

Introductory material includes a comparison of Chinese and occidental poetry, a discussion of Chinese versification and a brief history of Chinese poetry. The anthology omits Li Po, Tu Fu and the odes collected by Confucius, and devotes a great deal of space to Po Chü-i

Wang Pao-ch'uan
Lady Precious Stream; an old Chinese play done into English according to its traditional style, by S. I. Hsiung; with a preface by Lascelles Abercrombie. Liveright 1935 xx,168p illus $2 895.1

36-27104

"This English version of an ancient Chinese popular play, is the work of a young Chinese writer and teacher of English, who has also had a theatrical career. In its English form the play follows many of the Chinese conventions, including the lack of scenery and the omnipresent property men 'the greatest obstacle to realism.'" Book rev. digest

"It is an entrancing play with its romantic atmosphere, its naive simplicity and quaintness and the revealing glimpses it affords into Chinese mentality." Saturday rev.

"This book is an anthology rather than a history, a fact for which the reader may well be grateful. Mr Lombard includes seven No plays, five farces, one puppet-play, and one 'popular' play (kabuki). Nearly a hundred pages are devoted to the early dance-songs. It is, therefore, inevitable that not much room is left for a connected account of the Japanese stage. "The poems here translated are from the Manyo Shu anthology (Ten-thousand leaves collection) compiled by Otomo no Yakamochi, who died in 785, and are considered as the beginnings of Japanese poetry as an art. 'The translations in this book,' says Mr Waley, 'are chiefly intended to facilitate the study of the Japanese text; for Japanese poetry can only be rightly enjoyed in the original.' The original texts of the poems accompany the translations, and notes on grammar are given to facilitate the student who wishes to master the originals." Boston Transcript

Introduction to the history of civilization in England. new and rev ed with annotations and an introduction by J. M. Robertson Dutton 1904 xlviii,915p $4.25 901

1 Civilization—History 5-15107

Appleton-Century publishes an edition at $5 under the title: History of civilization in England

"A reprint of Buckle's work, with a new index. The two volumes in which it originally appeared (1857-61) bore the title 'History of Civilization in England,' their subject-matter, however, being simply the uncompleted 'General Introduction' to the projected work so entitled." Preface

"Buckle never got further than his introduction concerning the background of civilization. He needs to be read critically, but after many years there is still no introduction to history or sociology which so sweeps the reader away by its cleverness, its readableness, and its enthusiasm." De Burgh, William George, 1866-

Legacy of the ancient world. Macmillan 1924 462p $6 901

1 Civilization—History 24-12630

"An introduction to the study of ancient civilization, for the general reader whose demand for a history of Greece, Rome, and Israel is not satisfied by elementary manuals." Pittsburgh

"Professor De Burgh has produced a book that is sound in its essentials. In general it is readable and lucid, although some sentences are too packed with facts and hence lacking in clearness. As might be expected the writer is most at home in the discussion of philosophical topics. The inclusion of a chapter on the Legacy in the Middle Age is to be commended." Amer. hist. rev.

Story of human progress; an introduction to social studies. Macmillan 1925 548p illus maps (Textbooks in the social studies) $1.60 901

1 Civilization 25-4979

A textbook which, although intended for the high school student will be useful in a general collection. Its purpose is to give the background and present state of our economic, social and political life. This it does by considering man under five heads: Man in early groups or societies; Man, the harnesser of nature: Multiplication of man's powers; Man, the communicator; Man, the teamworker and cooperator; Man, the idealist and aspirer.

* Revolt of the masses; authorised tr. from the Spanish. Norton 1932 204p $2.75 901

1 Civilization 2 Europe — Civilization 3 Proletariat 32-26885

This famous Spanish intellectual sees the control of government by the masses as a menace to civilization, drowning out the voice of the cultured few who are a country's "saving grace"

"This particular analysis of the modern world's predicament is complex, brilliant, original, and anything but easy to follow. It will probably be attacked from all sides, and especially from the Marxist camp. . . . The Revolt of the Masses is an extraordinarily stimulating book, even if one completely disagrees with its thesis." Forum

Decline of the West. . . Knopf 2v in 1 $5 901

1 Civilization—History A32-2548

First published 1926-28. Translated from the German by C. F. Atkinson

Volume one, "Form and actuality;" "presents a philosophy of history and applies it to past civilizations and especially to the present civilization of western Europe and America, which, the author holds, has already reached its full expression and must therefore fall into decay." Pittsburgh

"Spengler's second volume, 'Perspectives of world-history,' brings to a conclusion his massive work on the philosophy of history. The principles defined in his first volume are here applied to the various aspects of social activity—the development of cities, races, and tongues, the state, politics, money and the machine." Introduction

Langsam, Walter Consuelo, 1906-
* World since 1914. 4th ed Macmillan 1940 1024p illus maps $5, college ed $3.75 909.82

1 European war, 1914-1918 2 History, Modern—20th century 3 International law and relations 4 World politics (W) 40-5174

"The chief innovation of this edition is the inclusion of a Part IV, entitled 'The Road to Another War.' This part covers the major European and Asiatic developments since 1935 and carries the story of international relations down to the outbreak of the new European war in September 1939." Foreword to the fourth edition
"The author's careful objectivity has been criticized as having resulted in a colorless narrative, but the book is readable, up-to-date, and not too burdened with detail." Bkl.
Bibliography: p913-84

Low, David, 1891-
Cartoon history of our times; with an introduction and text by Quincy Howe. Simon & Schuster 1939 171p illus $2 909.82

1 Caricatures and cartoons 2 History, Modern—20th century (W) 39-18997

Almost a hundred full-page cartoons, with brief historical comment, picturing the progress of world affairs from 1932 to 1938. The cartoons are arranged under the headings: disarmament; collective security; the Far East; Spain; the Axis; the British empire
"Quincy Howe's commentary is straightforward and factual. He allows the cartoons to express themselves, while he discreetly fills in with only the most necessary background." Living age

Simonds, Frank Herbert, 1878-1936, and Emeny, Brooks, 1901-
Great powers in world politics; international relations and economic nationalism. new ed Am. bk. 1939 731, cxlix p illus maps $4 909.82

1 Economic conditions 2 History, Modern—20th century 3 International law and relations 4 Nationalism and nationality 5 World politics 39-23665

"The volume, revised by Professor Emeny has eighty pages more of text than its predecessor [published 1937] is completely rewritten in some parts, and covers the internal history and international relations of the major states of Europe down to August 1, 1937. There are also ten new maps in Dr Emeny's own clear style and ten more documents in the appendices—including the text of the recent German-Japanese Anti-Communist pact. The bibliography has been brought up to date and greatly extended." Social education

Toynbee, Arnold Joseph, 1889-
World after the Peace conference. . . Oxford 1925 91p map $1.75 909.82

1 European war, 1914-1918—Influence and results 2 World politics [25-19520]

"Professor Toynbee shows how economic and political forces—notably Industrialism and Nationality—had mapped the world before the War, and how those forces were remapping it again six years later. His comparisons of the old age and the new, his scanning of the political horizon, are in the great tradition." New statesman
"No summary can do justice to a penetrating analysis almost every sentence of which gives food for thought." Amer. hist. rev.

Wells, Herbert George, 1866-
Shape of things to come. Macmillan 1933 431p $2.50 909.82

1History, Modern—20th century 2 Prophecies 33-23044

"Another of H. G. Wells's prophetic and imaginative books. In this he looks one hundred and fifty years into the future and tells us what sort of civilization will be found then and what is more exciting what will be thought of us and our civilization." Cincinnati

Young, Eugene Jared, 1874-
Looking behind the censorships. Lippincott 1938 368p $3 909.82

1 Censorship 2 Liberty of the press 3 Press 4 World politics (W) 38-27312

"The author, cable editor of the New York Times, interprets the real news of the world capitals which correspondents are not allowed to send out because of censorship. He explains British foreign policy, the policies of Hitler and Mussolini, the undercover policies of the Far East and European war scares." Book rev. digest

"An English parson retold the tales of famous travelers, Sinbad the Sailor, Ulysses, Marco Polo, Baron Munchausen, and others, with chapters on the strange beasts, strange birds and fishes and plants observed by these early travelers. Attractively issued in this modern edition." Wis. bul.

Anthony, Irvin, 1890-
* (ed.) Saga of the Bounty; its strange history as related by the participants themselves. Putnam 1935 358p illus $3.50
910

1 Bounty (Ship) 35-17508

This volume contains the original diaries, letters, accounts and testimony of Bligh, Fryer, Christian, Morrison, Heywood, and Alexander Smith, participants in the mutiny on the Bounty, and a report of the trial which followed their return to England

"It is an amazing tale, and one that gains in dramatic power when thus succinctly put together. Not only those who have read the [Hall and Nordhoff] trilogy, but those who have not, will, if they revel in a major tale of the sea, reach avidly for Irvin Anthony's 'Saga.'" N.Y. Times

Baarslag, Karl
Islands of adventure. Farrar 1940 338p illus maps $3 910

1 Islands 2 Voyages and travels (W) 40-9820

"This book about islands, familiar and, for the most part, unfamiliar, is history, archaeology, exploration, legend, and personal experiences all in one. . . Easter Island, the dark island of the Pacific, Cocos, a mythical treasure island, Fort Jefferson. . . Tahiti in the South Seas, the Bahamas, Galapagos. . . Juan Fernandez of Robinson Crusoe fame, Pitcairn, these are but a few of the islands which connote both mystery and adventure." Kirkus

Baker, John Norman Leonard
History of geographical discovery and exploration. Houghton 1931 543p maps $4 910

1 Discoveries (in geography) 32-8894

"A lecturer in geography in the University of Oxford tells in this valuable reference volume 'of the evolution of the map of the world from its simplest and most elementary beginnings in antiquity to the highly specialized form which is known today.' Selected bibliography, references to books in footnotes. 50 sketch maps, index." N.Y. libraries

Baldwin, Hanson Weightman, 1903-
* Admiral Death; twelve adventures of men against the sea. Simon & Schuster 1939 277p illus $2.50 910

1 Disasters 2 Heroes 3 Seamen 4 Shipwrecks (W) 39-27066

Contents: R.M.S. Titanic; Revolt at Kiel; Five against the sea; Torpedoing of the Lusitania; Herndon of the Central America; Endurance; Admiral death; "Sauve qui peut" the horrible wreck of the frigate Medusa; Number 6; Death of an admiral; "Remember always to dare"; Mutiny on the brig Somers

"An unvarnished report by a man who knows what he is talking about well enough to give accounts of twelve disasters that might be by eye-witnesses. . . The book is such a model of clear objective reporting that it is almost impossible to offer any other comment than that there are here twelve stories well told and united by a central theme." Sat. rev. of lit.

Bligh, William, 1754-1817

Bligh and the Bounty; his narrative of the voyage to Otaheite, with an account of the mutiny and of his boat journey to Timor. Dutton 1936 xxix,283p illus $2.50 910

1 Bounty (Ship) 2 Oceanica—Description and travel 3 Voyages and travels 36-34817

"Bligh's own story of his Pacific voyage and of the mutiny of his crew. It was first published in 1792 and is reissued with a preface which attempts to correct the impression, given by other books, that Bligh was a cruel tyrant." Bkl.

(ed.) Told at the Explorers club; true tales of modern exploration. Boni 1931 425p illus $3.50 910

1 Adventure and adventurers 2 Explorers 31-33009

"Each of the 33 contributing explorers has written a first-hand account of one of his own adventures. The narratives, giving 'a cross-sectional picture of modern exploration,' are, for the most part, brief and exciting. Among the writers are Roy Chapman Andrews, Charles A. Lindbergh, Stefansson and Sir Hubert Wilkins. Photographs." N.Y. libraries

Bowman, Isaiah, 1878-

The new world; problems in political geography. 4th ed. . . World bk. 1928 803p illus maps $5 910

1 Boundaries 2 European war, 1914-1918—Territorial questions 3 World politics 28-29099

A very full discussion, with many maps, of the geographical problems and political changes growing out of the World war. The author acted as chief territorial specialist of the American commission to negotiate peace

The author states in the preface to the fourth edition that he has undertaken complete revision of this work to conform with the events of the period since 1921. As a guide in following many questions of general application, the regional chapters are preceded by a preliminary essay on mandates and colonies, minorities, boundaries, disarmament, and international relations. Includes annotated bibliographies for separate countries, a list of treaties mentioned in the text and 257 maps

Brassey, Annie (Allnutt) baroness, 1839-1887

Buchan, John, 1st baron Tweedsmuir, 1875-1940

Book of escapes and hurried journeys. . . Houghton 1923 304p illus $2.50 910

1 Escapes A23-949

"True stories ranging in time from the escape of King Charles after Worcester, in 1651, to the 4000-mile air flight of Lieutenants Parer and McIntosh in 1920; and in variety, from the ride of the obscure Dick King in South Africa, which involved the fate of the little colony of Natal, to the flight of Marie Antoinette to Varennes." Book rev. digest

"There is romance in it and humor, too. There is skilled writing in it, which gives the reader the sensation of perilously close calls and breathless moments." International book review

Last secrets; the final mysteries of exploration. Houghton 1924 303p illus $2.50 910

1 Discoveries (in geography) 2 Explorers 26-6360

Also available in a cheaper edition (Nelson 75c)

"A book that will interest all adventure loving young people and many older ones. By 'last secrets,' Mr Buchan means the until recently unexplored places of the earth: Lhasa; the gorges of the Brahmaputra; the North Pole; the mountains of the moon; the South Pole; Mount McKinley; the holy cities of Islam; New Guinea; Mount Everest. The book is an account of the heroic experiences of the men who sought to discover and penetrate these wildernesses. There is much geographical information in these pages." Book rev. digest

Clements, Rex, 1885-

Gipsy of the Horn . . . with a foreword by Basil Lubbock. Houghton 1925 259p illus maps o.p. 1939 910

1 Arethusa (Barque) 2 Seamen 3 Voyages and travels 26-6158

"The narrative of a voyage around the world in a windjammer. It is not difficult to follow this voyage of twenty years ago, made on the small barque 'Arethusa' sailing one January afternoon out of London into all the adventure and romance of the seas. There are word pictures on every page—battling sharks, precipitous seas, sunrise in the tropics, terror by night." Book rev. digest

"Not only those who enjoy a stirring tale of adventure will welcome the book; for besides that it is a valuable account of a life that is rapidly passing away told in its proper speech by one who has lived it, and who feels kinship with his forerunners in it." Times (London) lit sup.

Connolly, James Brendan, 1868-

Book of the Gloucester fishermen; illus. by Henry O'Connor. (new ed rev and enl) Day 1930 303p illus $2.50 910

Buccaneers of America . . . written originally in Dutch . . . ed. by W. S. Stallybrass; to which is prefixed an introductory essay by Andrew Lang. Dutton 1924 480p illus maps (Broadway translations) $3.50 910

1 Buccaneers 2 Pirates 3 Spanish Main 4 West Indies—History 25-3228

"A true account of the most remarkable assaults committed of late years upon the coast of the West Indies by the buccaneers of Jamaica and Tortuga, both English and French, wherein are contained more especially the unparalleled exploits of Sir Henry Morgan, our English Jamaican hero, who sacked Porto Bello, burnt Panama, etc." Subtitle

"Master John Esquemeling, buccaneer, (1645-1707), was a downright kind of man, and there is a dry insolence in the record that he made. He flings facts in your face with a take-it-or-leave-it air, and it is to his glory that he possesses the subtle qualities of unity and vigor of narration. Nor, spite of all the blood and the death and the pillage, shall you go unpaid for the reading of his tale, seeing that there stands, well revealed, the splendor of courage and of endurance." C. J. Finger in Nation

Fahnestock, Mrs Mary Sheridan
I ran away to sea at fifty. Harcourt 1939 237p illus $2.50 910

1 Voyages and travels (W) 39-27183

"This is the log of a woman, no longer young, going down one gangplank and up another around the world. She spent the first year with her two young sons on their sixty-five foot schooner 'Director,' cruising the South Seas. The other months take her from country to country." Introduction

"Through all her travels, the author retained her zest for seeing things and meeting people, and this spirit she has succeeded in putting in her book. For armchair travelers as well as for those who have visited these same places or hope to visit them, the book should have lively appeal." Springfield Republican

Gerbault, Alain
In quest of the sun; the journal of the "Firecrest." Hodder 1929 315p illus maps 5s 910

1 Firecrest (Yacht) 2 Voyages around the world 30-14350

Formerly carried also by Doubleday

"A young Frenchman who sailed around the world alone in a small boat, describes his trip. From Le Havre to New York, south through the Panama Canal, across the Pacific, into the Indian Ocean, around the Cape of Good Hope, and back to France made a trip of forty thousand miles, sailed in seven hundred days." Cleveland

"M. Gerbault's narrative is fascinating. Seamen would have appreciated much more nautical detail. . . As it is, there is enough about the technique to prevent the expert reader from actually complaining." Spectator

Gosse, Philip, 1879-
History of piracy. Longmans 1932 349p illus maps $3.50 910

1 Pirates 32-31151

"What [this book attempts] to do is to show what conditions, geographical and social, preceded the rise of piracy, to trace its periodical rises and declines, its forms and fortunes, to depict the more outstanding members of the profession and finally to show how national organisation, backed by the steamship and the telegraph, brought it to an end." Foreword

"The scheme demanded no little scholarly investigation and this the author has evidently given it. . . No lover of pirate literature can afford to miss Mr. Gosse's book for the sake both of its extensive and interestingly told information and its multitude of stories of pirates and their deeds. [Bibliography]." N.Y. Times

Hakluyt, Richard, 1552-1616

Published in the "Atlantic monthly" with the title "From Med to Mum." Published in England with title "Shipwreck." It is one of the series relating to the mutiny aboard the Bounty

Hall, James N.—Continued

"This is the story of the voyage, told in the simple narrative form that Hall has made his own. . . The shipwreck itself, in which Hall came near losing his life, offers a well-nigh perfect piece of nautical narration." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Halliburton, Richard, 1900-

Flying carpet. Bobbs 1932 352p illus $3.75 910

1 Aeronautics—Flights 2 Voyages around the world 32-33376

Also obtainable from Garden City pub. co. in the Star series at $1

"Characteristically, having bought an airplane, and engaged a pilot, Halliburton decided his goal should first be Timbuctoo, 'fabulously far away,' shrouded in mystery. Adventures with the French Foreign Legion, an absurd attempt to swim the Grand Canal in Venice, a voluntary stay in a Persian prison, a visit to the head-hunters of Borneo, these are but few of the episodes zestfully sought and as gaily related. Photographs." N.Y. libraries

Glorious adventure. Garden City pub. co. 354p illus map (Star ser.) $1 910

1 Mediterranean sea—Description and travel [27-13145]

Reprint of a book published by Bobbs in 1927

"Tells with great gusto his adventures in following the trail of Ulysses, with Homer as his guide. In the course of his Odyssey he climbed Olympus, visited the Delphic oracle, swam the Hellespont, ran from Marathon to Athens, and had many adventures of his own, amusing if not Homeric. One chapter written in more serious vein, describes his pilgrimage to Skyros, to the tomb of Rupert Brooke." Pittsburgh

"A curious combination of what the author, as an American, would call mighty pretty fooling, of a deep and a genuine love for poetry, a fine feeling for human achievement, and the delicatest touch in depicting natural beauty." Spectator

* Royal road to romance. Garden City pub. co. 399p illus (Star ser.) $1 910

1 Voyages and travels [25-21282]

Reprint of a book published 1925 by Bobbs

"Adventures of a dauntless, poetic youth, vagabonding around the world, wherever the lure of mystery, splendor, or sheer recklessness beckoned. Captivating indeed are these gay records of his impressions of Carcassone and the Vale of Kashmir, of his winter conquest of Fuji-Yama, and his moonlight tryst with the Taj Mahal. Excellent photographs." N.Y. state lib.

Seven league boots. Bobbs 1935 417p illus $3.50 910

1 Voyages and travels 35-30086

Also available in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"Purports to be the outcome of a blanket commission to go anywhere he liked and write about it as he pleased. His first stop on the journey was Fort Jefferson, a little-known American fortress in the Gulf of Mexico. From that point he went forth to San Salvador and Santo Domingo; he visited Soviet Russia and interviewed a man who claimed to have been one of the Czar's murderers; he spent a week as a monk in the monastery on Mount Athos; and he visited Ethiopia and dined with Haile Selassie. His final exploit was to cross the Alps on an elephant borrowed from the Paris zoo." Book rev. digest

First published in 1899

In addition to letters descriptive of travel in India, Burma, Japan and the United States, it contains the "Letters of marque," "City of dreadful night," "Among the railway folk," and "Giridih coal-fields"

"Although hasty notes intended for newspaper publication only, these sketches are entertaining, showing as they do the author's eye for color, feeling for character, freshness of view, as well as a certain youthful smartness." Viewpoints in travel

Letters of travel, 1892-1913. Doubleday 1920 302p $2.50 910

1 Voyages and travels 20-9990

"In this volume are brought together sketches of travel written between 1892 and 1913. They follow the letters written between 1887 and 1889 published in 'From sea to sea.' The new volume is composed of three sections. The first, 'From tideway to tideway,' opens with a New England sketch, 'In sight of Monadnock,' and contains other papers written in the United States, in Canada and the East. 'Letters to the family,' dated 1907, is a series of letters from Canada. 'Egypt of the magicians,' the third section, is a series of seven sketches written in 1913." Book rev. digest

"What is not a little curious is that the letters of 1892 are as brisk and as brilliant, as firmly planned and as effectively phrased as the letters of 1913, written more than a score of years later. In all these letters there is the same keen appreciation of nature and the same contagious interest in human nature." Brander Matthews in N.Y. Times

"The story of a survey flight around the North Atlantic Ocean in 1933. It is a true and accurate account of various incidents which occurred in flying from Africa to South America. The purpose of the flight was to study the air routes between America and Europe." Foreword
"Mrs. Lindbergh writes well. There are scenes in 'Listen! the Wind' which, for closeness to the quick of character and experience, are worthy of a first-rate novelist. Mrs. Lindbergh's books, quite apart from their value as aeronautical history, are small works of art." New Yorker

"There is some element of mystery in every one of the dozen episodes or disasters at sea that Mr Lockhart describes. The stories . . . are taken from both history and myth . . . For each one of these sea mysteries Mr Lockhart examines the various explanations already offered and gives his own solution." Book rev. digest
"The 'Lost Ships of La Perouse' spell enchantment, as their name implies. So do the two chapters on the sea monster and on the great sea-serpent, which appeared off the west coast of Scotland in 1908, and chased ashore a party in a small boat. The book also contains delightful old maps and etchings. Sea lovers will find thrills herein." Boston Transcript

* Vagabond voyaging; the story of freighter travel. Little 1938 314p illus $2.25 910
1 Ocean travel 2 Voyages around the world (W) 38-17462
The author wrote a magazine article on tramp steamers and their present vogue. His fan mail and other evidences of interest inspired by the article was so great that he decided to write a book on voyaging by tramp steamers and freighters. Contains details on costs, food, the people you meet, officers, clothes, and some material on what to expect in various ports. Lists of freighter tours classified by routes, time of vacation, cost, and a list of freighter trips
The author "depicts with distinctive personality the story of freighter travel in a manner to compel old and young, rich and poor, to wish to emulate the seven-sea experiences he relates." Commonweal

"Chapters on navigators, privateers, merchant shipping, and shipwrecks make this an entertaining book. There is also a chapter on The literary Pacific, embracing such writers as Melville, Stevenson, Pierre Loti and Jack London. Charmingly illustrated." Wis. bul.

"Mr. Rogers knows the ships, the sailors, the ports and islands of the Pacific at first hand, and he has read much in its history and literature. He gives us the results in a pleasantly desultory and sauntering fashion which makes excellent reading for a leisure hour. After Mr. Rogers's admirable custom, he has illustrated the volume copiously with his own spirited drawings, which are not a mere adornment of the book, but an integral part of it." "Van Loon's Geography, like his well-known Story of Mankind, was written for children, but in a way that grown-ups may learn a good deal from it. The simplicity of Mr. Van Loon's language is perhaps overdone, but unquestionably he has genuine humor, and for the sake of his real insight and sound knowledge one is inclined to overlook some of his artificiality. . . He can sum up in two or three pages not only the physical features but the entire history of a country. And his drawings, of which there are one hundred and fifty, are really amusing. From dry and unimaginative maps and charts he has made a gallery of pictures, surprising in their immense variety and—emotional quality." Boston

"This book must be described as belonging to the highest class of marine literature. It will, in my opinion, take its place near Dana's 'Two years Before the Mast.' By a lucky chance the author is not only an able seaman but an able writer. The combination is important because it is comparatively rare . . . Mr. Villiers' style is lean and sinewy. 912 Atlases

Altho none of the atlases listed below are strictly up to date in accordance with changed political boundaries, they are still useful in locating places and distances

Two publications which are noted for the benefit of larger libraries or other libraries needing such material are:

Hammond, C. S., and company. New world loose leaf atlas. The company $49.50 This atlas was first published 1920. "Containing new and complete historical, economic, political and physical maps of the entire world, including the new states of Europe." Kept up to date by new revised maps distributed from time to time. The yearly service for this is now $5 after the first two installments which are furnished free as a part of the atlas purchase. Good index

Thiele, Walter. Official map publications; under the direction of A. F. Kuhlman. A.L.A. 1938 356p $4.75 The subtitle describes it as "a historical sketch, and a bibliographical handbook of current maps and mapping services in the United States, Canada, Latin America, France, Great Britain, Germany, and certain other countries." * Goode's school atlas; physical, political, and economic for American schools and colleges. rev and enl ed Rand McNally 1939 286p maps $4.40 912

1 Atlases

Changes in the 1939 edition consist chiefly in the addition of tables of world comparisons of islands, lakes, mountains and rivers and of a page listing principal countries of the world with area in square miles and population figures. The index has been slightly enlarged

"Conveys information, both actual and comparative, about a multitude of things we are all interested in—surface, climate, vegetation, soils, economic resources, trade, means of communication, races, languages and religions. The author, himself a teacher of ripe experience, has seen to it that the symbols by which these maps express their meaning are made clear. In an admirable foreword he explains the use of color, the choice of projections, and the various scales used. A great virtue of these maps is their clearness. Detail has been subordinated to legibility." Literary rev.

Primitive hearths in the Pyrenees; the story of a summer's exploration in the haunts of prehistoric man; with illus. by Paul Vaillant-Couturier. Appleton-Century 1927 306p illus $3 913.44

1 Man, Prehistoric 2 Pyrenees—Antiquities 27-15193

"The authors, two young women, spent an adventurous summer in the Pyrenees hunting for remains of the Old Stone Age. The story of their work and play is told in a sprightly style. There are over a hundred pen-and-ink drawings of the countryside and of the objects which the caves gave up." Boston

"An extraordinarily interesting and vivid picture of the men who laid the keel of civilization, described by trained and competent observers simply and charmingly and without nonsense or fanciful speculation." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

1 America—Antiquities 2 Ethnology—America 3 Indians 37-30353

"Survey of life in prehistoric North and South America, written for the layman. Gives special attention to the early art work of the North American Indians, Mayas, Aztecs, Peruvians and Incas." Book rev. digest

"A distinctly readable book that may well serve as an introduction to the comparatively young science of American archaeology for the layman. The story is told in untechnical language; material that would not interest the general reader is relegated to the appendices, and the final expansion of the subject is left to the brief bibliography." Boston Transcript

1 America—Antiquities 2 Civilization, American 3 Man, Prehistoric—America 31-32123

"A fascinating account of the ancient civilizations of America. That American culture at the time of the coming of the Spaniards was equal and in many respects superior to that of Europe and Asia, that 'new world' was a misnomer, and that the Americas may have been the original home of man, are some of the new viewpoints suggested. Well illustrated and should find readers." Wis. bul.

"Miss Fish invites her readers to travel, and offers them preparation for the utmost pleasure in traveling; and although this preparation is of equipment, of practical knowledge, of plan, it is particularly of the mind and spirit, too. In other words, [the book] really covers the ground of what travelers need to know, as they set out for a foreign country, in order to get the most out of their experience." N.Y. Times

1 Europe—Description & travel 2 Public opinion—Europe 34-28473

"Being the narrative of a journey in France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, Hungary, Germany, and the Saar, in the spring and summer of 1934. With an authentic record of the ideas, hopes, and fears moving in the minds of common folk and expressed in wayside conversations." Subtitle
"Perhaps the genuine effectiveness of Sir Philip's book lies not so much in the steady, calm pumping of sources from which information can be drawn as in an oddly sympathetic blend of sentimentalism and common sense. . . In short, this is a remarkably frank summary of the existing European average." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Continent of Europe. 4th ed Macmillan 1930 456p illus maps $4 914

1 Europe—Description and travel 2 Geography [25-26341]

First edition 1913. Revised in 1924 to agree with political changes at that period. The colored maps in the first edition were omitted. A few corrections and new statistics are the only changes in the 1930 edition

A work that is at once descriptive, statistical, geographical, social and political. The author "takes the natural regions of Europe, one after the other, working his way from the circumference inward, and emphasizes with considerable detail the interdependence of the groups of the control and of the political factors. Although he begins as far back as the theory of the tetrahedral deformation of the earth, he succeeds in presenting the development of both physical and political conditions with extraordinary vividness." Tourist in spite of himself; with illus. by Gluyas Williams. Little 1930 252p illus $3.50 914

1 Europe—Description and travel 30-29130

"Piquant travel essays by the Philadelphia book collector, who 'cheerfully perambulated' through England, Belgium, France, Germany, Scandinavia, Egypt and Palestine at his wife's behest. Experiences and opinions, anecdotes having little or no connection with the scene at hand, a few guide book facts, and a frank discussion of standardized America, make up a wholly personal book which the reader will enjoy, even when he disagrees with some of Mr. Newton's pronouncements. Amusingly illustrated by Gluyas Williams." Cleveland

"Let no man say that the old standard edition of Boswell's 'Journal' is an insipid or mediocre book. It isn't. But the present editicn, based on the manuscript in the Isham collection, is really a much better one. The number of delightful indiscretions is endless; and the amount of Boswellian reflection which has suddenly turned up is a proper theme for grace. Although an excellent work, this gazetteer will probably not be needed by all small libraries

914.2 Series

The following series, which contain some very good material, are kept together here as this is a convenient arrangement for making available the information about them. It is probable that none but large libraries will need all volumes in the series. Smaller libraries can select from each series those which will best supplement their own collections and meet the local needs

County series. Lane 1922-35 12v illus 8s 6d ea 914.2 Series

"Taking up each of Dickens's novels separately, [the author] gives an account of its topographical setting and of those places to which, as haunts of his characters, Dickens has given a human interest even for those who have never seen them. Criticism of the novels is combined with definitions of the scenes and typical illustrations have been selected." Book rev. digest

"Little as Dickens may have loved it, the actual London of his time, a time of transition, is extraordinarily interesting, and Mr. Chancellor's survey of it is very welcome, for it has been skilfully carried out and his account of it is attractively written." New statesman

Formerly carried also by Doran

"Concerns itself entirely with the topography of Thackeray's novels, and does not describe the novelist's own haunts. . . Mr. Chancellor's method is to take each novel and, setting aside the parts that fall outside the range of the metropolis—and they are really surprisingly few— to trace the topography as the story develops. Where it has been necessary he has indicated the course of the story, and in not a few places he has enriched his text with some particularly well-chosen extracts from Thackeray himself. Mr. Chancellor spares no pains to try and find originals for all the more important thoroughfares and buildings that Thackeray mentions." Spectator

1 Germany 2 Germany—Civilization 3 National characteristics, German
31-7944

"Dr Diesel's book is an attempt to lay hold upon the peculiar quality of the German nation which results from the interplay of land, people and individual. After the opening chapters on the physical geography of Germany and its effects upon the people, the author discusses the various races of which the German people are made up, German mentality, art, education and religion and the growth of a new order and spirit in Germany." Book rev. digest

"Dr. Diesel's study of his country and his countrymen is as candid as it is thorough; rarely, indeed, is such objectivity as he displays found in a book of this nature. It is the great merit of the book that it makes the diversity of German mentality illumine conditions in Germany both during the war and the post-war period, and explains the attitude of foreigners towards Germany, and the German attitude towards other nations."
